RICHARD YATES
War Governor of Illinois

GENERAL ULYSSES S. GRANT.

GOVERNOR RICHARD YATES.

GOVERNOR CHARLES S. DENEEN.

*To His Excellency,
Charles S. Deneen,
Governor of Illinois:*

The regimental monuments and markers, and the State monument, or Memorial Temple, erected in the Vicksburg National Military Park, by the authority of the State of Illinois, under the direction of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, have been completed and accepted. They were dedicated, on the Twenty-sixth day of October, A. D. 1906, to commemorate the services of Illinois Volunteers in that campaign and siege, and to patriotism and peace, with appropriate ceremonies, in the presence of a great concourse of citizens from Illinois, Mississippi and Louisiana, and transferred by your Excellency to the keeping and care of the National Government.

Permit us now to make this volume our fourth and final report.

We dedicate it to the memory of all our Comrades, fallen and surviving, who participated in that memorable campaign and siege, or who elsewhere rendered patriotic services to the Republic in the great struggle for its unity; and also to the patriotic citizens of Illinois, of this generation, who so generously and abundantly furnished the means to execute this enterprise, and whose sincere sympathy and support have encouraged us in our labors at all times.

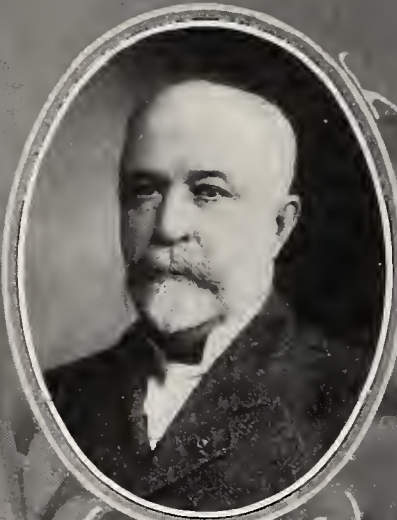

We trust that this volume, in the libraries and homes of Illinois, will become a valued souvenir and memorial of the devotion to our country of the sons of this great State who went forth to battle for the Union in the days from 1861 to 1865, and also of the patriotic love and liberality shown by this later generation of the sons of Illinois by whose authority and in whose name this work has been accomplished.

ILLINOIS AT VICKSBURG

SKETCH OF THE CAMPAIGN AND SIEGE

THIS campaign and siege was undoubtedly General Grant's greatest achievement. It embraces his adoption of entirely new methods in strategy, and the discarding of old maxims of war. It displayed his strength of initiative and his reliance upon the responsiveness of his army. It constitutes one of the strongest pictures in the galleries of war history, and has placed the name of Vicksburg in the foremost rank of campaigns and sieges for the future student of the problems of war.

Perhaps no single event in the great struggle of the Civil War was fraught with greater importance. It destroyed a Confederate army of forty thousand men. The immense loss of munitions of war crippled the resources of the Confederacy. Its permanent effect was the securing of the undisturbed use, thenceforward, of the Mississippi River from Minnesota to the Gulf; the permanent severance of the Confederacy; its deprivation of the products of the Trans-Mississippi country, and the stopping of foreign supplies for the South-eastern States coming in by way of Mexico and Texas.

Coming together with General Lee's repulse at Gettysburg, it revived hope for ultimate success in the North, and in the same ratio disheartened the faithful adherents in those of the South who saw salvation only in a severed country. Its moral weight was not insignificant with other nations.

The possession of Vicksburg was recognized as essential to the Union cause very early in the war. Its location was of paramount strategic, political and commercial importance. General Grant described its position in these words:

"Vicksburg is on the first high land coming to the river's edge below that on which Memphis stands. The bluff or high land follows the left bank of the Yazoo for some distance and continues in a southerly direction to the Mississippi River and then runs along the Mississippi to Warrenton, six miles below. The Yazoo leaves the highlands a short distance below Haines' Bluff and enters into the Mississippi nine miles from Vicksburg."

"Vicksburg is built on this high land where the Mississippi washes the base of the hill. Haines' Bluff, eleven miles from Vicksburg on the Yazoo, was strongly fortified. The whole distance from there to Vicksburg, and thence to Warrenton, which was also entrenched, was protected with batteries at suitable distances and rifle pits connecting them." *

*In 1876 the Mississippi River formed a new channel, and since then has touched a new shore, two miles below Vicksburg. The Yazoo River has been deflected by the United States government through the former channel of the Mississippi that passed the City of Vicksburg, and thus the city is now located on the Yazoo River instead, as formerly, on the Mississippi.

In August, 1862, General John A. McClernand, of Illinois, who had been a member of Congress, and one of the foremost of Illinois politicians in the Democratic party, wrote President Lincoln the following letter with reference to the importance of and need for the possession of Vicksburg, and later obtained from the President the authority and command of a special army for the purpose of capturing the city:

"How the rebellion may be most speedily and effectually put down involves an inquiry as to the methods best adapted to that end. Originating, as it did, in the Cotton States, and believing that the sentiment which still sustains it more inveterate in those States than in any others, I would carry the war into their heart, not only for the purpose of crushing the rebellion itself, but as the quickest and surest way to reopen the Mississippi River; indeed, the reopening of that river is one of the first steps I would take in subduing the rebellion. Both in a military and commercial aspect this step is eminently important. It is important in a military view, first, because it would afford the means of cheap and easy communication between our troops disposed at different points on the Mississippi River and its navigable tributaries, and because it would facilitate the concentration of them at any one or more of these points; secondly, because it would cheapen the cost of supplying our men and animals at or near New Orleans with provisions and forage. It would do that by substituting the overflowing granaries of the Northwest for the remoter sources of such supplies in the East; and, thirdly, because, in securing to us the command of the Mississippi River, it would enable us to stop the communication between the revolting states and their armies east and west of that river, thus isolating each section as to the other, destroying the unity of their plans and combinations, and cutting off the rebel forces east of the river from their wonted sources of supplies in Texas.

Commercially, the whole nation is deeply interested in the measure, and particularly so the people inhabiting the Mississippi Valley. They are painfully anxious upon the subject. They have not yet complained that the hostile obstacles, shutting them and their commerce out from New Orleans and the Gulf, and so the commerce of Europe by the same channel from that valley, and virtually turning the Mississippi into a dry bed, have not yet been removed. They have appreciated the difficulties surrounding the National Government, and, while emulating the most zealous and liberal in supporting it, have patiently waited for the auspicious period when their great interests would be liberated. Nay, they are grateful for what the Government has done, rather than complaining for what it has not done. Yet it is none the less true that the Mississippi River and its tributaries affording an inland navigation of 10,000 miles in extent, and floating an annual commerce of the value of $150,000,000 in time of peace, is now locked against all egress or ingress to or from the ocean, by a small, indeed, comparatively insignificant garrison at Vicksburg, or that the products of agriculture meantime have been accumulating in the hands of producers until they have become well-nigh worthless.

Foreseeing that the continuance of this evil must ultimate in individual bankruptcy and the enervation of the Government itself, by withholding from the people the means of supplying its wants, it is not surprising that large assemblages should be now earnestly calling upon the Government for relief—the relief which would be afforded by the reopening of the Mississippi River. Such relief would be hailed as a benefaction at home and abroad. Without it, must we not fear an ultimate reaction of feeling and opinion in the Mississippi Valley unfavorable to the success of our army and the cause which they are upholding."

This view of the importance of Vicksburg was shared by General Grant, who says in his Memoirs:

"Vicksburg was important to the enemy because it occupied the first high ground coming close to the river below Memphis. From there a railroad runs east, connecting the other roads leading to all points of the Southern States. A railroad also starts from the opposite side of the river extending west as far as Shreveport, Louisiana. Vicksburg was the only channel at the time of the events of which this chapter treats, connecting the parts of the Confederacy divided by the Mississippi. So long as it was held by the enemy the free navigation of the river was prevented. Hence its importance. Points on the river between Vicksburg and Port Hudson were held as dependencies, but their fall was sure to follow the capture of the former place."*

General Pemberton, the Confederate Commander, in a dispatch to General Joseph E. Johnston, dated May 18th, 1863, said:

"I have decided to hold Vicksburg as long as possible with a firm hope that the Government (Confederate) may yet be able to assist me in keeping this obstruction to the enemy's free navigation of the Mississippi River. I still conceive it to be the most important point in the Confederacy."

In his report of the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, made in August of 1863, General Pemberton uses this language: "The evacuation of Vicksburg!" "It meant the loss of valuable stores, munitions of war, collected for its defense; the fall of Port Hudson, the surrender of the Mississippi River and the severance of the Confederacy."

For Vicksburg National Military Park historic purposes the War Department fixed the 29th of March and the 4th day of July, 1863, as the beginning and closing dates of the Vicksburg campaign.†

General Grant, in his Memoirs, says:

"The campaign against Vicksburg commenced on the 2d of November (1862), as indicated in a dispatch to the General-in-Chief in the following words: I have commenced a movement on Grand Junction with three divisions from Corinth (Miss.) and two from Bolivar (Tenn.). Will leave here (Jackson, Tenn.) to-morrow and take command in person. If found practicable, I will go to Holly Springs, and maybe to Grenada, completing the railroad and telegraph as I go."

The territory then held by General Grant's army was along the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, from Columbus, Kentucky, south to about twenty-five miles below Corinth, Mississippi; on the Mississippi Central Railroad from its junction with the Mobile & Ohio Railroad to Bolivar, Tennessee; along the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, from Corinth east to Bear Creek; and along the Mississippi River from Cairo, Illinois, to Memphis, Tennessee. The territory on the Mississippi River from Cairo to Memphis, which was subject to General Grant's command, was entirely detached, and General Grant found it necessary in order to communicate with General Sherman, who was in command at Memphis, to go to Columbus, Kentucky, by rail, while General Sherman proceeded to the same point by steamer, for an interview, although at that time they were actually only forty-seven miles apart.

General Pemberton at that time was fortified along the Tallahatchie River and occupied Holly Springs and Grand Junction on the Mississippi Central

*This east and west railroad is now part of the Queen & Crescent System and extends from Meridian, Miss., to Shreveport, La. There was then no north and south railroad reaching Vicksburg. The Illinois Central System entered that territory many years after.

Railroad. On the 8th of November General Grant's troops occupied Grand Junction and La Grange. His cavalry reached Holly Springs on the 12th, the Confederates falling back to the Tallahatchie. General Grant then established his depot of supplies and munitions of war at Holly Springs, the depot at Columbus, Kentucky, being too far away from the contemplated field of operations. He then moved south with his army, the main body reaching Oxford, Mississippi, at which place General Sherman joined him with three divisions on the 29th of November, having marched across from Memphis.

By direction of General Halleck an expedition under Generals Hovey and C. C. Washburn crossed the Mississippi River from Helena, Arkansas. These troops at that time were not subject to General Grant's orders. Their instructions were to proceed east to destroy the Mississippi Central Railroad in General Pemberton's rear. In this they were successful; but the Confederates repaired the damage in a very short time. General Grant found the Tallahatchie River strongly fortified, the railroad bridges destroyed. Deeming a frontal attack unwise, he sent the cavalry higher up the river, where they secured a crossing. This rendered the position of General Pemberton's army unsafe on that line, and coming in conjunction with the movements of the troops from Helena, he retired, and was followed by the main Union army as far as Oxford. The troops under General McPherson proceeded some seventeen miles further south in pursuit. The army then halted to repair the railroad, build roads generally and to move up the necessary supplies.

"Up to this time it had been regarded as an axiom in war that large bodies of troops must operate from a base of supplies which they covered and guarded in forward movements. There was delay, therefore, in repairing the road back and in gathering and forwarding supplies." *

While this army was thus engaged, General Grant determined upon an expedition down the Mississippi River. On the 8th of December he directed General Sherman to proceed back to Memphis with one division of the troops then with him near Oxford. His orders were as follows:

"You will proceed with as little delay as possible to Memphis, Tennessee, and take with you one division of your present command. On your arrival at Memphis, you will assume command of all the troops there and that portion of General Curtis' force at present east of the Mississippi River (Hovey's and Washburn's commands), and organize them into brigades and divisions into your own army. As soon as possible move with them down the river to the vicinity of Vicksburg, and with the co-operation of the gunboat fleet under command of Flag Officer Porter, proceed to the reduction of that place in such a manner as circumstances, and your own judgment, may dictate. Inform me at the earliest practicable day of the time when you will embark, and of such plans as then may be matured. I will hold the force here in readiness to co-operate with you in such a manner as the movements of the enemy may make necessary." *

It was General Grant's intention not to go further south with his own army than the Yalobusha River, and thus to hold Pemberton's force as far north as possible. General Pemberton's army was the main part of the Vicksburg garrison of defense as much as General Grant's army was the protector of that portion of West Tennessee and Kentucky embraced within the Union

*General Grant's Memoirs.

Line. General Grant hoped to hold General Pemberton in front of him while Sherman should go in his rear and attack and capture Vicksburg. There was an understanding with General Sherman, in the event that Pemberton's army could not be held away from Vicksburg, General Grant was to follow him. At that time it was the intention to hold the railroad north of the Yalobusha, and in the event that it should be necessary for General Grant to move down the Yazoo to support General Sherman on the Mississippi, near Vicksburg, to establish a secondary base of supplies along the Yalobusha River. It was General Grant's design to hold the railroad as far south as Grenada on the Yalobusha River. In case of Sherman's success, Grant was to cut his army loose from its base and establish a new base on the Yazoo, or at Vicksburg itself, and retain Grenada to fall back upon in case the effort failed.

On the 20th of December, General Van Dorn of the Confederate Army, appeared at Holly Springs and captured the garrison of about 1,500 men, which were surrendered by Colonel Murphy of the 8th Wisconsin Infantry. They destroyed all the supplies, including food and munitions of war. Five Companies of the One Hundred and First and eight Companies of the Twenty-ninth Illinois Infantry were surrendered on this occasion. The Second Illinois Cavalry being of the garrison, mounted their horses, after surrender of the place, drew sabres and cut their way out under the command of Major Mudd. The Confederate General Forrest at the same time attacked Grant's line of railroad between Jackson, Tennessee, and Columbus, Kentucky, doing much damage. He captured a detachment of the 106th Illinois Infantry at Carroll Station, eight miles north of Jackson, that was doing guard duty there.

This Holly Springs affair cut off General Grant's communication with the north and interrupted intercourse with portions of his own command for over a week. Rations or forage were not again obtained from the regular sources for more than two weeks. General Grant then determined to abandon his campaign into the interior, with Columbus, Kentucky, as a base. He returned to LaGrange and Grand Junction and decided to repair the road to Memphis and supply the army by way of the Mississippi River. General Pemberton fell back at the same time on Vicksburg.

When General Grant learned of Van Dorn's raid he ordered his cavalry back to drive him from the country. Van Dorn had the start of them and of course eluded the pursuit. He moved northward destroying railroads, in many places attacking small garrisons. All of these withstood his attacks, being forewarned, although all of them together did not have as large a garrison as that of Holly Springs. General Grant says: "The surrender of Holly Springs was most reprehensible, and showed either the disloyalty of Colonel Murphy to the cause which he professed to serve, or gross cowardice." After the cavalry had been sent to take care of General Van Dorn, General Grant despatched wagons in all directions for a distance of fifteen miles to collect and bring in supplies and food, from the front below Oxford to Grand Junction, leaving two months supplies for the families from whom these stores were taken. He was amazed at the quantity of supplies the country afforded, and said it taught him a lesson which was taken advantage of later in the campaign, when the army subsisted for twenty days with the usual five days rations issued by the Commissary. While the Holly Springs loss was great, it was fully retrieved by the levies made upon the country and especially by the great lesson it had taught.

General Sherman moved his army from Memphis and Helena by transports down the river and Pemberton returned to Vicksburg before Sherman could get there. The Confederates had fortified the place along the Yazoo River front for several miles. The water was very high so that the bottom lands were generally overflowed. Sherman's movement for attack lay along Chickasaw Bayou which only here and there afforded a little ground above water. This permitted no extension of the attacking column. The Confederate position was then rendered impregnable against any force that could be brought to attack on its front; but General Sherman attacked these heretofore unknown obstacles to the contrary notwithstanding, not having learned of General Grant's changed position and that it would be impossible for the latter to communicate with or support him. He did not know that General Grant was not following up the Confederate army. In this action of Chickasaw Bayou, or Chickasaw Bluffs, Illinois had the 13th, 55th, 77th, 97th, 113th, 116th, 118th and 127th Infantry. The 3d and Thielemann's and the Kane County Cavalry, Batteries A, B and H of the 1st Artillery and the Chicago Mercantile Battery. Colonel Wyman of the 13th was killed and the regiment lost in all 173 men in killed and wounded. The total loss in Illinois commands being 193 killed, wounded and missing.

General Grant moved his headquarters on December 23d to Holly Springs and on the 10th of January, 1863, rode from Holly Springs to Grand Junction and to Memphis, where he established his headquarters. The troops on the west bank of the Mississippi River at Helena had by this time been made subject to his orders.

On the 2d of January, 1863, General John A. McClernand, who originally had been designed to command the Army of the Mississippi, arrived at the mouth of the Yazoo River, and being the senior officer, relieved General Sherman from the command of the army, which was composed of part of the 13th Corps (Morgan's), and the 15th corps (Sherman's). General Sherman and Admiral Porter had withdrawn from the Yazoo and determined that it would be useless to make a further attempt upon Vicksburg at that time, and decided to proceed up the Arkansas River to Arkansas Post, about fifty miles up the stream. This movement was executed under the orders of General McClernand, the new commander. The expedition resulted, after three days bombardment by the navy, in an assault upon and the capture of the place with 5,000 prisoners and 17 guns. This entire army then returned to Napoleon at the mouth of the Arkansas River. From there General Grant ordered it to go as far as Young's Point, Louisiana, nearly opposite Vicksburg. On the 29th of January he proceeded to Young's point, in person and assumed command the next day, assigning General McClernand to the command of the 13th corps.

"The real work of the campaign and siege of Vicksburg now began. The problem was to secure a firm footing on the east side of the river from which the troops could operate against Vicksburg. The Mississippi River, from Cairo south, runs through a rich alluvial valley of many miles in width, bounded on the east by land running from eighty up to two or more hundred feet above the river. On the west side the highest land except in a few places is but a little above the highest water. Through this valley the river meanders in the most tortuous way, varying in direction to all points of the compass. At places it runs to the very foot of the bluffs. After leaving Memphis there are no such high lands coming to the water's edge of the east shore until Vicksburg is reached.

"The intervening land is cut up by bayous filled with water from the river, many of them were navigable and all of them would have been, except for overhanging trees and narrow and tortuous courses, making it impossible for vessels of any considerable length to turn in the bends. Marching across this country in the face of the enemy was impossible, navigating it proved equally impracticable. The strategical way according to the rule, therefore, would have been to go back to Memphis, establish that as a base of supplies, fortify it so that the store houses could be held by a small garrison, and move from there along the line of railroad, repairing as we advanced to the Yallobusha or to Jackson, Mississippi.

"At this time the North had become discouraged. Many strong Union men believed that the war must be a failure. The election of 1862 had gone against the party, which was for the prosecution of the war to save the Union, if it took the last man and the last dollar. Voluntary enlistments had ceased throughout the greater part of the North. It was my judgment at the time that to make a backward movement as long as that from Vicksburg to Memphis would be interpreted by many of those yet full of hope for the preservation of the Union as a defeat, and that the draft would be resisted, desertions ensue, and the power to capture and punish deserters lost. There was nothing left to be done but to go forward to a decisive victory. This was in my mind from the moment I took command in person at Young's Point."*

During that winter, heavy rains continued along the river and the water was so high that it was almost impossible to find land to camp the troops upon. The levees and the ground along them were made use of for camps, which necessitated the extension of General Grant's line from Young's Point to Lake Providence, Louisiana, which was over sixty miles above it. The incessant rains and high water made land movements absolutely impossible, and to permit the army to lay idle would have been dangerous to its morale and likewise injurious to the health of the soldiers. The discouragement of the loyal people of the North would have become more insolent and disturbing. General Grant, therefore, would have been greatly accelerated by the inactivity of this great army, and the denunciation of the enemies of the government in the North, the Copper Heads, would have become more insolent and disturbing. General Grant, therefore, determined to make several movements, principally designed to keep the army busy. He had not much hope that these movements would develop an opening by which he could reach the high land east of the Mississippi River.

The river then flowed in a northeasterly direction from Young's Point, striking the Mississippi shore at a point about two miles above Vicksburg, then it turned and ran southwest, forming a long peninsula around which vessels had to float to reach or pass that city. Several months before this time, troops from New Orleans under command of General Thomas Williams had ascended the river as far as the south side of this peninsula and cut a ditch ten or twelve feet wide and of the same depth across from Young's Point to the river below, a little over a mile. It was expected that when the river rose it would wash the channel through this ditch, and thus form a canal through which vessels could pass and get below the fortifications of Vicksburg; but this expectation was not realized. General Grant directed General McClernand, whose corps occupied the right of his extended line at Young's Point, to widen and deepen this canal, and nearly 4,000 men were so engaged; but on the 8th of March this effort had to be abandoned, by reason of a very strong rise in the river that prevented further digging, and also because the Confederate batteries obtained a range sweeping the canal completely.

The next attempt to get below the City of Vicksburg began the first of February. General McPherson, stationed at Lake Providence, was directed to cut the levee at that point, the intention being to increase the water in the Lake, which is about six miles long and empties by way of Bayou Baxter, Bayou Macon and the Tensas and Ouachita Rivers into the Red River. If this route could have been made practicable, transports might have been sent through to the Mississippi River below by way of the Red River, and then ascended the Mississippi for the landing of troops on the east side below Vicksburg. The bayous, however, were narrow and crooked, the banks covered with heavily wooded timber to the channels, and these were filled with fallen timbers. After considerable work to establish this route it was found that there was only two feet of water obtainable in Bayou Baxter. General Grant himself explored it by means of a small steamer of scarcely thirty tons burden. The route if successfully opened would have involved about 500 miles of water travel, exposing troops to bush-whacking attacks all along its course. Although General Grant was convinced by personal inspection of its utter uselessness, he still kept the command at work on this enterprise to keep them from idleness; and at the same time he hoped to use this activity, which was well known to the Confederate authorities, as a cover for various efforts in other directions. It was finally abandoned a little later.

The next effort involved an attempt to move on the Mississippi side by transports from a point a little below and opposite Helena, Arkansas. Here the levee was cut and an opening made for the Mississippi River to flow across the country. Transports and gunboats were passed through the resultant overflow, by way of Moon Lake and the Yazoo Pass into the Cold Water River, thence into the Tallahatchie, thence down to the Yazoo at the point where the Yalobusha enters it, a distance of about 250 miles below Moon Lake. This levee was cut on the 2d of February, and on the 24th General L. F. Ross, an Illinois man, with about 4,500 men on transports entered it. The Cold Water River and the Yazoo Pass had been seriously obstructed by felling timbers into them. It was an extremely difficult task for the steamers as they went along to remove these obstructions. The distance was finally covered on the 11th of March, when General Ross' expedition, accompanied by two gun-boats, reached the head waters of the Yazoo, where strong Confederate fortifications had been erected, near Greenwood, Mississippi, designated as Fort Pemberton. It was not possible to have any land operations as the territory was all inundated. The naval vessels attacked on the 11th and 13th of March, without success. Fort Pemberton itself was only two feet above the water, and it was thought by letting in additional water from the Mississippi the Confederates might be forced to give up their ground. To accomplish this, an additional cut was made higher up on the Mississippi River, but the result wished for was not obtained. General Quimby's division went down this same pass and met Ross returning on the 22nd; who was directed to return and join General Quimby's force. When this augmented Union command reached Fort Pemberton and made further reconnaissance it became evident that no movement was possible in the overflowed condition of the country, and the expedition returned without having achieved success.

The 56th, 72d and 93d Illinois Infantry and Co. E 2d Illinois Cavalry took part in this expedition.

General Grant had in the meantime decided upon a movement that would give him foothold on Mississippi soil below Fort Pemberton, if successful. An attempt was made to enter the Yazoo River about ten miles above Haines' Bluff, by means of Steele's Bayou, Black Bayou, Deer Creek and the Big Sunflower River. These bayous, however, are tortuous streams and were at the time overgrown and obstructed by fallen timbers. After an exploration by Admiral Porter, he reported that the route was practical as far as Deer Creek, and on the 15th of March he proceeded with five gun-boats and four mortar-boats on this hazardous tour of navigation, followed by transports. The troops were commanded by General Sherman, and consisted of Stuart's Division of the 15th corps. As Admiral Porter reached the point where the generally navigable waters were made available to him, he encountered a strong force of sharpshooters and was rendered almost helpless. The gun-boats were no match for nearly 4,000 sharpshooters that had been posted with a view of preventing his further progress. General Sherman in his rear was at once notified, and on the night of the 19th of March he ordered up his reinforcements, himself going down Black Bayou in a canoe, to accomplish this. The troops moved on foot.

GEN. LEONARD F. ROSS

"It was night when they landed and intensely dark. There was a narrow strip above water and that was overgrown with underbrush. The troops lighted their way through this with candles for a mile and one-half, when they came to an open plantation. Here they rested until morning. They made twenty-one miles from this resting place, up to noon the next day, and were in time to rescue the fleet."*

Vessels were backed out and returned to their rendezvous on the Mississippi, and thus ended the fourth attempt to get in the rear of Vicksburg.

The 113th, 116th and 127th Illinois Infantry and Thielemann's Cavalry participated in these operations.

*General Grant's Memoirs.

After having abandoned the canal, the Lake Providence route, the Yazoo Pass and the Steele's Bayou expeditions, General Grant determined to move his army by way of the bayous back of the levees on the Louisiana side that have their beginnings in the vicinity of Milliken's Bend, and that empty into the Mississippi River at Carthage, some forty miles below. On the 29th of March, he directed General McClernand with the 13th Corps to make a beginning of the movement in that direction. This is the date officially fixed by the War Department as the beginning of the Vicksburg campaign.

Even if dry land enough could be found to transport his army to Carthage and encamp it there, General Grant knew that it would be impossible, at least until the roads became dryer, to transport, or land, the necessary stores and munitions of war to supply them. He planned, in conjunction with Admiral Porter, to have naval vessels and transports laden with supplies run by the Confederate batteries along the shore from Vicksburg to Warrenton, covering nearly fifteen miles of fire from these batteries in an attempt to get below Vicksburg. Having means of transportation on the river below Vicksburg would enable him to transfer his army from the Louisiana to the Mississippi side.

His army was concentrated mostly at Milliken's Bend, and the cavalry attached to General McClernand's corps, and particularly to General Osterhaus' division of this corps, moved forward toward Richmond, Louisiana, and finally reached Carthage, at which place they established a new base.

In crossing Rockaway Bayou in the approach to Richmond, skiffs and bateaux were improvised by the Second and Third Illinois Cavalry who used the butts of their carbines as substitutes for paddles. On the night of the 16th of April, Admiral Porter started on his venturesome trip of running the long line of batteries in the following order: His own flagship, the Benton, the Lafayette with a prize ship lashed to her side, the Louisville, Mound City, Pittsburg and Carondelet of the navy; then came the transports, Forest Queen, Silver Wave and Henry Clay. These had in tow barges loaded with coal to be used for the vessels after getting below the batteries. The Tuscumbia of the Navy covered the rear. This fleet was under fire for more than two hours, many of the vessels were struck without apparent damage, but the Henry Clay had to be abandoned by her crew and she was burned to the water's edge. These transports had been protected by means of cotton bales packed about their boilers. In the case of the Henry Clay this cotton was set on fire. The vessel floated down to Carthage, where it grounded, as did also the barges. This hazardous undertaking was a great success and marvelous in its result, so far as loss of life was concerned. Not a single man was killed on the transports and only a few wounded.

General McClernand had reached New Carthage with Osterhaus' division and its artillery by the 6th of April. The artillery had to be ferried through the woods on improvised boats. Later on, another route was discovered from Smith's plantation to Perkin's Landing about twelve miles below New Carthage. The ground was a little higher, which afforded a better road. This was forty miles from Milliken's Bend. On April 20th, General Grant issued his final orders to his "Army in the field," to obtain a foothold on the east bank of the Mississippi River. General McClernand with the 13th corps held the right of the army, McPherson with the 17th corps the center and General Sherman with the 15th corps the left. The troops left their camp equipage and all their extra clothing behind. Only one small tent was allowed to each company to protect ammunition and food from rain.

Having been exposed to the inclemency of the weather and confined to little narrow strips of land very little above water, malarial fevers and measles and bowel difficulties made great inroads upon the health of the men, diminishing the number available for actual field duty very greatly. The impossibility of providing the army by means of a wagon train over this long and insecure route becoming apparent, and the country itself affording, by reason of its inundation, no possibility of supplying the necessary subsistence, it was necessary to send more transports below. On the night of the 22d of April, six additional transports all loaded with supplies and protected as before, were sent down to run past the batteries, each of them carrying two barges laden with rations and other stores. Five of these transports succeeded in getting through, one was a little damaged, and one was sunk.

When the proposition was made to run the blockade at Vicksburg, with river steamers, only a few captains were willing to go with their vessels and only one crew. Volunteers were called for from the army, and "Captains, Pilots, Mates, Engineers and Deck hands enough presented themselves to take five times the number of vessels that we were moving through this dangerous ordeal. Most of them were from Logan's division, composed generally of men from the southern part of Illinois and from Missouri. All but two of the steamers were commanded by volunteers from the army and all but one so manned. In this instance, as in all others during the war, I found that volunteers could be found in the ranks and among commissioned officers to meet every call for aid, whether mechanical or professional."*

On the 24th of April, General Grant established his own headquarters with the advance of the army then located at Perkin's Landing. The east shore opposite was reconnoitered for dry land, in order to gain a foothold in Mississippi above Grand Gulf, but none being found the troops were ordered to move further down the river, to Hard Times Landing, about twenty miles distant and nearly opposite to Grand Gulf. The total ferrying capacity of gun-boats and transports then available, was about 10,000 men. All of McClernand's corps had arrived at Hard Times Landing on the 27th, and on the 29th General Grant directed them to go aboard the transports and barges for the purpose of effecting a landing on the opposite side. His plans were that the navy should silence the guns at Grand Gulf, which commanded the river for a considerable distance above and below. It is situated on a high bluff similarly to Vicksburg itself. It was hoped that while the navy was fiercely engaging the enemy's works here, the troops might be carried down the river to some safe landing. Accordingly on the 29th of April the navy attacked with eight gun-boats and continued for more than five hours, but without succeeding in silencing the guns of the enemy. A little after one o'clock the fleet withdrew, finding their efforts useless.

*General Grant's Memoirs.

"There was a long tongue of land from the Louisiana side extending toward Grand Gulf, made by the river running east from about three miles above and nearly in the opposite direction from that point for about the same distance below. The land was so low and wet that it would not be practicable to march the army across, but for the levee. I had this explored before, as well as the east bank below, to ascertain if there was a possible point of debarkation north of Rodney. It was found that the top of the levee afforded a good road to march upon."*

In the evening of that day, the 29th, McClelland's corps landed, and during the night marched across this point of land on the levee, and Admiral Porter with all the naval vessels and transports ran past the batteries of Grand Gulf, and the next morning the troops re-embarked and proceeded down the river. It was General Grant's intention to go to Rodney. On the night after the running of the blockade he was informed by a colored man that he would find a good landing at Bruinsburg, some miles above Rodney, and that there was a good road from this point leading to Port Gibson, twelve miles east of this place. The advance of the army under General McClelland landed at Bruinsburg on the 30th of April. McClelland's 13th corps was closely followed by the 17th corps under McPherson (Logan's Division). General Sherman had not moved from his position extending from Young's Point to Milliken's Bend. On the morning of the 27th he was ordered by General Grant to create a diversion along the Yazoo River front and, accordingly, he directed General Blair with his division to proceed to the vicinity of Haines' Bluff, and to feign an attack in force on the Confederate works located there. General Grant's object in doing this was to keep a large force of General Pemberton's troops north of Vicksburg, while he, himself, was effecting a crossing of the river below in order to form a line of attack from the south. The result of this feint proved entirely as contemplated and created confusion and doubt in the minds of the Confederate commanders. The feigned attack on Haines' Bluff, on the Yazoo River, took place on the 29th of April at the same time that Admiral Porter was bombarding the works at Grand Gulf. The fleet, which the Admiral had left above Vicksburg, eight gunboats, participated with ten regiments of Blair's Division in the attack at Haines' Bluff.

The 55th, 113th, 116th and 127th Illinois Infantry, Batteries A, B and H of the 1st Artillery and Thielemann's Cavalry participated in this movement.

On the 1st day of May, General Sherman received orders to withdraw his force from Haines' Bluff and to follow McPherson's corps with two of his division as fast as possible, leaving Blair's division to bring up the rear after troops from Memphis should arrive to take his place. The army with General Grant had been ferried from DeShroones, on the Louisiana side, about six miles above, to Bruinsburg, Mississippi, on the 30th of April.

"When this was effected, I felt a degree of relief scarcely ever equaled since. Vicksburg was not yet taken, it is true, nor were its defenders demoralized by any of our previous moves. I was now in the enemy's country, with a vast river and the stronghold of Vicksburg between me and my base of supplies, but I was on dry ground, on the same side of the river with the enemy. All the campaigns, labors, hardships and exposures from the month of December previous to this time, that had been made and endured, were for the accomplishment of this one object.”*

The total force available to General Grant at the time of this first crossing was about 20,000 men. Soon after an additional division of the 17th corps, Quimby's, then commanded by General M. M. Crocker, was added to this force. On the 7th of May, General Sherman also crossed the river, with two of his divisions, Steele's and Tuttle's, so that General Grant's army had then been increased to about 31,000 men. At the time of the crossing, the Confederates occupied Grand Gulf, Haines' Bluff and Jackson, with a force of nearly 60,000 men.

General Grant's first effort was to get possession of Grand Gulf, so that he might have a base on the Mississippi side of the river. In order to accomplish this he ordered General McClernand to take possession of the high lands, some two miles distant from the landing at Bruinsburg, and directed him to push on, hoping that he might reach Port Gibson, on Bayou Pierre, before the Confederates from Grand Gulf could get there and destroy the bridge. Port Gibson was important, as roads lead from it to Grand Gulf, to Vicksburg and to Jackson.

About daylight on May 1st, General McClernand's advance having reached Thompson's Plantation, within five miles of Port Gibson, found about 8,000 men under General Bowen, which was a large share of the Grand Gulf garrison, opposing his further advance. General Bowen expected further reinforcements to reach him under the command of General Loring with part of the Vicksburg garrison, but being too hard pressed, he could not hold the Union advance in check. He was not able to form a junction with General Loring until after Port Gibson was in General Grant's possession.

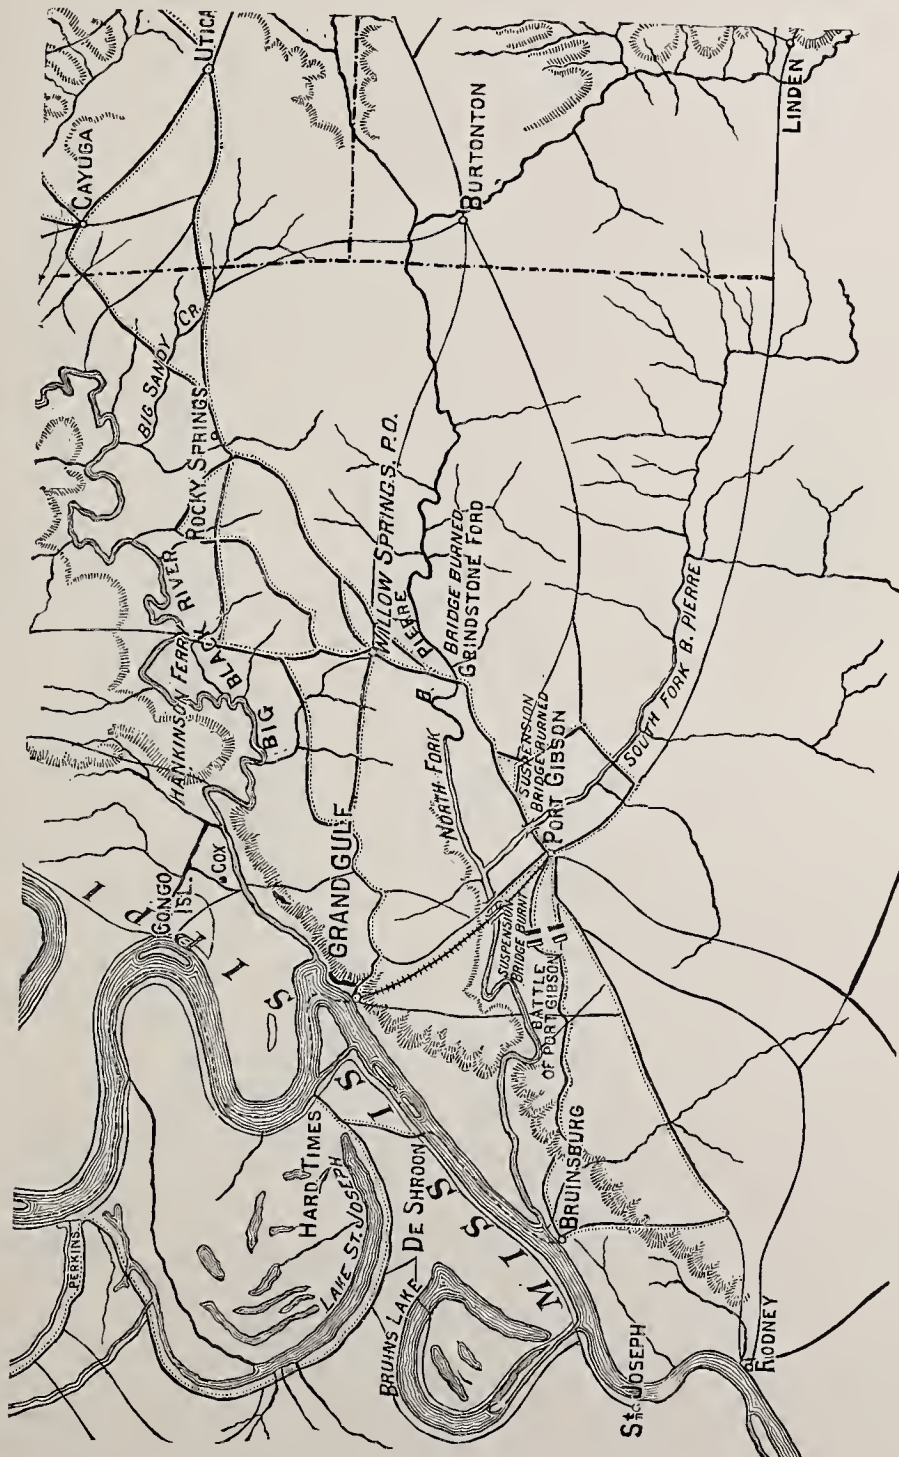

“Near the point selected by Bowen to defend, the road to Port Gibson divides, taking two ridges which do not diverge more than a mile or two at the widest point. These roads unite just outside the town. This made it necessary for McClernand to divide his force. It was not only divided, but it was separated by a deep ravine. * * * One flank could not reinforce the other except by marching back to the junction of the roads.”*

Hovey's, Carr's and A. J. Smith's divisions were put on the right and Osterhaus' on the left ridge. No particular advantage was gained by either side on the right, but on the left Osterhaus was sorely pressed and had been repulsed with some loss, when General Grant ordered the two brigades of Logan's Division of McPherson's corps forward to his support. General John E. Smith's brigade crossed a deep ravine, reached the third ridge and threatened the Confederate right, then Osterhaus again renewed his front attack and succeeded in driving the enemy out of his position. At night General Grant's army bivouacked within two miles of Port Gibson. Union loss,

To further disconcert the enemy and conceal his real intentions, General Grant had directed Colonel Grierson, an Illinois commander, to make a cavalry raid through Central Mississippi. He started from LaGrange, Tennessee, on April 17th, with three regiments, but on the 21st, he detached one under Colonel Hatch to destroy the railroad between Columbus and Macon, Mississippi, and then to return to LaGrange, at which point he arrived on April 26th; but Grierson, in person, with the 6th and 7th Illinois Cavalry Regiments, about 1,000 men in all, continued his ride south, destroying the Vicksburg and Meridian railroad and the New Orleans and Jackson railroad, and arrived at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, on May 2d. General Grant first heard of the success of this raid through a southern paper in Port Gibson.

COL. BENJAMIN H. GRIERSON

Early in the morning of May 2d, Port Gibson was entered. The crossing of the bridge over Bayou Pierre was not contested further than by burning it; but a new bridge was speedily constructed over the South Fork of the Bayou, over which the army crossed. By evening of that day, a position was reached eight miles beyond and near the North Fork. Quimby's division, commanded by Crocker, came up and re-inforced the army while at Port Gibson with two brigades. McArthur's division of McPherson's corps was still guarding roads over in Louisiana, from Milliken's Bend to the river below. At that time one brigade of this division was at Lake Providence, where it remained throughout the campaign.

The movement across the river was undertaken without a wagon train and with only two days' rations issued to the troops. The supplies had to come by road, and strong escorts were required to protect the roundabout road from Milliken's Bend to Hard Times Landing, about 70 miles distant, which required General Grant to assign a large portion of the army to this duty.

The bridge over the North Fork of Bayou Pierre having been repaired during the night of the 2d of May, the Union troops began crossing it early in the morning of the 3d. The First Brigade that moved over it encountered a Confederate force, which, however, soon yielded, and the rest of the troops crossed unmolested. Every point of the Union advance was contested by Confederate forces, which were evidently covering a retreat of the force from Grand Gulf on the road to Vicksburg.

McPherson reached Hankinson's Ferry in the afternoon of the 3d and crossed a portion of his command over the Big Black River and advanced some distance on the road to Vicksburg. At the junction of the roads from Grand Gulf to Vicksburg, with that to Raymond and to Jackson, General McPherson turned General Logan's division to the left on the road toward Grand Gulf. A very spirited contest occurred here with the Confederate right flank, which, however, soon gave way, and not long after General Grant having ascertained that the last of the Confederates from Grand Gulf had gotten away toward Vicksburg over that road, he rode into the town with a small cavalry escort, Company A, 4th Illinois Cavalry. He found Admiral Porter there, with his fleet, in possession of the heavy guns, which the Confederates had left behind when they evacuated the place.

While at Grand Gulf he received information from General Banks that he could not be at Port Hudson before the 10th of May, and then with only 15,000 men. Up to this time his intention had been to secure Grand Gulf as a base of supplies, and then send McClernand's corps to Banks to assist in the capture of Port Hudson, but that news from General Banks caused him to make a different plan from that intended. To await reinforcements from General Banks would have taken at least a month, and when they could have reached him, they would not have exceeded 10,000 men. By that time the Confederate army would have been strengthened, both in position and numbers to a much greater extent, than the men General Banks could have sent, would have strengthened him. He then determined to move independently, cut loose from his base, destroy the Confederate force in the rear of Vicksburg and invest or capture the City. He wrote General Halleck of this plan, the letter to be telegraphed from Cairo. He counted with certainty that General Halleck's great caution would lead him to disapprove of the campaign outlined, but he also knew that the time necessary to receive a reply from Washington would be so great that he would have ample opportunity to demonstrate the practicability of his undertaking before the countermand could possibly reach him.

General Sherman, who later in the war ignored all bases of supplies except those that the country naturally afforded, urged General Grant to halt until the army should be partially furnished with wagons to supply it. General Grant then determined to get up all the rations of hard bread, coffee and salt that he could and to make the country furnish the balance of necessary subsistence stores. He could not afford a delay, which would give the Confederate commanders time to reinforce and fortify, and hence determined to abandon Grand Gulf as a base of supplies.

General McClernand's and McPherson's corps were supplied with three days' rations in haversacks, and very little was issued afterwards until a new base was established on the Yazoo River above Vicksburg, more than two weeks later. McClernand and McPherson were both engaged in making reconnaissances in the vicinity of and across the Big Black River, with a view of leading the Confederate commanders to believe that General Grant intended to move directly upon Vicksburg.

General Sherman advanced, arriving opposite Grand Gulf on the 6th of May, and was transferred across to Grand Gulf by the evening of the 7th, and directed General Blair, who was still at Milliken's Bend, to move forward with two brigades to Hard Times Landing and join his corps.

General Hurlbut, an Illinois man, who commanded at Memphis, then General Grant's base of all supplies, munitions and men, was directed, on May 3d, to send a force from his command to relieve Blair, and on the 5th he had orders to send Lauman's division, in addition, to join the army in the field before Vicksburg.

On the night of the 6th, McPherson withdrew his men from the north bank of the Big Black River, and on the 7th he moved on the road to Jackson, by way of Rocky Springs, Utica and Raymond. The night of that day found McPherson and McClernand at Rocky Springs. The next day McClernand moved to Big Sandy, and General Sherman marched from Grand Gulf to Hankinson's Ferry; McPherson moved to within a few miles of

GEN. STEPHEN A. HURLBUT

Utica, and on the 10th to Utica, and Sherman moved to Big Sandy. On the 11th, McClernand was at Five Mile Creek, Sherman at Auburn and McPherson five miles beyond Utica. On the 12th McClernand moved to Fourteen Mile Creek, where Sherman had already arrived, and McPherson fought the battle of Raymond, where he rested that night.

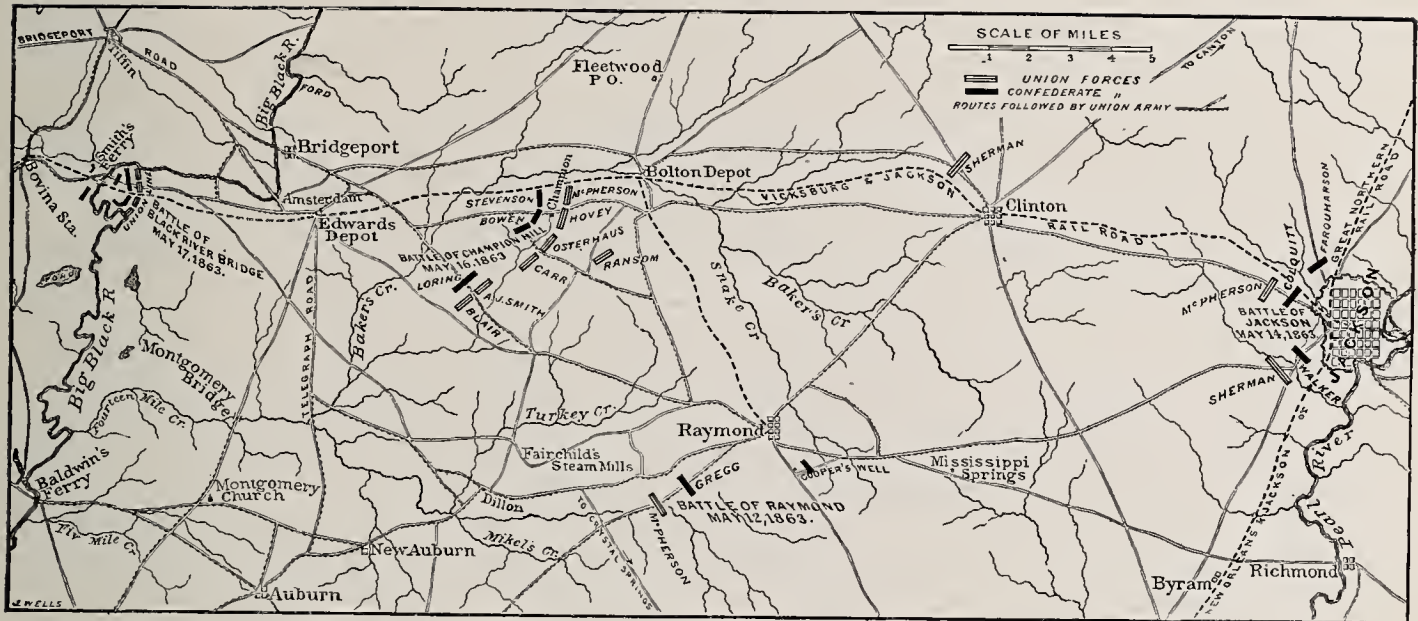

When McPherson was two miles out of Raymond he was met by Generals Gregg and Walker, with a force of about 6,000 men and two batteries, about two o'clock in the afternoon. Logan's division was in the advance, with Stevenson's brigade deployed as skirmishers, and the remainder of his division and Crocker's division were ordered forward. General Logan assaulted the Confederate position and did it so vigorously that he carried it before Crocker's force got into the battle. McPherson's loss on this occasion was 60 killed, 341 wounded and 37 missing. The Confederate loss was 100 killed, 869 wounded and missing.

Illinois troops engaged with Logan: 20th, 31st, 45th, 124th, 30th, 8th and 81st Infantry, Battery D, 1st Artillery, Company A, 2d Illinois Cavalry; with Crocker: 93d Infantry and Company E, 3d Cavalry. Illinois lost in killed, wounded and missing 163.

"After McPherson crossed the Big Black at Hankinson's Ferry, Vicksburg could have been approached and besieged by the south side. It is not probable, however, that Pemberton would have permitted a close siege. The broken nature of the ground would have enabled him to hold a strong defensible line from the river south of the City to the Big Black, retaining possession of the railroad back to that point. It was my plan, therefore, to get to the railroad east of Vicksburg and approach from that direction. Accordingly, McPherson's troops that had crossed the Big Black were withdrawn, and a movement east to Jackson commenced."

"The country is very much broken and the roads generally confined to the tops of the hills. The troops were moved one (sometimes two) corps at a time to reach designated points out parallel to the railroad and only from six to ten miles from it. McClernand's corps was kept with its left flank on the Big Black guarding all the crossings. Fourteen Mile Creek, a stream substantially parallel with the railroad, was reached and crossings effected by McClernand and Sherman with slight loss. McPherson was to the right of Sherman. The Cavalry was used in this advance in reconnoitering to find the roads. In making this move, I estimated Pemberton's movable force at Vicksburg at about 18,000 men, with smaller forces at Haines' Bluff and Jackson. It would not be possible for Pemberton to attack me with all his troops at one place, and I determined to throw my army between the parts of his and fight him in detail. This was done with success, and I found afterwards that I had entirely underestimated Pemberton's strength.*

General Grant was with General Sherman when the news of McPherson's success at Raymond reached him on the evening of that day. He at once decided to move on Jackson and capture it. Having determined that in the end he would have to lay siege to Vicksburg, he felt it necessary to destroy all possibility of aid coming to Pemberton by way of Jackson, the point where the railroads communicating with Vicksburg connected. He therefore directed the entire column to move quickly toward Jackson, destroy any force that might be there, and then turn back upon Pemberton and destroy or drive him into Vicksburg. In doing this General Grant cut his own communications and left a large Confederate force under Pemberton, greater than his own, in his rear. On the morning of the 13th he ordered General McPherson to move to Clinton. General Sherman was ordered to move early in the morning to Raymond, and General McClernand was ordered to proceed to the same point with three of his divisions by way of Dillons; one of his divisions, A. J. Smith's, being left to protect the crossing of the Big Black.

*General Grant's Memoirs.

On the same day General Joseph E. Johnston of the Confederate army arrived at Jackson and assumed command of all the Confederate troops in Mississippi.

General McPherson's troops reached Clinton on the 13th and destroyed the railroad, General Sherman reached Raymond by the time the last of McPherson's command had left it, and General McClernand had left the front of Edward's Station and reached Raymond about the same time. In the night of the 13th, General McPherson was ordered to move on Jackson from Clinton, a distance of fifteen miles. General Sherman received orders to move to Jackson on the road leading directly to that place from Raymond and which approached the Confederate defenses of Jackson at a point about two miles south of where McPherson struck them. General McClernand was directed to move one of his divisions, Hovey's, to Clinton from Raymond, one division a little beyond Mississippi Springs, Carr's, and the third division, Osterhaus', to Raymond. The division being near Clinton was thus available to support McPherson, the one at Mississippi Springs to support General Sherman, should either of them require assistance, and the one in Raymond was held in reserve to go where it might be most needed. General Blair's division had by this time come up with the army, and with one of the divisions of McClernand's corps, was still farther to the rear, but available for forward movement, should either be needed, and equally available for any attack in the direction of Vicksburg, being closer to it than the rest of the army, and ready to check General Pemberton in the event that he should attempt to attack General Grant's rear.

A pouring rain deluged the armies of Sherman and McPherson during the night of the 13th. In some places along Sherman's route the land was fully one foot under water, but the troops went on. About nine in the morning of the 14th, General McPherson's advance, under General Crocker, encountered the Confederate pickets and pressed them back upon their main body. This proved to be the same force that had been encountered at Raymond.

Reinforcements of fresh troops from Georgia and South Carolina had been received by General Johnston during the night and larger reinforcements were on the way to him. General Sherman about the same time encountered the pickets of the Confederate troops in front of him, and also succeeded in driving them back. He attacked the Confederate defenses from the south and southwest, while McPherson occupied a line crossing the Vicksburg Railway (A. & V. R. R.).

By eleven o'clock General Crocker, followed by General Logan's division, moved forward and drove the Confederates back within range of the guns of their defensive works. There he halted and reorganized his line and determined upon his further movements. This was about noon.

The Confederate works extended from the Pearl River, north of the City, to the same river on the south. They had a battery which controlled the road on which General Sherman was marching, and which also commanded the bridge which it was necessary for him to cross. He was forced to resort to a flank movement, which succeeded, and the opposing force was driven toward their main line.

General Grant was at that time with General Sherman and did not believe that an assault was warranted, and directed General Sherman to have General Tuttle's division reconnoiter to the Pearl River. This division not returning, General Grant with his staff proceeded to investigate, and discovered that General Johnston had ordered a retreat with his main force, only leaving the men at the guns to retard Sherman's progress and mask the evacuation. General Tuttle had observed this and came up in the rear of the battery and captured it, comprising ten pieces. General McPherson discovered that the Confederates were leaving his front at the same time, and ordered General Crocker to advance, and pushed the enemy so fiercely they had neither time to remove nor destroy their guns, of which he captured seven. Moving on he reached the Capitol of the State and hoisted the national flag over it.

Stevenson's brigade of Logan's division was urged forward to cut off the retreat, but it was too late. The loss in this engagement by McPherson was 37 killed, 228 wounded, and by Sherman was 3 killed and 240 wounded and missing. The Confederate loss was 50 killed, 400 wounded and 400 captured. The Confederates destroyed all their storehouses by fire.

Illinois had engaged May 14th, in the battle of Jackson, the 13th, 20th, 31st, 45th, 47th, 93d, 114th, 124th, 8th and 81st Infantry, Company D. Third Cavalry, Kane County Cavalry, Batteries D and E, First Artillery, and Companies A and E, Second Cavalry, and sustained a loss of 18.

On this day General Blair reached New Auburn, where he formed a junction with General McClernand's 4th Division. He brought with him 200 wagons loaded with rations, which was the last supply of the commissary department received during that campaign. General Grant occupied on the night of the 14th the same room at Jackson that Johnston had slept in the night before. Early on the 14th, General Grant intercepted a message from General Johnston to General Pemberton, which read as follows:

"I have lately arrived, and learned that General Sherman is between us with four divisions at Clinton. It is important to establish communication, that you may be reinforced. If practicable come up in his rear at once. To beat such a detachment would be of immense value, all the troops you can quickly assemble should be brought; time is all important."*

After the receipt of this message, General Grant directed General McPherson to move on the morning of the 15th to Bolton, about twenty miles west of Jackson. He directed General Sherman to remain in Jackson until he destroyed it as a railroad center and place for manufacturing Confederate military supplies, and he also directed McClernand to turn all his forces toward Bolton Station and make all dispatch in going there by the most direct route from wherever they may happen to be at the receipt of the order. General Blair was instructed to turn his troops immediately and to take with him, A. J. Smith's division and any other troops then with him, and if there were parallel roads to divide the troops and the train.

General Johnston upon leaving Jackson, had to retire toward the north on the road to Canton, and stopped about six miles north of Jackson on the night of the 15th. He ordered General Pemberton to unite all his reinforcements with the main army in order to inflict a heavy blow upon General Grant, and inquired if Grant could supply himself from the Mississippi, and then asked, "Can you not cut him off from it, and if he should be compelled to fall back for want of supplies, beat him?"

Hovey's division of McClernand's corps, which had been sent on the road to Clinton, retraced its steps, and had four miles the start of McPherson; one of McClernand's divisions, Osterhaus' was at Raymond, on a road that intersected the road from Clinton near Champion's Hill; another division of McClernand's, Carr's, had to pass over the same road that Osterhaus used, but being farther back was not detained by General Osterhaus' movement. General McClernand's 4th division, A. J. Smith's, was with Blair's division near Auburn and had a road to itself. General McClernand moved promptly, his cavalry (2nd and 3d Illinois and 6th Missouri) was in Bolton at half past nine in the morning of the 15th and took possession of the place. On the night of the 15th, Hovey had also arrived at Bolton. Osterhaus and Carr were three miles south of it, and A. J. Smith was north of Raymond, having General Blair in his rear.

McPherson's corps, with Logan in front, had marched at 7 o'clock in the morning of the 15th and went into camp with Hovey that evening. General Crocker's division of McPherson's corps bivouacked on the Clinton road back of Hovey and Logan.

General Sherman with two divisions was still in Jackson, in discharge of the duties devolved upon him. General Grant was at Clinton. He ordered General McClernand to move early in the morning of the 16th toward Edward's Station, to keep close watch on the enemy, and unless he felt satisfied of success, not to bring on an engagement. General Grant had expected that General Pemberton would carry out the orders of General Johnston and attack him at Clinton; but instead of this, he determined to get between General Grant and his base, south from Edward's Station. Evidently he was not aware that Grant had abandoned Grand Gulf, on the Mississippi River, as a base, more than a week previously. On the 15th, General Pemberton had moved south, but the excessive rains had so swollen Baker's Creek that fording was impossible and the bridges had been washed away. He was, therefore, compelled to deflect back to the Jackson road and secure a bridge over Baker's Creek. A portion of his troops were not moved until early in the morning on the 16th, when General Pemberton received another order from General Johnston, directing him to form a junction with his superior at Clinton.

Early in the morning of the 16th, General Grant received information that General Pemberton's army was reported to consist of 80 regiments of infantry and 10 batteries. About 25,000 men were moved eastward.

He had expected to leave General Sherman at Jackson for another day, but upon receipt of this information, he directed him to move to Bolton, and to put one division in motion at once, with all possible dispatch, until he reached the rear of his, Grant's, other forces. Steele's division was on the road within an hour from the receipt of the order. General Blair was ordered to move speedily to Edward's Station and General McClernand was directed to consider General Blair for the time being, as part of his command. General McPherson was directed to follow as closely as possible to Hovey's division. There were three roads upon which General McClernand could converge his corps upon Edward's Station. Hovey's division on the farthest north road, Blair's and A. J. Smith's division by the farthest south road and Osterhaus and Carr by the middle road. A. J. Smith's division first encountered the Confederate pickets, and when Osterhaus on the middle road heard the firing, he pushed his skirmishers forward, and the Confederates backed to the main line. About the same time Hovey's division coming on the direct road from Jackson to Vicksburg encountered the Confederates in its front. Hovey's trains delayed McPherson's advance to some extent.

Ransom's brigade of McArthur's division of McPherson's corps had been held on the Louisiana side till the 10th of May, it reached Raymond the evening of the 15th and was held there till noon of the 16th. It was prevented from reaching its corps, as Blair's division occupied the road over which it had to move.

General Grant was still at Clinton, but at McPherson's request he rode forward and ordered the roads cleared of all trains, and when he reached Hovey's front, he found him hotly engaged. Pemberton had selected Champion's Hill as his base, one of the highest points in that section, which commanded all the ground around it. On the east side of the precipitous ridge, runs a ravine which terminates at Baker's Creek. A wagon road that leads from Bolton to Edward's Station turns south at this point and runs along the top of this ridge nearly a mile.

There is a road from Raymond to Edward's Station and also one to Bolton, and about three miles before reaching Bolton, another road branches off from this, which also leads directly to Bolton Station. McClernand's force and Blair's division, now with him, moved on this road. Pemberton's line covered all these roads facing east as well as the road on the north upon which Hovey and McPherson were advanced.

By 10 o'clock the action had reached the dignity of a battle. Hovey's division alone was engaged. He captured a battery from the enemy, but was not able to hold it. McPherson pushed forward Logan's division and placed them on the right of Hovey, crossing the Confederate flank with one brigade, while with his other two brigades, he moved farther west, so that there should be room for Crocker's division when it came up. General McPherson placed two batteries so that they could enfilade the enemy's line and do good work. General Logan and his division soon gained the road leading down to Baker's Creek, which cut off Pemberton's retreat toward Clinton. Hovey's division, now reinforced by two brigades from McPherson's, confronted Pemberton's left, and Crocker with two brigades also threatened his left flank. General McClernand had been for two hours within two miles and a half of the Confederate center with two divisions, and Blair's and A. J. Smith's division were opposite the Confederate right.

General Grant says that neither Logan nor himself knew at the time that the Confederate retreat was cut off. General Hovey asked for reinforcements, he had none to supply, but ordered McPherson's command to move to Hovey by the left flank. This opened the line of retreat for the Confederates, which they soon took advantage of.

Between three and four o'clock the Confederates made their escape, and as Hovey's division of McClernand's corps and Logan's and Crocker's divisions of McPherson's corps had marched from early dawn and were not in the best condition to pursue the retreating foe with vigor, General Grant ordered Generals Osterhaus, Carr and Ransom to pursue them vigorously as far as the Big Black and across that, if possible.

Ransom's brigade of McArthur's division of McPherson's corps had been held at Raymond till noon, when General Ransom with three of his regiments—the 72d and 95th Illinois and the 17th Wisconsin—was permitted to move forward, the 11th Illinois and 14th Wisconsin being detained at Raymond. It struck the Confederate right flank about 4 p. m.—the action being practically over.

The battle of Champion's Hill in its real hard fighting consumed about four hours, not counting two or three hours of previous skirmishing. In this battle of General Grant's army about 14,000 men were actually engaged, and the loss sustained was 426 killed, 1,842 wounded and 189 missing, 2,457 in all.

Illinois had engaged in the battle of Champion's Hill the 8th, 20th, 30th, 31st, 33d, 45th, 72d, 77th, 81st, 93d, 95th, 97th, 99th, 118th and 124th Infantry, Battery D First Artillery, the Chicago Mercantile Battery, Company K Third Cavalry, Company A and E 2d Cavalry and Thielemann's Cavalry and sustained a loss of 395 killed and wounded. In this battle General Logan captured 1,300 prisoners and 11 guns.

General Pemberton lost about 500 killed, 2,000 wounded and 1,800 in captured during the battle and in the pursuit. Of his troops, Loring's division, which was on his extreme right, was cut off from joining in the retreat into Vicksburg. It moved to the southward and joined Johnston's army two days later near Jackson. Pemberton's main army fell back on the night of the 16th to the Big Black River.

The furthest advance of McPherson on the night of the 16th bivouacked six miles west of the battlefield on the road to Vicksburg; Carr and Osterhaus' divisions were at Edward's Station, and Blair's division about three miles southeast of this. Hovey's division remained on the field.

Had Pemberton obeyed Johnston's orders he might, after, the battle of Champion's Hill, have crossed the Big Black River and moved from there on the west side of the river and returned to Johnston's army and made a junction with him, but this would have given Vicksburg to General Grant, which Pemberton believed would be absolutely ruinous to the cause of the Confederacy.

General Sherman remained in Jackson until noon of the 16th and made a forced march, reaching Bolton, twenty miles west, late at night. His rear guard did not reach his camp that night until 2 o'clock in the morning; nevertheless, his corps moved again by daylight in the morning. He learned of the victory of Champion's Hill upon his arrival at Bolton. He was directed to move to Bridgeport on the Big Black River, about eleven miles above the point at which Pemberton's retreating army crossed the river on its way to Vicksburg. General Blair with his division was ordered to join him at Bridgeport, he had with him a pontoon train. This disposition of General Sherman's force would have prevented a northward move of Pemberton, had he decided to make it at that time. General Grant intended to hold Pemberton near the Big Black until Sherman could get into his position.

Carr's division of McClernand's corps resumed the pursuit at 5 o'clock in the morning of the 17th, and was closely followed by Osterhaus' division of the same corps and by Ransom's brigade and the other troops of McPherson's corps. Only six miles distant from where Grant's army rested they discovered the Confederates in position along the Big Black River, fortified behind parapets and felled timber. General Carr's division was deployed, having Lawler's Brigade on its extreme right, and Osterhaus' division was deployed to the left of Carr, covering the entire front of the Confederate forces. McPherson's corps was along the road in column ready to go in wherever assistance might be needed. General Lawler's brigade made a successful charge, the Confederates fled from the west bank of the river, burning the bridge and leaving the men and guns on the east side to be taken prisoners. Many escaped by swimming across the river, and many drowned.

While this charge was in its incipency, General Grant was visited by a staff officer of General Banks, who presented a letter from General Halleck, which ordered General Grant to return to Grand Gulf and co-operate from there with General Banks against Port Hudson, and after Port Hudson has fallen to return with the combined armies to besiege Vicksburg. General Grant informed the officer that the order came too late, and that General Halleck would not give it now if he knew of the situation. While the question was being argued, Lawler's successful assault took place, and General Grant mounted his horse to closely observe the movement and the discussion ended abruptly.

In this engagement 1,751 prisoners were captured, and also 18 guns, the Union loss was 29 killed, 242 wounded and 2 missing. The bridge having been burned it became necessary to construct new ones before our army could cross in pursuit of Pemberton's army, which now made a hasty retreat into Vicksburg.

Illinois had engaged in the battle of Big Black River Bridge the 33d, 99th and 118th Infantry, the Chicago Mercantile Battery and Battery A 2d Artillery and Companies A, E, K and L 3d Cavalry.

The capture took place about 9 o'clock in the morning. General Grant ordered three bridges to be constructed, one was in charge of Lieutenant Hains of the Engineer Corps, another under General McPherson's personal direction and the third was built by General Ransom. About 8 o'clock in the morning of the 18th, the three bridges were completed and the troops crossed.

General Sherman had reached Bridgeport at noon on the 17th, where he found Blair with a pontoon train. He had no serious difficulty in crossing the river; two of his divisions crossing that night and the third on the morning of the 18th. Sherman and McPherson both advanced. Sherman reaching Walnut Hills, near the position where he assaulted in December, 1862, from Chickasaw Bayou, on the afternoon of May 18th. The garrison from Haines' Bluff had retreated into Vicksburg and Sherman's advance was comparatively without any opposition. General Grant rode with him during this advance, and states that when Sherman first looked down over the ground of his operations in December, he turned to him, saying:

"That up to this minute he had felt no positive assurance of success. This, however, he said was the end of one of the greatest campaigns in history and I ought to make a report of it at once. Vicksburg was not yet captured, and there was no telling what might happen before it was taken; but whether captured or not, this was a complete and successful campaign." [Grant's memoirs.]

McPherson's corps entered the Jackson and Vicksburg road in the rear of Sherman's column, his right, Ransom's brigade, arriving near the Confederate lines, on the Jackson road, and went into camp near the "White House" on the evening of the 18th. McClernand's corps moved along the road nearest to the railroad, and then approached Vicksburg by way of the Baldwin's Ferry Road.

Sherman having approached the defenses of Vicksburg from the north, McPherson from the east, and McClernand from the southeast, their deployment secured an investment of Vicksburg by the morning of the 19th. The line, of course, was not fully complete, as the number of troops available to General Grant at that time was not sufficient to make a complete investment.

General Grant, believing that the demoralization of the Confederates after the defeat of Champion's Hill and Big Black River Ridge would lead them not to make great efforts in resistance, ordered an assault at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 19th. Beyond securing more advanced positions for his troops under complete cover, no particular advantage was gained by this assault.

Illinois had engaged on the 19th of May the 11th, 55th, 72d, 93d, 95th, 97th, 113th, 114th, 116th, 118th, 127th and 130th Infantry, Batteries A, B and H of the 1st Artillery, and sustained a loss of 262 in killed, wounded and missing.

During the 20th and 21st roads were being built in the rear of the army from Chickasaw Bayou which enabled General Grant to supply his army with regular rations by way of the Yazoo River, and by the night of the 21st full rations were issued to the entire army. Bread and coffee had become a luxury and were greatly appreciated.

General Grant feared that Johnston's army, which was very little inferior to his own in numbers at that time, and only fifty miles away, and which he knew was being constantly reinforced, might be moved to the relief or assistance of Pemberton before he could capture the garrison at Vicksburg. He, therefore, determined upon a second assault. A successful assault he felt would remove the necessity of large reinforcements being sent to him of troops which were very much wanted elsewhere, and would also set free his own army so that he might drive Johnston from the State. The troops themselves believed they could carry the works in their front, and General Grant feared that they would not work patiently in the trenches and siege operations if they had not been given an opportunity to try the assault.

A general assault by the three corps took place on the morning of the 22d, at 10 o'clock a. m. General McClernand reported that he had gained the enemy's works at several points, and upon his earnest request General Grant sent Quimby's division of McPherson's corps to his assistance, and Sherman's corps and McPherson's were ordered to renew their assaults as a diversion in their fronts to prevent the Confederates from massing against McClernand. The losses of the day were very severe without any result, beyond that of convincing the army, as well as its commander, that the strength of the assaulting army was not sufficient at that time to dispossess the Confederates by an assault.

Illinois had engaged on the 22d of May, the 8th, 11th, 13th, 17th, 20th, 30th, 31st, 33d, 45th, 47th, 55th, 56th, 72d, 77th, 81st, 93d, 95th, 97th, 99th, 113th, 114th, 116th, 118th, 124th, 127th and 130th Infantry, Batteries A, B, D, E and H of the 1st Artillery, Batteries A, F and L of the 2d Artillery and the Chicago Mercantile Battery, and sustained a loss of 1,005.

Union troops had gained the Confederate parapets in many places and planted their colors there, which could only be withdrawn under cover of the night.

General Grant now decided to lay siege to Vicksburg. Up to this time his entire army consisted of about 43,000 men, and of these a part of McArthur's division and Blair's division had only arrived in time to be made available at the battle of Champion's Hill, although neither of them actually participated in this battle. The Confederate forces consisted of over 60,000 men at Vicksburg, Grand Gulf, and Jackson. Had these been concentrated and not met General Grant's advances by sections, the campaign might have terminated otherwise. With this disparity of men against him General Grant upon the commencement of siege operations ordered additional troops to his assistance. Lauman's division of the 16th corps entered the investment line to the left of McClernand immediately after the 22d of May, as did also one of the brigades of McArthur's division, extending south to the Warrenton Road. By the middle of June, General Herron's division (two brigades) of the Army of the Frontier took position at the extreme left of the investment line, extending from the Warrenton to the Hall's Ferry Road, this allowed General Lauman's division to diminish the length of its line.

In the National Military Park at Vicksburg near the site of General Grant's headquarters has been placed an iron tablet bearing this inscription:

SIEGE OPERATIONS, MAY 23—JULY 4.

At the beginning of siege operations, May 23, about 162 guns were on the investment line, most of them in position in hastily constructed batteries. These were enlarged and strengthened and additional guns successively mounted in new batteries at advantageous positions. Embrasures of batteries close to the Confederate line closed against rifle balls by plank shutters or with bags of packed cotton. The first parallel made almost continuous from the right on the river to the left of the 13th Army Corps, and, as the approaches were carried forward, second and third parallels opened. Loopholes for sharpshooters made either with sand bags or in a timber on the parapet. Sixteen principal approaches began and 11 carried close to the Confederate line. They were loop-holed for sharpshooters wherever opportunity for fire was afforded. Nine galleries for mines started and 2 mines fired, both at the head of Logan's approach. At the end of the siege, July 4, about 220 guns, including all from the Navy, were on the investment line, largely in position; 89 batteries constructed, but about 20 abandoned and their guns moved to the exterior line or to advanced positions; aggregate length of Union trenches 12 miles.

The Confederate line of defense, 8 miles long, mounted about 130 guns in 67 batteries. Works and connecting curtains loop-holed for sharpshooters. Damage done them by the Union batteries repaired at night. A number of guns disabled by the fire of the Union batteries and, in most cases, new guns could not be mounted in their places. Countermine against Union approaches and mines prepared at 9 places and 4 fired. Retrenchments made in rear of some works but not used, as the line of defense was not anywhere broken. The defense largely confined to sharpshooting and maintained for 47 days without relief for the officers and men in the trenches, part of the time without sufficient rations.

Reported casualties. May 23—July 4: Union, killed 94, wounded 425, missing 119, total 638, 19 officers killed or mortally wounded; Confederate, not separately reported. Reported casualties, May 18—July 4: Union, killed 766, wounded 3,793, missing 276, total 4,835, 107 officers killed or mortally wounded. Confederate, River Batteries not included, killed 873, wounded 2,141, missing 158, total 3,172, 93 officers killed or mortally wounded.

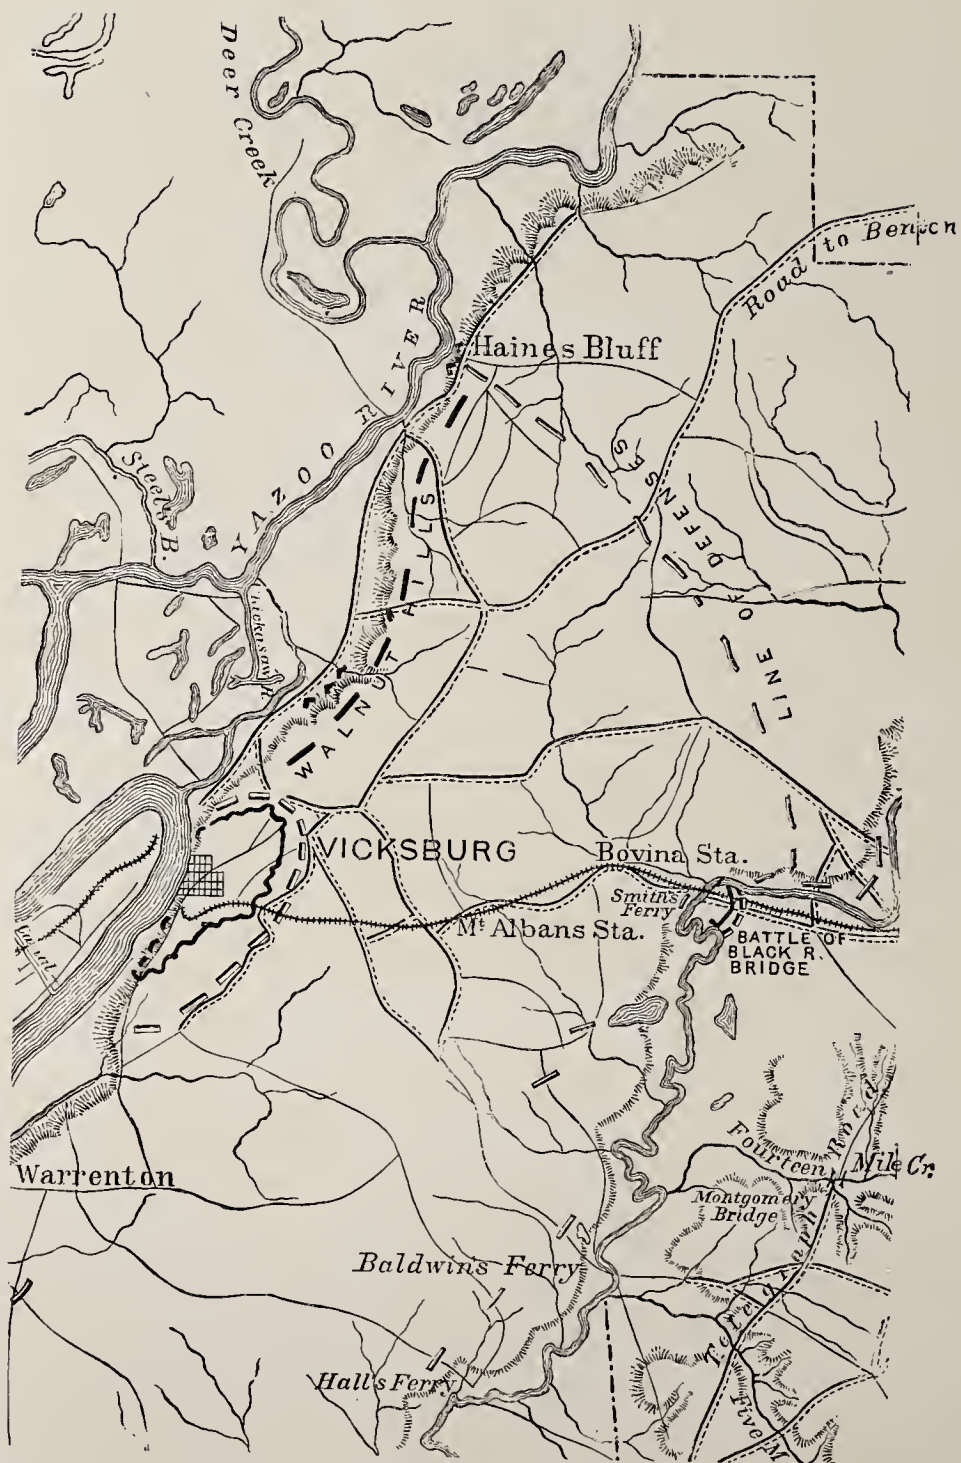

Two other divisions of the 16th Corps came down from Memphis early in June and were sent up the Yazoo River to Haines' Bluff, whence they formed in the exterior line from the Yazoo to the Big Black rivers in opposition to any movement General Johnston might make in the direction of raising the siege. General Grant had learned that Johnston was receiving reinforcements from Bragg, diminishing his army in Rosecrans' front in Tennessee, and therefore asked for additional reinforcements. Two divisions of the 9th Corps under General Parke reached the Yazoo about the 10th of June, and were also placed in the Yazoo and Big Black line, facing the east.

With these additional reinforcements in position, the siege operations continued daily with pick and spade. The contending forces in the beginning were not more than six hundred yards apart at any point, and not over one hundred yards in several instances. Gradual approaches were made at many points by trenches protected by sap rollers, sand bags and other devices, to prevent the firing of the Confederate sharpshooters from being dangerous, and in many cases, when the siege closed, the contending forces were only a few feet apart. It was General Grant's aim to so construct the works of the besieging army as to make them as strong for defense against the besieged, as their own works were against their assailants. By the 30th of June, General Grant had 220 guns in position, including a battery of heavy guns furnished, manned and commanded by the navy.

Very early during the investment many visitors from the North arrived, among whom was Governor Yates of Illinois with a number of state officials. They were conducted to Sherman's front, which at the time was least exposed, and introduced to General Sherman. On this occasion General Sherman assured Governor Yates and the other officers that General Grant was entitled to every bit of the credit for the campaign, that he himself had opposed it, and had written a letter about it to General Grant. General Grant urged for Sherman that his untiring energy and great efficiency during the campaign, which he did not approve of, entitled him to a full share of all the credit due for its success.

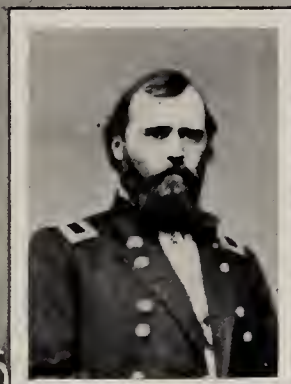

It was also necessary to maintain a force on the Louisiana side of the river to protect the free navigation of the river, to prevent reinforcements being sent to General Pemberton's army and also to prevent the escape of it. This force at Young's Point was entirely composed of Illinois troops. At Lake Providence a portion of McArthur's division, with some colored troops, was stationed, and at Milliken's Bend the garrison was entirely composed of colored soldiers, excepting that the 23d Iowa, which was just returning from the North, whither it had been sent with prisoners, happened to be on transports at the bank. On the 7th of June the Milliken's Bend garrison was attacked by about 2,000 men belonging to General Richard Taylor's Confederate command. The loss sustained in this engagement was fully equal to that of the battle of Raymond; it was almost entirely borne by colored troops, in great part commanded by men who had received their military education in Illinois regiments. They removed all doubt on that occasion as to their availability as soldiers. These troops were raw recruits, having been enlisted only a few days previously, but they behaved well and did splendid service.

Union loss, 101 killed, 285 wounded, 52 missing, total 438; Confederate loss, killed 44, wounded and missing 141, total 185. The Union forces were commanded by Colonel Hermann Lieb of the 9th Louisiana, of African descent, who had been Major of the 8th Illinois Infantry and commanded the skirmish line of Stevenson's Brigade, of Logan's Division, at Champion's Hill, and also at Vicksburg on May 22d, for which he received special commendation from his brigade commander.

On the 18th of June General McClelland was relieved from command of the 13th Corps by General Grant, and General E. O. C. Ord placed in command of the same. On the 22d of June, General Grant having been informed that some scouts of Johnston's had crossed the Big Black River, placed General Sherman in command of all the forces on the line from Haines' Bluff to the Big Black River, which comprised fully one-half of his troops about Vicksburg. It does not appear in any of the reports of the movements of Johnston's forces that any considerable organized body of his command ever succeeded in crossing the Big Black River during the siege.

Strong fortifications had been erected at Haines' Bluff and a line of works extending to the railroad crossing at the Big Black River, with batteries in position, had been constructed.

The Confederate works along the investment line in several places were undermined with the intention of exploding them. One such mine was located at the stockade redan on the grave yard road, and another one in Logan's front under the third Louisiana redan. This latter was exploded on June 25th, but the breach was not large enough to enable a column of attack to pass through, but immediately after the explosion the crater was taken possession of by two Illinois regiments and held for several days, by reliefs, without securing any available advantage. The defenders held it bravely, using hand grenades and fixed ammunition, which they rolled down the embankment, and the explosion of which made the position untenable by the attacking forces. The Union forces also carried shells, lighted the fuses by hand and then threw them over the parapets.

About the 21st of June when the lines of the two armies had come so close together that conversations were carried on between the pickets, General Grant learned through that source that the Confederate soldiers expected to escape by crossing to the Louisiana side under cover of night, and that many workmen were being employed in the city, building row boats and rafts for that purpose. General Grant immediately ordered all pickets doubled along the river on the Louisiana side, and Admiral Porter, with the navy, who was constantly in co-operation with General Grant throughout the campaign and siege, took steps which would have rendered any such attempt on the part of the Confederates futile and suicidal.

On July 1st many of the Union approaches were close up to the Confederate works, and at a number of points the Union forces could have moved under cover to within five to a hundred yards of the enemy's works. General Grant had given orders to make all preparations for an assault on the 4th day of July. The approaches had been so widened that the Union troops could move in them four abreast. They were supplied with planks and bags filled with cotton so that the Confederate ditches could have been easily filled and crossed over. At that time Johnston was between Brownsville and the Big Black, and wrote General Pemberton that about the 7th of July he would make an attempt to create a diversion during which Pemberton might cut his way out. On the same day General Pemberton addressed a letter to each of his division commanders, asking them for information as to the condition of their troops and their ability to make the marches and undergo the fatigues necessary to accomplish a successful evacuation. To this two of his general's replied by suggesting a surrender, the other two expressed the opinion that an attempt to evacuate would fail.

About 10 o'clock in the morning of the 3d, white flags appeared on a portion of the Confederate works in General A. J. Smith's front. Soon General Bowen, a division commander, and Colonel Montgomery, aid-de-camp to Pemberton, appeared with a letter from General Pemberton, proposing an armistice with a view of arranging terms for the capitulation of Vicksburg, and suggesting the appointment of three commissioners from each side for this purpose. He stated that this proposition was made to save the further effusion of blood, as he felt himself fully able to maintain his position for an indefinite period. General Grant replied to this note that the useless effusion of blood could be stopped at any moment by the unconditional surrender of the city and garrison, and that he did not favor the proposition of appointing commissioners to arrange terms of capitulation, because he had no terms other than those intimated. He also sent a verbal message, stating his willingness to meet General Pemberton at 3 o'clock in front of General McPherson's corps. General Pemberton appeared at 3 o'clock, accompanied by the same officers that had come under the previous flag of truce, and was met by General Grant, accompanied by Generals Ord, McPherson, Logan and A. J. Smith and several officers of his staff. General Bowen had been a neighbor of General Grant's in Missouri, and General Pemberton had served in the same division with him during the Mexican war, therefore, Generals Grant and Pemberton knew each other very well, and they greeted each other as old acquaintances. When asked by General Pemberton what terms he would give him, he answered the same as in his written reply, to which Pemberton replied, "The conference might as well end then," and turned abruptly, as if to leave. General Grant said, "Very well," but General Bowen suggested that he and one of Grant's generals should have a conference, to which General Grant made no objection, as nothing they might propose would be binding upon him. Generals A. J. Smith and Bowen then had a conference, during which General Pemberton and General Grant moved away in conversation. General Bowen suggested that the Confederate Army should be allowed to march out with the honors of war, carrying their small arms and field artillery. This was promptly rejected, and the interview ended, but General Grant agreed to send a letter with final terms about 10 o'clock that night, and stipulated that hostilities should not be resumed until the correspondence ceased. Admiral Porter was at the same time advised of the cessation of hostilities.

Upon General Grant's return to his headquarters he sent for his corps and division commanders of the army in the investment line. He informed them of the contents of General Pemberton's letters and his reply, and that he was willing to hear any suggestion, but would hold the power of deciding for himself. He then wrote a letter against the almost unanimous judgment of the council, if council of war this was, embracing these conditions:

"On your accepting the terms proposed, I will march in one division as a guard, and take possession at 8 a. m. to-morrow. As soon as rolls can be made out, and paroles be signed by officers and men, you will be allowed to march out of our lines, the officers taking with them their side arms and clothing, and the field, staff and cavalry officers one horse each. The rank and file will be allowed all their clothing, but no other property. If these conditions are accepted, any amount of rations you may deem necessary can be taken from the stores you now have, and also the necessary cooking utensils for preparing them. Thirty wagons also, counting two 2-horse or mule teams as one, will be allowed to transport such articles as cannot be carried along. The same conditions will be allowed to all sick and wounded officers and soldiers as fast as they become able to travel."—Memoirs General Grant.

Late at night on the 3d, General Pemberton proposed to accept the terms, in the main, but submitted that in justice, both to the honor and spirit of his troops manifested in the defense of Vicksburg, he proposed to evacuate the works in and around Vicksburg at 10 o'clock a. m. the next day, and to surrender the city and garrison by marching out with his colors and arms, stacking them in front of his present lines; officers to retain their side arms and personal property, and the rights and property of citizens to be respected. General Grant received this after midnight and declined to accede to the proposition in full. He said, however, if the proposition meant that each brigade should march out in front of its line and stack arms at 10 o'clock a. m. and then return to the inside and there remain as prisoners until properly paroled, he made no objection to it; and then closed by informing him that in the event that no notification be received by him of General Pemberton's acceptance of the terms offered by 9 o'clock in the morning, he would regard them as having been rejected and act accordingly. In the event that the terms should be accepted, white flags were to be displayed along the lines so that the Union troops would be fully notified, and so abstain from firing upon the Confederates. General Pemberton promptly accepted these terms. The army marched out in full view of the Union troops, who were ranged close together on the morning of the 4th of July, and, although men had fought bitterly and earnestly for forty-seven days in the trenches against each other, when the surrender took place there was a feeling of mixed joy and sorrow in the hearts of most of the Union soldiers, joy for their own achievement and sorrow for the defeat of their enemy. Not a cheer or a jeer arose along the Union lines when the Confederates moved out upon their works and grounded arms.

Logan's division, with Ransom's brigade of McArthur's division, which had approached nearest to the Confederate works, was the first to march in, and the 45th Illinois, the Lead Mine regiment hailing from Galena, General Grant's own town, led the way, and its flag was hoisted upon the court house to proclaim to the world that Vicksburg was once again under the flag of the Union.

General Grant was criticized in several quarters for paroling the garrison of Vicksburg, numbering about 30,000 men. His reasons for doing so were that an unconditional surrender meant the transporting to Cairo and the North 30,000 men which would have had to be subsisted and would have required a considerable force to properly escort and guard them. The terms of the cartel, at that time in force, required that prisoners captured by either army should be forwarded as speedily as possible to Aikens Landing on the James River, Virginia, or to Vicksburg, Mississippi, for exchange, or parole until they could be exchanged. A Confederate commissioner was at that time at Vicksburg with authority to make the exchange. General Grant did not care to take him prisoner, but preferred to leave him free to perform the functions of his office. This, an unconditional surrender, if insisted upon by General Grant, would have made it impossible to secure. General Grant also knew that after the Government would have gone to the expense of transporting this great army of prisoners to Aikens Landing, there would have been no Union prisoners to get in exchange, and they would then have to be paroled. The additional reason that prompted General Grant to liberate this great body of Confederate troops on parole was the fact that the most of them lived in the southwest; and he believed many of them were tired of the war and would go home as soon as possible, not to return to their colors again.

General Grant rode into Vicksburg with the troops, and exchanged congratulations at the river bank with the navy upon what he was pleased to call, their joint victory. He returned to his old headquarters, near the grave yard road, in the afternoon, where he remained until the 6th; but on the afternoon of the 4th he sent a special bearer of dispatches to Cairo, the nearest telegraph town. In this he informed General Halleck that the enemy had surrendered, that the only terms allowed were their parole as prisoners of war, which he regarded as a great advantage at that moment, as it saved several days in the capture, and left his troops and transports ready for immediate service. He also informed the commander-in-chief that Sherman with a large force would move immediately on Johnston to drive him from the State, and that he would send troops to the relief of Banks, and would return the 9th army corps under Parke.

While negotiations were going on for the surrender, General Grant instructed Sherman to be ready to take the offensive against Johnston, and drive him out of the State and destroy his army, if he could. Steele's division of the 15th corps and the 13th corps, under General Ord, was directed to join Sherman immediately upon the surrender.

General Banks was informed of the fall of Vicksburg and of the terms of capitulation and that the necessary troops to insure the capture of Port Hudson would be furnished him. The letter giving this information was manifolded in print by General Banks who contrived to have copies of it fall into the hands of General Gardner, the Confederate commander at Port Hudson, who at once asked General Banks to confirm the truth of the statements contained therein. Upon being assured that they were absolutely true, General Gardner surrendered unconditionally on the 9th of July. From that day on, the Mississippi river throughout its entire length continued in possession of the Union armies. The Confederate prisoners moved out of Vicksburg on July 11th to their parole camp (in Alabama). During the interval between the surrender and this date they were permitted to occupy their own camps behind the intrenchments, the only restraint or control placed upon them was that of their own officers. They were supplied with food by the Union commissaries, and the men of both armies were as friendly as though they belonged to the same cause. General Grant says, that "the fate of the Confederacy was sealed when Vicksburg fell, the morale was with the supporters of the Union thereafter."*

At Vicksburg 31,600 prisoners were surrendered,* about 60,000 muskets with an abundant supply of ammunition and 172 cannon. General Grant says of the effect upon his army by the siege of Vicksburg: "A military education was acquired which no other school could have given. Men who thought a company was quite enough for them to command properly at the beginning would have made good regimental or brigade commanders; most of the brigade commanders were equal to the command of a division, and one, Ransom, would have been equal to the command of a corps at least. Logan and Crocker ended the campaign fitted to command independent armies."

The Illinois regiments that served in the investment line were the 8th, 11th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 17th, 20th, 30th, 31st, 32d, 33d, 37th, 41st, 45th, 46th, 47th, 53d, 55th, 56th, 72d, 76th, 77th, 81st, 87th, 93d, 94th, 95th, 97th, 99th, 113th, 114th, 116th, 118th, 124th, 127th and 130th Infantry. Of the Batteries, Battery A, B, D, E and H of the 1st Artillery, Battery A, F, G and L of the 2d Artillery and the Chicago Mercantile Battery served in the investment line during the siege. The loss sustained by Illinois commands from May 23d to July 4th during the siege was 441.

Johnston having heard of the surrender of Vicksburg immediately fell back on Jackson, Sherman moved promptly on the 5th of July, was within ten miles of Jackson on the 8th and on the 11th he was close enough to the City of Jackson and its defenses to shell the town. In addition to the army that opposed Johnston, during the latter part of the siege, he had Steele's division of the 15th corps and also all of the 13th corps to make up his army to drive Johnston from the State. The siege of Jackson continued until the morning of the 17th when it was found that Johnston and his army had evacuated during the night of the 16th. Steele's division went in pursuit as far as Brandon. Some of the troops from Illinois that sustained but little loss during the siege belonged to Lauman's division. They suffered severely in this short campaign and siege during which they formed part of the 13th corps.

Altogether the losses of the Union forces in the second campaign against and the second capture of Jackson was about 1,122 counting killed, wounded and missing. The Confederate loss was much smaller in killed and wounded but more prisoners were taken from the Confederates than the entire number of the Union losses.

Illinois alone in her troops engaged in this campaign sustained a loss of 492 in killed, wounded and missing and of the total number of officers killed and mortally wounded amounting to 21, Illinois contributed 11. The Illinois commands participating in this short campaign were the 26th, 90th, 40th, 103d, 48th, 118th, 77th, 97th, 130th, 87th, 33d, 99th, 41st, 53d, 14th, 15th, 46th, 76th, 28th, 32d, 13th, 113th, 116th, 55th, 127th and 114th Infantry regiments. Batteries A, B, E, F, H, I of the First Artillery; A, E and K of Second Artillery. Cogswell's Battery Light Artillery and the Chicago Mercantile Battery; part of the 2d and 3d Cavalry, the 5th Cavalry, the Kane County Cavalry Company Thielemann's Cavalry Battalion and part of the 15th Cavalry.

After having made proper provision for the care of the Confederate wounded at Jackson, and supplied medicine and food for the destitute families at Jackson and Raymond, General Sherman's army returned very nearly to the position previously occupied by it.

This second Jackson campaign was treated by General Grant as the finish and finale of the Vicksburg campaign. After this only a small body of troops was stationed at Vicksburg. The 13th corps was sent to General Banks, Department of the Gulf, and most of the 15th and 16th corps were sent to Memphis, Tennessee, and a portion of the 17th corps remained in Vicksburg the rest of the year.

Speaking in retrospect of the campaign, General Grant says:

"The campaign of Vicksburg was suggested and developed by circumstances. The elections of 1862 had gone against the prosecution of the war. Voluntary enlistments had nearly ceased and the draft had been resorted to; this was resisted, and a defeat or backward movement would have made its execution impossible. A forward movement to a decisive victory was necessary. Accordingly I resolved to get below Vicksburg, unite with Banks against Port Hudson, make New Orleans a base and with that base and Grand Gulf as a starting point move our combined forces against Vicksburg. Upon reaching Grand Gulf after running its batteries and fighting a battle, I received a letter from Banks informing me that he could not be at Port Hudson under ten days and then with only fifteen thousand men. The time was worth more than the re-enforcements; I, therefore, determined to push into the interior of the enemy's country."

"With a large river behind us, held above and below by the enemy, rapid movements were essential to success. Jackson was captured the day after a new commander had arrived and only a few days before large re-enforcements were expected. A rapid movement west was made; the garrison of Vicksburg was met in two engagements and badly defeated, and driven back into its stronghold and there successfully besieged. It looks now as though Providence had directed the course of the campaign while the Army of the Tennessee executed the decree."

CORRESPONDENCE OF CONFEDERATE COMMANDERS.

The correspondence of the Confederate commanders during the period of the siege represents their positions and their point of view so strongly, it forms such an important historic side light to the preceding sketch, which is written from the Union point of view, that it is deemed suitable for reproduction here. The light that these letters shed depict with great clearness the marvelous skill and forethought of Grant's generalship which had forestalled, and provided for the prevention of each and every one of the various devices, in the minds of the Confederate commanders, for the relief or escape of the garrison in Vicksburg.

GENERAL PEMBERTON TO GENERAL JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON:

General:

Vicksburg, June 7, 1863.

I am still without information from you later than your dispatch of the 25th (May), the enemy continues to intrench his positions around Vicksburg. I have sent out couriers to you almost daily. The same men are constantly in the trenches, but are still in good spirits expecting your approach.

The enemy is so vigilant that it is impossible to obtain reliable information. When may I expect you to move and in what direction. My subsistence may be put down for about twenty days.

Vicksburg, June 10, 1863.

The enemy bombards the city day and night from seven mortars on opposite side of peninsula. He also keeps up constant fire on our lines with artillery and sharpshooters. We are losing many officers and men. I am waiting most anxiously to know your intentions; have heard nothing of you or from you since 25th of May. I shall endeavor to hold out as long as we have anything to eat. Can you not send me a verbal message by a courier crossing the river above or below and swimming across again opposite Vicksburg.

Vicksburg, June 12, 1863.

Courier Walker arrived this morning with caps (percussion). No message from you. Very heavy firing yesterday from mortars and on lines.

Vicksburg, June 14, 1863.

Last night Captain Sanders arrived with 200,000 caps but brought no information as to your position or movements. The enemy is landing troops in large numbers on Louisiana shore above Vicksburg. They are probably from Memphis but it may be from Yazoo; I cannot ascertain positively. On the graveyard road the enemy has run his sap to within twenty-five yards of our works. He will probably attempt to sink a mine. I shall try to thwart him. I am anxiously expecting to hear from you, to arrange for co-operation.

Vicksburg, June 15, 1863.

Our men have no relief; are becoming much fatigued but are still in good spirits. I think your movement should be made as soon as possible. The enemy is receiving reinforcements. We are living on greatly reduced rations, but I think sufficient for twenty days yet.

Vicksburg, June 19, 1863.

The enemy opened all his batteries on our lines about 3:30 this morning and continued the heaviest fire we have yet sustained until 8:00 o'clock, but he did not assault our works. Artillery reported to have been distinctly heard about 2:00 A. M. toward east of Snyder's Mill. Supposed to have been an engagement with your troops. On the graveyard road the enemy's works are within twenty-five feet of our redan. Also very close on Jackson and Baldwin's Ferry road. I hope you will advance with the least possible delay. My men have been thirty-four days and nights in trenches without relief, and the enemy is within conversation distance. We are living on very reduced rations, and, as you know, are entirely isolated. What aid am I to expect from you. The bearer Captain George D. Wise, can be confided in.

Vicksburg, June 21, 1863.

Your dispatches of the 14th and 16th received. If it is absolutely impossible, in your opinion, to raise the siege with our combined forces, and that nothing more can be done than to extricate the garrison, I suggest that, giving me full information and time to act, you move by the north of the railroad, drive in the enemy's pickets by night, and at daylight next morning engage him heavily with skirmishers, occupying him during the entire day, and that on that night I move by the Warrenton Road, by Hankinson's Ferry, to which point you should previously send a brigade of cavalry with two field batteries, to build a bridge there and hold that ferry; also Hall's and Baldwin's to cover my crossing at Hankinson's. I shall not be able to move with my artillery or wagons. I suggest this as the best plan because all the other roads are too strongly intrenched and the enemy in too heavy force for a reasonable prospect of success. Unless you move in sufficient force to compel him to abandon his communications with Snyder's, which I still hope we may be able to do I await your orders. Captain J. M. Couper understands all my views and will explain further.

Vicksburg, June 23, 1863.

If I cut my way out, this important position is lost, and many of my men too. Can we afford that. If I cannot cut my way out, both position and all my men are lost. This we cannot afford. Should suggest the probability of Grant's being open to terms that can result more to our advantage than either of the above actions. Not knowing your force or plans, he may accede to your proposition to pass this army out with all its arms and equipage. This proposal would come with greater prospects of success and better grace from you, while it necessarily could not come at all from me. You could make the showing of my ability and strength to still hold out for several weeks longer, which together with his impression regarding your strength, might operate upon him to comply with your terms. While I make this suggestion, I still renew my hope of your being, by force of arms, enabled to act with me in saving this vital point. I will strain every nerve to hold out, if there is hope of our ultimate relief, for fifteen days longer. It is reported that some of the enemy's forces are moving up toward the Yazoo. It is also reported that some of his forces have moved along the Hall's Ferry Road, to Big Bayou, near Warrenton, where they are temporarily massing. These movements indicate the lengthening of the enemy's lines and the increase of the area of his operations.

Vicksburg, June 28, 1863.

Dispatches of 19th and 22d received. I am surprised that you have so small a force, but as the enemy has separated his so much and occupies so long a line, could not a combined vigorous effort even yet raise the siege? The enemy occupies the Peninsula opposite the city, and I think it would be entirely impracticable for General Taylor either to put in supplies or to cross the river, and equally so for me to cross the garrison over.

GENERAL JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON TO GENERAL PEMBERTON:

Jackson, June 14, 1863.

All that we can attempt is to save you and your garrison. To do this exact co-operation is indispensable. By fighting the enemy simultaneously at the same point of his line, you may be extricated. Our joint forces cannot raise the siege of Vicksburg. My communication with the rear can best be preserved by operating north of the railroad. Your dispatch of the 12th is received. General Taylor with eight thousand men will endeavor to open communication with you from Richmond, (La).

Jackson, June 16th, 1863.

I am too weak to save Vicksburg. Can do no more than to attempt to save you and your garrison. It will be impossible to extricate you unless you co-operate and we make mutually supporting movements. Communicate your plans and suggestions if possible.

Jackson, June 22, 1863.

Your dispatch of the 17th received. General Richard Taylor is sent by General E. K. Smith to co-operate with you from the west bank of the river; to throw in supplies and to cross with his force if expedient and practicable. I will have the means of moving toward the enemy in a day or two and will try to make a diversion in your favor, and if possible communicate with you though I fear my force is too small to effect the latter. I have only two-thirds of the force you told messenger Sanders to state to me as the least with which you think I ought to make an attack.

If I can do nothing to relieve you, rather than surrender the garrison, endeavor to cross the river at the last moment if you and General Taylor communicate.

June 27, 1863.

Your dispatch of the 22d is received. General E. K. Smith's troops have been mismanaged, and have fallen back to Delhi. I have sent a special messenger, urging him to assume the direct command. The determined spirit you manifest, and his expected co-operation encourage me to hope that something may yet be done to save Vicksburg, and to postpone both of the modes suggested of merely extricating the garrison. Negotiations with Grant for the relief of the garrison, should they become necessary, must be made by you. It would be a confession of weakness on my part, which I ought not to make, to propose them. When it becomes necessary to make terms they may be considered as under my authority. (This message was never received by General Pemberton until a copy was furnished him on August 19th.)

Camp near Birdsong Ferry, July 3, 1863.

Your dispatches of June 28 were destroyed by messenger. He states that General Smith's troops were driven back to Monroe. This statement and his account of your condition make me think it necessary to create a diversion, and thus enable you to cut your way out, if the time has come for you to do this. Of that time I cannot judge; you must, as it depends upon your condition. I hope to attack the enemy in your front about the 7th, and your co-operation will be necessary. The manner and the proper point for you to bring the garrison out must be determined by you from your superior knowledge of the ground and distribution of the enemy's forces. Our firing will show you where we are engaged. If Vicksburg cannot be saved, the garrison must.

GENERAL JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON TO LT. GEN. E. KIRBY SMITH; commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department.

Jackson, Miss., June 26, 1863.

You have probably learned before this reaches you of the critical aspect of affairs at Vicksburg. General Pemberton is closely invested with his garrison numbering about eighteen thousand effectives. It is impossible with the force the Government has to put at my disposal to raise the siege of the City. The most that I can do is possibly to extricate the army, leaving the place in possession of the enemy. If forced to the alternative, this is what I shall be compelled to do, however reluctantly. Our only hope of saving Vicksburg now depends on the operations of your troops on the other side of the river. General Pemberton says he has provisions for a fortnight; perhaps he has them for a longer time. Now, if you contrive either to plant artillery on the Mississippi banks, drive beef into Vicksburg, or join the garrison should it be practicable or expedient, we may be able to save the City. Your troops up to this time have done nothing. Placing the highest confidence in your intelligence, skill, enthusiasm, and appreciation of the mighty stake involved in the great issue now pending, I have earnestly to suggest that you will repair with all possible dispatch in person to the scene of action and do whatsoever in your judgment you may deem best to accomplish the immense result of saving Vicksburg and our communications with your department. (To this is written a postscript.) An intelligent officer who brought dispatches from General Pemberton, expresses confidence that if your troops could send in an abundance of cattle and themselves (8,000) join the garrison, the place would be saved.

PRESIDENT JEFFERSON DAVIS TO LIEUT. GEN. E. KIRBY SMITH, Care of General Joseph E. Johnston, Jackson, Miss.

Richmond, (Va.) July 2, 1863.

I am convinced that the safety of Vicksburg depends on your prompt and efficient co-operation. As far as practicable, I desire you to move your forces to the Mississippi River, and command in person operations for the relief of the besieged city.

MAJOR GEN. JOHN G. WALKER TO LIEUT. GEN. E. KIRBY SMITH.

General: Headquarters Walker's Division, Delhi, July 3, 1863.

In reference to your inquiry as to the practicability of throwing re-enforcements and provisions into Vicksburg, I am reluctantly compelled to state that, with the force at my disposal or within my reach, I consider it utterly impracticable.

To reach a point on the Mississippi, opposite Vicksburg, it would be necessary to march for 20 or 30 miles into the narrow peninsula at the eastern extremity of which that city is situated, while on the right and left, only a few miles distant by practicable roads, overwhelming forces can without difficulty be thrown upon my rear, which could not fail to secure the destruction or capture of my command. In my frequent conferences with Major-General Taylor, while he was conducting in person the operations of my present command, he constantly expressed the utmost anxiety to relieve Vicksburg, but after the 7th of June, (the battle of Milliken's Bend) he considered it so impracticable for my constantly and rapidly diminishing strength to effect this much desired end, that he ordered the withdrawal of the troops. This order was afterward countermanded, and for two weeks I have sought every opportunity to strike an effective blow for the safety of Vicksburg; but such has been the strength of the enemy's forces at Milliken's Bend, Young's Point, and other places along the shores of the Mississippi, that I have been unable to effect anything more than a diversion of a considerable column of the enemy's troops to watch my movements.

At Richmond, La., on the 15th of June, I was attacked by a column of about 8,000 infantry and three batteries. The same day three brigades of the enemy's troops crossed the Mississippi from Warrenton, and moved across the peninsula to Young's Point. I mention these circumstances to show that my forces have not been idle and to illustrate the ease and rapidity with which the enemy can throw any required number of troops upon the peninsula, to crush any small force that should attempt to pass into the narrow strip leading to Vicksburg. The same is true in regard to the establishment of batteries upon the Mississippi, to prevent the passage of re-enforcements to the enemy. I have examined carefully every point from Young's to Lake Providence, in order to get such a position, but between those points there is no position that my small force could occupy more than a few hours. If there was the slightest hope that my small command could relieve Vicksburg, the mere probability of its capture or destruction ought not, and should not, as far as I am concerned, weigh a feather against making the attempt, but I consider it absolutely certain, unless the enemy are blind and stupid, that no part of my command would escape capture or destruction if such an attempt should be made.

The text of this generous letter is printed in Nicolay and Hay's Life of Lincoln. General Grant abstains from mentioning it in his Memoirs. In a letter published in the Official Rebellion Records, which is reproduced in order to call attention to conditions then confronting the Government, Mr. Lincoln again refers to it.

Executive Mansion.

Washington, July 13 . 1863.

Major General Grant
My dear General

I do not remember that you and I ever met personally. I write this now as a grateful acknowledgment for the almost inestimable service you have done the country. I wish to say a word further. When you first reached the vicinity of Vicksburg, I thought you should do, what you finally did—March the troops across the neck, run the batteries with the transports, and ^{then} go below; and I never had any faith, except a general hope that you knew better than I, that the Yazoo River expedition, and the like, could succeed. When you got below, and took Port Gibson, Grand Gulf, and vicinity, I thought you should go down the river to and join Gen. Banks; and when you turned North, down East of the Big Black, I feared it was a mistake. I now wish to make the personal acknowledgment that you were right, and I was wrong.

Yours very truly
A. Lincoln

"Maj.-Gen. U. S. Grant:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, Aug. 9, 1863.

"I see by a dispatch of yours that you incline quite strongly toward an expedition against Mobile. This would appear tempting to me also, were it not that, in view of recent events in Mexico, I am greatly impressed with the importance of re-establishing the national authority in Western Texas as soon as possible. I am not making an order, however; that I leave, for the present at least, to the General-in-Chief.

"A word upon another subject. General Thomas has gone again to the Mississippi Valley, with the view of raising colored troops. I have no reason to doubt that you are doing what you reasonably can upon the same subject. I believe it is a resource which, if vigorously applied now, will soon close the contest. It works doubly—weakening the enemy and strengthening us. We were not fully ripe for it until the river was opened. Now I think at least 100,000 can and ought to be organized along its shores, relieving all the white troops to serve elsewhere.

"Mr. Dana understands you as believing that the emancipation proclamation has helped some in your military operations. I am very glad if this is so.

"Did you receive a short letter from me dated the 13th of July?

"A. LINCOLN."

RÉSUMÉ

Originally and up to May 18, 1863, when the investment of the Confederate defenses of Vicksburg proper began, Grant's army consisted of the Thirteenth army corps under Maj. Gen. John A. McClernand, the Fifteenth army corps under Maj. Gen. W. T. Sherman, and the Seventeenth army corps under Maj. Gen. James B. McPherson, all of the Army of the Tennessee. These three corps alone conducted the campaign up to the date of the beginning of the siege, and fought the battle of Port Gibson on May 1st, captured Grand Gulf May 3d, fought the battle of Raymond May 12th, Jackson May 14th, Champion's Hill May 16th, Big Black River May 17th, and drove the Confederates, under Pemberton, into his line of defenses at Vicksburg, May 18th.

His great army, which after 47 days of siege, finally brought about the surrender of Pemberton's army in Vicksburg, and which held at bay a Confederate relieving army to the east in Mississippi, and another one to the west in Louisiana, had five army corps, 17 divisions and 45 brigades.

The troops composing General Grant's army at the final close of the campaign on July 4th were 199 regiments of Infantry, 19 organizations of Cavalry and 46 batteries of Artillery, a total of 264 commands.

The troops comprising the two Confederate armies under Generals Pemberton and Johnston consisted of 141 regiments of Infantry, 26 organizations of Cavalry and 62 batteries of Artillery, a total of 229 commands.

This does not include the command of Gen. Taylor and Walker's Division, on Louisiana side, consisting of 8,000 men.

The Union losses reported were killed and wounded during the campaign 9,135 and 1,007 missing or captured, a total of 10,142.

The losses of Illinois commands during this period were 2,417 killed, wounded and missing.

To the Union losses should be added those sustained in the effort to drive Johnston's army from the State, which General Grant considered as the real closing chapter of the Vicksburg campaign and which amounted in killed, wounded and missing to 1,122, making a total Union loss of 11,164. Illinois in this subsequent short campaign sustained a loss of 492, this added to her losses up to July 4th makes a total of 2,920. Over 25 per cent of the entire Union losses.

The Confederate losses were only partially reported during the siege but they are put down by the War Department as having amounted in killed and wounded throughout the campaign to July 4th, as 5,291 and 3,808 as missing, a total of 9,091. This does not include the Confederate loss at Milliken's Bend which is admitted by General McCullough to have amounted to 175 killed and wounded and 10 missing, a total of 185. It also does not take note of the men surrendered by General Pemberton on July 4th numbering 29,491,* making a total loss so far as reported, of 38,767 during the campaign up to July 4th. To this should be added the loss sustained during the second Jackson campaign, and its capture, for which data are obtainable only for one of Johnston's five divisions, so far as killed and wounded are concerned. In this short campaign, and in several Union expeditionary movements, the Confederates sustained a loss of 1,147 in captured, aside from 50 reported killed and wounded in General Bowen's division, making a total reported loss aggregating 39,964 from May 1st to July 20th 1863.

During this campaign a fleet under Admiral Porter was in constant co-operation with General Grant's army, his mortar boats bombarded the City from the opposite side of the river throughout the siege. A number of the naval boats were largely manned by soldiers from Illinois regiments and batteries.

The Mississippi Marine brigade commanded by General Ellet, from Illinois, and whose officers and men in great proportion were from Illinois, also did efficient service in co-operation with the Army and Navy during the progress of this campaign.

The officers from Illinois killed in the battles preceding the siege and during the siege, and who died of wounds while the siege was in progress, were more than one-third of the total loss of officers sustained by the Union army. These are their names:

- Col. John N. Cromwell, Peoria, 47th Inf.; Battle of Jackson, May 14th.
- Col. James J. Dollins, Benton, 81st Inf.; Assault of Vicksburg, May 22nd.
- Lieut.-Col. Evan Richards, Mt. Pleasant, 20th Inf.; Raymond, May 12th.

 Lieut. Hiram McClintock, Lyons, 127th Inf.; Champion's Hill, May 16th.
 Lieut. Henry C. Mowry, Chicago, 72nd Inf.; Assault Vicksburg, May 22nd.
 Lieut. James H. Bingham, Plymouth, 72nd Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Zebedee Hammock, Tamaroa, 81st Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. William L. Farmer, Fredonia, 81st Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Hugh Warnock, Du Quoin, 81st Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Thomas J. Kinman, Pike Co., 99th Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Nathan W. Wheeler, Decatur, 116th Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Abraham E. Lippincott, Pinckneyville, 81st Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. James E. Sponable, Marengo, 95th Inf.; Assault, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Wm. Gray, New Salem, 99th Inf.; Assault Vicksburg, May 22nd.
 Lieut. Andrew E. Walbright, Massac Co., 56th Inf.; During Siege.
 Lieut. Julius A. Pratt, Kewanee, 124th Inf.; During Siege.
 Lieut. James M. Moore, Morgan, 17th Inf.; During Siege.
 Lieut. Peter J. Williams, Milford, 76th Inf.; During Siege.
 Lieut. Henry Miars, Ava, 81st Inf.; During Siege.

In General Sherman's short campaign from July 5th to the 17th resulting in the second capture of Jackson these Illinois officers were killed and mortally wounded being more than one-half of all casualties of this kind among the officers of Sherman's army.

Col. Seth C. Earl, Ottawa, 53d Infantry.
 Major Francis M. Long, Taylorville, 41st Infantry.
 Major William J. Stephenson, Louisville, 48th Infantry.

NOTE: This statement takes no cognizance of the Confederate District of West Louisiana, commanded by General Richard Taylor whose troops were throughout the siege attempting to cut off the Union supplies from the north, by the river, to throw in supplies to the Confederates in Vicksburg and to support a retreat of the Confederate army at Vicksburg by way of the Louisiana shore should that be determined upon. This army is reported by the Confederates themselves to have consisted of eight thousand men. Walker's division alone was composed of three brigades, having not less than twelve regiments.

*No loss reported.

†By a ruling of the War Department casualties sustained after the assault of May 22, 1863, that were not then reported by brigade or higher commanders, were not allowed to be inscribed upon the regimental monuments erected by Illinois in the Vicksburg Military Park. Names have been ascertained of the men actually killed or mortally wounded during the period of the siege, and so far as they are known, they are accounted for in the foregoing table. The discrepancy between the numbers, as stated on this table and the inscriptions upon the regimental monuments is thus explained.

GENERAL GRANT AND HORSE.

In our endeavor to obtain the pictures of the Colonels from Illinois that commanded brigades during the Vicksburg campaign we published an announcement in the National Tribune of Washington, D. C., that we desired such pictures. This was read in the City of Mexico by Captain J. J. Fitzgerald, who became the Adjutant of the 81st Illinois Volunteers during the Vicksburg campaign, and who has been domiciled in Mexico for many years. He sent us this picture of Colonel Dollins, with its interesting story.

A day or two before Logan's Division left Milliken's Bend, some camp follower established a "picture gallery" on the banks of the Mississippi River. Colonel Dollins on April 17th had an ambrotype taken in this place which was never delivered to him by the photographer. The march of the Vicksburg campaign began a day or two after; Colonel Dollins, after participating in all the operations and most of the battles of the campaign, was killed on May 22d, while gallantly leading his regiment, the 81st, in the assault of that day.

On December 9, 1864, Captain Fitzgerald was taken prisoner by General Hood in his operations against Nashville, Tennessee, and so also was Colonel Robert Buchanan of the 7th Missouri, which regiment was brigaded with the 81st during the Vicksburg campaign. These officers were taken to Fort Donelson under a flag of truce, and sent to a parole camp at Benton Barracks, Missouri. Here Captain Fitzgerald was assigned to duty as Adjutant-General on the staff of the commanding officer.

An officer of the 7th Missouri was in command of one of the camps for Confederate prisoners in St. Louis. In this a prisoner arrived, captured in Missouri during General Price's raid into that State in the fall of 1864. In examining the person of this prisoner, the 7th Missouri officer found upon him this ambrotype picture of Colonel Dollins, whom he recognized at once.

In explanation, the prisoner said that he had been a member of McCullough's Texas Brigade that attacked the negro garrison at Milliken's Bend on June 7, 1863, and during that attack he made a raid on the "picture gallery," and seeing the picture of Colonel Dollins there he appropriated it, recognizing him as an old townsman, whom he had known while living at Benton, Illinois. The Missouri Captain confiscated the picture, turned it over to Colonel Buchanan, and he in turn presented it to Captain Fitzgerald, Colonel Dollins' former Adjutant and relative. It shows Colonel Dollins in the uniform he wore when leading the fateful assault.

AFTER THE SIEGE

Shortly after the surrender General Grant directed the filling in of all the ditches and approaches prepared by the Union Army during the siege operations along the investment line of Vicksburg, to prevent the possibility of their being again used by an army that might be gathered to contest the possession of Vicksburg by the National troops. In the winter of 1863 to 1864 a large portion of the garrison which was retained in Vicksburg was utilized to construct a new line of defensive works. This was very much shorter and less comprehensive in territory than that built by the Confederates. This line of defenses and Vicksburg as it was at that time is shown on the accompanying map. It will be noted that all the defensive operations of Vicksburg from its earliest history started at the north on a high bluff near the River which the Spaniards, in their day, called Fort Nogales, the Confederates called it Fort Hill and on this shorter line it was called Battery Hickenlooper.

THE NATIONAL CEMETERY.

In 1865, the Government of the United States located a National Cemetery near Vicksburg. It placed the Quartermaster's Department in charge of the gathering up of the remains of all Union soldiers, who were killed or died of disease in the vicinity of Vicksburg, and of their re-interment in this Cemetery. The site was selected north of the City at a point where in 1863, the extreme right of Sherman's corps, Steele's division, rested on the Mississippi River during the siege. It was connected with the City by a beautiful driveway along the River front, which is an extension of Washington street, then, as now, its principal business thoroughfare. This was built by the General Government. The ground was partly located on the River bottom land and partly on the slope leading to the high plateau of a bluff rising several hundred feet above the River, which was then the Mississippi, immediately facing the angle near which the ship Cincinnati of the Navy was sunk by the fire of the guns from the Confederate Fort Hill. This site has been laid out with great engineering skill and beautified by the art of the landscape gardener. The terraced roads by which the visitor now ascends from the main entrance to the summit and the magnificent shrubs and trees of luxuriant foliage make this cemetery one of the most beautiful, of the eighty-three National Cemeteries.

Here rest in peace nearly 17,000 Union soldiers, of whom 12,721 are unknown. While this cemetery only contains about forty acres of land, it is exceeded by that at Arlington, Virginia, alone, in the number of its silent inhabitants. It is surrounded by a substantial brick wall which is almost entirely covered by a growth of English ivy which very much mellows down and gives an air of restfulness to the picture, which is in sharp contrast with the conditions of the stirring days of cruel activity which gave it birth.

Suitable buildings are within this enclosure to comfortably house the Superintendent, who is a veteran Union soldier, the gardener and other employees. From its magnificent steel flag staff floats from sunrise to sunset every day the banner of our Nation. Upon the highest eminence in this Park of the dead has been placed the marble shaft which on July 4th, 1864, was erected upon the site occupied by Generals Grant and Pemberton during the negotiations for the surrender. This monument remained there for about ten years, but being then in a very neglected place it had been seriously injured by vandals and relic hunters. To avoid its entire destruction it was placed in its present site. It has been substituted by the planting of an indestructible cannon at the surrender site.

This Cemetery, as all other National Cemeteries, is under the immediate control and supervision of the Quartermaster's Department of the War Department. In it, by the consent of the Secretary of War, who controls the National Park as well, have been placed some of the regimental monuments and markers which properly belong to the National Military Park of Vicksburg. While the jurisdiction of the Park Commissioners does not cover the territory occupied by the Cemetery, an arrangement between the two authorities has been effected by which the locations and commemoration of the services of Union troops who served on this site during the siege has been made possible.

THE VICKSBURG NATIONAL MILITARY PARK.

The National Military Park at Vicksburg is the last of the four great Military Parks established by Congress, the others being located upon the fields of Gettysburg, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain and Shiloh. The Act, providing for this Park, was passed in February, 1899, and signed by President McKinley on the 21st of that month. These Military Parks are not designed to commemorate either victory or defeat, but as monuments to the heroism of the American citizen soldier during the most trying period of our Nation's existence, and as object lessons of the struggles for the maintenance of the Union, and their cost.

The Act creating this Park states "that in order to commemorate the campaign, siege and defense of Vicksburg, and to preserve the history of the battle and operations of the siege and defense on the ground where they were fought and carried on, the battle field of Vicksburg in the State of Mis-

Mississippi is declared to be a National Military Park whenever the title to the same shall have been acquired by the United States."

This Park differs in its nature from the others in that it depicts and commemorates a siege. The land embraced within it covers the operations and preserves the lines of opposing armies engaged as assailants or defenders over the same ground for a period of forty-seven days. It shows the progress of the operations of the siege and the locations and positions of the opposing forces at its conclusion; while the other National Parks cover and mark the operations of armies pitched against each other in battle array with constantly shifting positions.

Congress enacted the law and provided for its execution, but it is just to state that the conception of the establishment of this Park rested in the mind of Captain John F. Merry of Manchester, Iowa, a soldier who served during the campaign and siege in the 21st Iowa Infantry Volunteers, and who in his subsequent civil life has been actively engaged in the Passenger Department of the Illinois Central Railroad. It is through his instrumentality that in October, 1895, at a meeting held at Vicksburg, Mississippi, an Association was formed for the purpose of promoting this enterprise. Its organization enlisted the sympathy and co-operation of the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Confederate Veterans, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Society of the Army of the Tennessee and many other organizations north and south. The honorable Mr. Catchings of Mississippi introduced the first bill for the establishment of this Park in Congress in 1896.

In March, 1899, the Secretary of War appointed Lieutenant General Stephen D. Lee of Mississippi, Captain William T. Rigby of Iowa and Captain James G. Everest of Illinois, commissioners to carry out the provisions of the act creating the Park. The Commissioners elected John S. Kountz of Ohio Secretary and Historian, and C. L. Longley as clerk of the Commission with the approval of the Secretary of War. General Lee was elected Chairman when the Commissioners organized and served in that capacity to April 15th, 1902, when he resigned this office and Captain Rigby was elected in his stead and still holds that position.

Mr. R. D. Betts has served as the Engineer for the National Commission for a number of years. His capacity and industry are attested by the work accomplished in the National Park.

The Park covers an area of 1283 acres. It embraces the entire line of the Confederate works from the River on the north, to the Mississippi River on the south, covering about eight miles, along which has been built and nearly completed Confederate Avenue. The Union line which was nearly twelve miles in length during the siege is represented by Union Avenue, about seven and one-half miles in length. This begins at the northeast entrance of the National Cemetery, near the River on the north, and follows the Union line of approaches on its first line of trenches, to Confederate Avenue which it enters at Fort Garrott. From here Confederate Avenue alone leads to the right of the Confederate defenses. The other portion of the Union lines to the left of Fort Garrott are reached by avenues or spurs from Confederate Avenue which return in a loop and which are designated as Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa Avenues, the extreme left resting on the Warrenton Road.

Most of the ground between Confederate Avenue and Union Avenue, which covers the sanguinary struggles throughout the siege, and of the assaults on May 19th and 22d, is embraced within the Park area, as are also all the saps dug by the Union army excepting those in General Lauman's front and that to his left.

There is in addition to these, an avenue that leads from Union Avenue to General Grant's headquarters, which is designated as Grant Avenue and there is also another which leaves Union Avenue near the intersection of Grant Avenue and moves northwesterly and again enters Union Avenue not far from the National Cemetery and very near to the position where the 13th Illinois Infantry served during the siege. This avenue is designated as Sherman Avenue.

This picture shows the Marker of the 97th Illinois on the left; of the 77th on top of Confederate works and of the 130th at base of same, in the positions occupied by these commands in the assault of May 22d. To the right of the Railroad are the Markers of the 93d Illinois (of Quimby's Division), showing the position of that regiment on the afternoon of May 22d; and the Markers of the 33d and 99th Illinois, designating their sharpshooters' line during the siege. The Marker farthest in front shows the position of the 33d in the assault of May 22d. The Markers of the 99th, equally far advanced, are hidden from this view by the cemetery.

Grant Avenue is a little less than a mile in length and Sherman Avenue a little more than two miles. Illinois Avenue is one and one-third miles in length and has its beginning at the Hall's Ferry Road south of the City. It trends southwest on a ridge, running parallel to and confronting the Confederate works at a distance of about three-fourths of a mile. Along this avenue has been placed seven regimental monuments and near it six markers for the Illinois commands. Near its departure from the Hall's Ferry Road is located Illinois circle which runs around the position occupied by the 15th Ohio Battery during the siege. Two Illinois regimental monuments are located on this circle. On the Warrenton Road, the extreme western and southern access to Vicksburg by land, is located one Illinois regimental marker and one regimental monument. Along Sherman Avenue are located all regimental monuments for Illinois regiments that served during the siege in the army faced to the east between the Yazoo and the Big Black Rivers which was in the later portion of the siege commanded by General Sherman. They number fifteen. Along Grant Avenue there are eight Illinois regimental monuments of the commands that served on the Louisiana side of the river, or that were detached from or unassigned to, any corps organization.

Along Wisconsin Avenue there are three Illinois regimental monuments.

All the other regimental monuments for Illinois organizations are located along Union Avenue opposite their places in the investment line.

Including the circles and subsidiary roadways there are $27\frac{1}{4}$ miles of drives in the Park, a large proportion of which has been graveled and finished into superb roads. There are fifteen bridges crossing ravines and bayous, most of them of very artistic design, three are located on Confederate Avenue and twelve of them on Union Avenue. In this Park in addition to the regimental markers erected by the several states to commemorate specific events, on particular locations, of their troops and of which Illinois has placed eighty-six, the General Government has erected 152 historical tablets to designate the positions of brigades, divisions, corps and the armies, both Confederate and Union. One hundred and four tablets have also been erected by the Government for the batteries, and markers to the number of 117, with appropriate inscriptions to designate the line of each of the Union approaches. All of these markers are of cast iron. Iron guide boards mark all the roads so that the visitor is easily enabled to reach any part of the Park without the necessity for a skilled guide.

The State of Mississippi has ceded that portion of the highways leading into the City of Vicksburg embraced within the limits of the park to the jurisdiction of the General Government.

The National Government has thus far appropriated $775,000.00 for this Park, and a number of the States have made appropriations aggregating $661,500.00 up to date for the commemoration of the services of their troops who served here during the Vicksburg campaign and siege.

It is contemplated eventually to restore the earthworks so that future students of the campaign and siege may observe the means employed to accomplish the end, and wherever batteries were served either on the line of defense or attack, the same kind and description of ordnance have been emplaced that was in use during the siege. The magnificent landscape which the entire field embraces still retains its peaceful beauty of the present day.

BRIDGE ON CONFEDERATE AVENUE OVER ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

The stage setting of the implements of war, for which this obsolete ordnance serves now only as a suggestion, and the shafts and blocks of granite and marble that everywhere attract the vision of the visitor are, it is to be hoped, a proper suggestion, or so many sad reminders, of the hot contest that covered these hills and valleys forty-four years ago.

The national historic iron tablets erected in the Park containing reference to Illinois troops are scattered throughout the entire length of Union and its subsidiary avenues. Their inscriptions and legends are here reproduced:

The 13th, 15th and 17th corps were engaged in the battles and movements of the Vicksburg campaign beginning March 29, 1863; took position on the investment line May 19, the 15th on the right, the 17th in the center, the 13th on the left; and made unsuccessful assaults on the Confederate line of Defense the afternoon of May 19 and on May 22. One division of the 16th corps took position on the left of the 13th, May 25, and Herron's division on the extreme left, June 15. The 9th Corps, two divisions of the 16th, and seven brigades from the other corps were deployed on an exterior line, from Haynes' Bluff on the left to Big Black River Bridge on the right, to guard against attack by Johnston's Army, and were under command of Gen. Sherman after June 22. Siege operations were carried on from May 23 to July 3, when a proposal for capitulation came to Gen. Grant from Gen. Pemberton. They met for conference that afternoon between the lines and near the Jackson road. The terms of capitulation were agreed upon by correspondence after the meeting and, July 4, the Confederate Army of Vicksburg was surrendered to Gen. Grant and a detachment of his Army occupied the city. The aggregate reported casualties in the Army during the Campaign and Siege were, killed 1581, wounded 7554, missing 1007, total 10,142.

8TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 8th Infantry, was organized and mustered-in at Cairo, on July 25th. 1861. Governor Richard J. Oglesby was its Colonel. The Companies came from Decatur, Charleston, Olney, Peoria, Pekin, Cairo, Griggsville, Vandalia, Bloomington and Pike County. This regiment had originally been organized on the 25th day of April, 1861, at Springfield, as a three months' regiment. Its service was entirely at Cairo during that term of service. In October, 1861, it was ordered to Bird's Point, Missouri, from whence it engaged in numerous expeditions to points in Missouri and Kentucky.

February 2, 1862, it proceeded up the Tennessee River and participated in the attack and capture of Fort Henry. On February 11th it was in the column of attack on Fort Donelson and participated in its capture on the 15th. On the 6th of March it proceeded to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, and on April 6th and 7th it was engaged in the battle of Shiloh. It also took part in the siege of Corinth and after the evacuation by the Confederates it moved to Bethel and Jackson, Tennessee; thence to the relief of Corinth on October 2d. On November 10th, 1862, it marched to LaGrange, Tennessee.

It participated in the northern Mississippi campaign, marching as far south as the Yocona Creek. It fell back with the army to the Tallahatchie River and thence to Memphis. On January 4th, 1863, it moved to Grand Junction and on the 19th returned to Memphis.

On February 22d it boarded a transport for Lake Providence, Louisiana, and participated there in the attempt of establishing a waterway through Bayou Baxter, Bayou Macon, the Ouachita River and the Red River into the Mississippi below Vicksburg.

When General Grant determined to run the Vicksburg Batteries, many men of this regiment volunteered to man the transports, fourteen of its men were of the crew of the "Moderator." On April 12th the regiment moved to Milliken's Bend, thence to Richmond, Louisiana, and on the 25th took up its march down the Louisiana side and crossed the river at Bruinsburg in time for the fight at Thompson's Hill in the battle of Port Gibson.

At Raymond the regiment was again engaged, May 12th. It also participated in the battle of Jackson on May 14th and in the battle of Champion's Hill on the 16th. Of this engagement General John D. Stevenson says in his official report: "Passing through the timber I found myself at the base of a considerable hill in possession of the enemy and upon which they had a battery planted. As our line advanced we received several discharges of grape and shell, but steadily pushed to the front. The battery of the enemy was taken at the point of the bayonet by the 8th Illinois."

The regiment reached the Confederate line of defense at Vicksburg on the 19th, on the Jackson road. It participated in the assault of May 22d and in the siege operations until the 4th of July, and was one of the regiments ordered into the City to take possession on that date.

On August 21st it participated in an expedition to Monroe, Louisiana; October 12th in an expedition to Canton, Mississippi. On February 3d, 1864, it formed part of General Sherman's Meridian expedition. On March 24th, having re-enlisted, it was sent on a furlough to Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois. Upon its return to Vicksburg, the 17th Illinois Infantry was consolidated with and merged into it.

On July 1st it formed part of an expedition to Jackson, Mississippi, and from July 29th to September 3d it participated in an expedition to Morganza, Louisiana.

On October 18th it proceeded to Memphis, Tennessee, and remained in the vicinity of this city to January 1, 1865, when it was ordered to New Orleans. On February 4th moved by way of Lake Pontchartrain to Dauphin Island, becoming part of the army for the siege of Mobile. On the 26th of March it reached the intrenchments in the vicinity of Spanish Fort; on the 4th of April moved to Fort Blakely, Alabama, participating in the assault upon this fort on the 9th of April and on the 12th it was the first regiment to enter the city of Mobile.

It returned to New Orleans on the 29th of May and left that City on the 31st for Shreveport, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 9th, thence it proceeded to Marshall, Texas, and remained there until the fall, when it proceeded to Alexandria, Louisiana, and was sent to Springfield, Illinois, for final discharge and payment, which took place on May 16th.

MONUMENT FOR 8TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Two markers have been placed to designate positions of this regiment during the siege. One marks its nearest approach to the Confederate lines in the assault on May 22d, the other designates the line its sharpshooters occupied during the siege.

11TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was first mustered into the service on April 30th, 1861, as a three months' organization, at Springfield. The companies came from Freeport, Lacon, Centralia, Rockford, Effingham, LaSalle and Ottawa.

It was re-organized and re-mustered in July, 1861, as a three years' regiment, being stationed at Bird's Point, Missouri. It participated in expeditions to New Madrid, Charleston and Bloomfield, Missouri, during the fall of 1861. In January, 1862, it had a skirmish near Charleston, Missouri, and later participated in a reconnaissance at Columbus, Kentucky, and still later served under General Grant in an expedition to Sikestown, Missouri. It participated in February in the Fort Henry and Fort Donelson campaigns, losing very heavily in the battle of Fort Doneison.

April 6th to 7th it was engaged in the battle of Shiloh. From April 24th to June 4th it took part in the campaign and siege of Corinth, Mississippi. Was stationed at Jackson, Tennessee, during June and July, from whence it made expeditions and was engaged in skirmishes near Trenton and Lexington, Tennessee. It was next stationed at Cairo, Illinois, from August 2d to 23d; Paducah, Kentucky, to November 20th; from thence it made expeditions into Clarksville, Tennessee, and Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

On November 24th it was assigned to General McArthur's division in Grant's Army of the northern Mississippi campaign at LaGrange, Tennessee. In the advance of this army it proceeded seven miles below Oxford, Mississippi, from whence, after the Holly Springs disaster, it moved by way of Holly Springs, Mississippi, and Moscow, Tennessee, to Memphis, where it embarked on the 17th of January, 1863, for Young's Point, Louisiana; there it remained until February 11th, when, with the division now assigned to the 17th army corps, it proceeded to Lake Providence, Louisiana. Here it participated in the attempt to force a waterway by way of Bayou Macon and Bayou Tensas into the Ouachita and Red rivers. It also participated in an expedition to American Bend.

The regiment by this time was very much reduced in numbers and on April 23d, while at Lake Providence, the 109th Illinois Infantry, with an aggregate of 589 men, was consolidated with it. This regiment had been raised with companies from Jonesboro, Thebes, Anna, Vienna, Mount Pleasant, Dongola, Pulaski and Union County, and mustered into the United States service on September 11th, 1862. It had been stationed at Columbus, Ky., and Bolivar and Moscow, Tennessee, where it was assigned to General Quimby's division. On account of the bad condition of its guns it did not proceed further in the northern Mississippi campaign than Holly Springs, where it was left to guard the railroad between that point and Waterford. The regiment having been greatly reduced in numbers by desertions, principally, it was consolidated at Lake Providence, Louisiana, on April 23d, with the 11th Infantry. The officers were all mustered out of service, excepting those of Company K. Company K of the 109th, from the date of this transfer, became Company F of the 11th Infantry.

On April 26th the regiment left Lake Providence and proceeded by way of Richmond, Perkin's Landing, Grand Gulf, to Raymond, forming now part of Ransom's Brigade. At the battle of Champion's Hill, this regiment was left behind at Raymond to do guard duty, but reached the line of investments around Vicksburg on May 18th with its brigade. It participated in the assaults on the 19th and 22d of May and during the entire siege operations to July 4th. It was one of the regiments to enter Vicksburg to take possession on the 4th day of July. On July 12th it left for Natchez, where it remained until October 12th, having participated in an expedition to Woodville, Mississippi.

It returned to Vicksburg about the middle of October and remained there until July 29th, 1864. During this stay at Vicksburg it participated in an expedition to Greenwood, Mississippi, from February 1st to March 8th, having a skirmish at Liverpool Heights on February 5th and an engagement at Yazoo City on March 5th. From April 6th to 28th it formed part of an expedition to Big Black River, Benton and Vaughn's Station, Mississippi. July 1st to 7th, it participated in an expedition to Jackson, Mississippi.

On July 29th, 1864, it moved to Morganza, Louisiana, and was then assigned to the 19th army corps. It participated in an expedition to Clinton, Louisiana, August 24th to 29th.

On September 3d it proceeded to the mouth of the White River, Arkansas, on October 8th, back to Memphis, thence to White River, October 27th. On November 6th to 7th to Gaines' Landing, November 8th to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, December 4th to Memphis. On December 20th to 31st was engaged in an expedition to Moscow, Tennessee.

January 1st, 1865, it moved to Kenner, Louisiana, thence to Dauphin Island via Lake Pontchartrain. March 17th to April 12th was engaged in the operations against Mobile, Alabama, and participated in the assault on Fort Blakely April 12th, and took part in the capture of the city of Mobile, where it remained until the 27th of May.

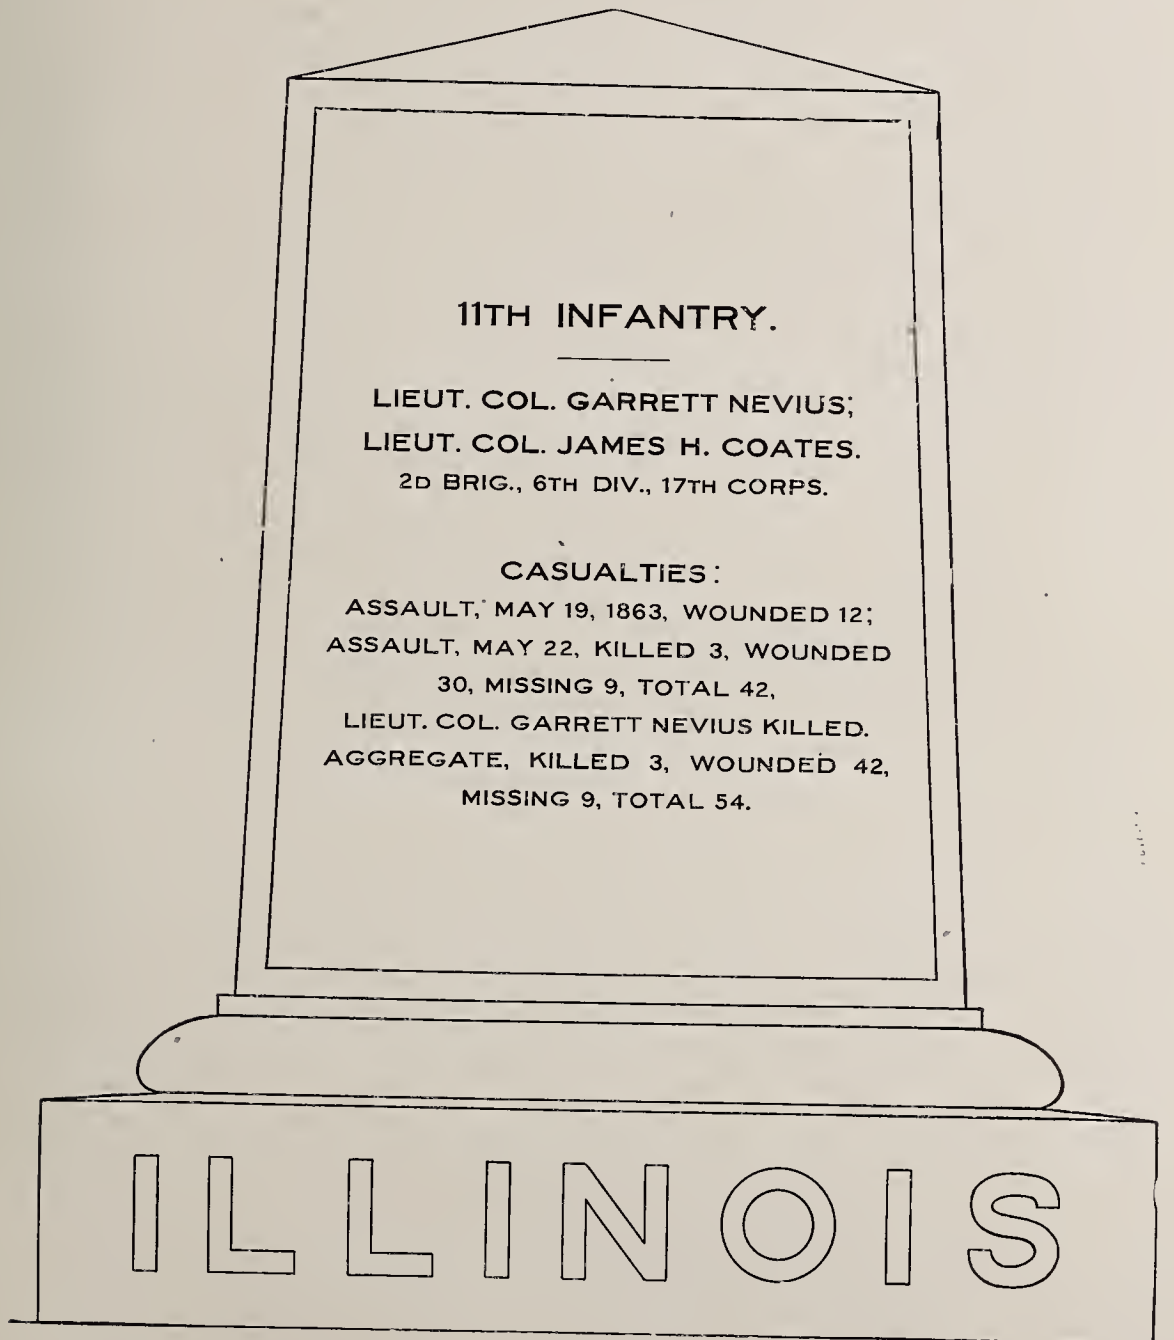

Thence proceeded to New Orleans and to Alexandria, Louisiana. Here it remained until June 22d, whence it proceeded to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, for muster out, which took place on July 14th, 1865, when it proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, for final payment and discharge.

The veterans of this regiment whose terms of service had not expired were transferred to the 8th Illinois, Infantry then stationed at Marshall, Texas.

This regiment furnished three general officers: General W. H. L. Wallace, who was killed at Shiloh; General T. E. G. Ransom, who died of wounds received in the Red River campaign during the Atlanta campaign, and General Smith D. Atkins, who still survives.

MONUMENT FOR 11TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Four markers have been placed to designate the positions of this regiment on the investing line during the siege; one for the position occupied in the assault on May 19th; one for the position in the assault on May 22; one for its sharpshooting line from May 23d to July 4th; and the fourth for its sharpshooting line from June 18th to July 4th.

13TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The men of this regiment came from Dixon, Sterling, Amboy, Rock Island, Sandwich, Sycamore, Morrison, Aurora, Chicago and Naperville. The regiment went into rendezvous at Dixon, Illinois, and was mustered into the State service under the "ten regiment bill" on the 9th day of May, 1861, and into the service of the United States on the 24th day of May, 1861.

Captain John Pope, afterwards Major General John Pope, of the army, being the mustering officer.

On the 16th of June it proceeded to Caseyville, Illinois, where it remained until the 5th of July, when it passed through St. Louis to Rolla, Missouri. Here it remained until the spring of 1862, guarding supply trains and suppressing guerrilla bands. It was part of General Fremont's army which proceeded to Springfield, Missouri, in the fall of 1861. In 1862 it joined General Curtis' army and participated in his march from Pea Ridge to Helena, Arkansas. From here it moved with General Sherman's army of attack upon Chickasaw Bluffs in December, 1862, and from that time on was part of General Sherman's 15 corps. In this assault at Chickasaw Bluffs this regiment suffered a very severe loss, approaching the Confederate works very closely. Illinois on that day sustained a total loss of 193 men in her nine organizations forming part of Sherman's army of attack, of which number the 13th Regiment contributed 173, Colonel J. B. Wyman and Lieuts. Beardsley and Napier being killed.

It participated in the campaign and capture of Arkansas Post, after which it proceeded to Young's Point, Louisiana, opposite Vicksburg. It was part of General Steele's expeditionary force to Greenville, Miss., and up Deer Creek.

Throughout the campaign of Vicksburg its history is that of General Steele's division of General Sherman's 15th corps. It participated in the capture of Jackson, Mississippi, on May 14, 1863, and reached the north investment line of the City of Vicksburg on the afternoon of May 18th. It took part in the assault of May 22d and in the siege until the surrender of July 4th.

At midnight of that day, the regiment broke camp to participate in the campaign made by General Sherman to destroy or disperse General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army. It was present at the second capture of Jackson on July 16th and marched east as far as Brandon in pursuit of the retreating foe, after which it returned to Big Black River and went into camp there.

It then proceeded with General Sherman's army to Memphis by boat, and thence marched across country to Chattanooga. Upon the arrival of General Sherman's army at Chattanooga the First Division, commanded by General Osterhaus, was assigned to the command of General Hooker and participated in the battles of Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge and Ringold Gap, Georgia.

Its position on Lookout Mountain was about 200 yards southeast of the Craven house on the night after the battle of November 24, 1863. During the night the Confederate army abandoned Lookout Mountain. General Hooker's troops moved down the east side of the mountain and passed through Rossville Gap to the rear of General Bragg's army on the Confederates' left. General Hooker's troops assaulted Missionary Ridge and a general stampede took place. The 13th Regiment captured the battle flag of the 18th Alabama in this assault. General Hooker's troops bivouacked the night of the 25th on the ground occupied during the two previous days by the left wing of General Bragg's army on Missionary Ridge and close to his late headquarters. On the evening of the 26th of November marched towards Ringold Gap, Georgia, General Osterhaus's troops leading. On the morning of November 27, 1863, passed through the Village of Ringold, Georgia. The troops were drawn up in line in front of the Gap and were entirely ignorant of the nearness of the enemy. A battery of two guns, masked in the Gap, began firing directly upon the front of the 13th Regiment, but the men held their ground for nearly two hours, maintaining a constant fire effectively. The loss to the 13th Regiment in this engagement were Major Bushnell and Captain Blanchard killed. Color Bearer Sergeant Patrick Riley was killed and fell upon the flag. His life's blood saturated its folds. This flag is now in Memorial Hall at Springfield, Illinois.

General Hooker in his official report makes mention of this splendid organization: "At the same time the enemy kept his artillery busily at work; their skirmishers were driven in, and, as we learned the position of the battery, the 13th Illinois Regiment, from the right of Wood's line, was thrown forward to seize some houses from which their gunners could be picked off by our men. These were heroically taken and held by that brave regiment. Apprehensive that he might lose his artillery, the enemy advanced with superior force on our skirmishers and they fell back behind Wood's line, when that excellent officer opened on the rebels and drove them into the gorge; they leaving, as they fled, their dead and wounded on the ground. Our skirmishers at once re-occupied their line, the 13th Illinois all the time maintaining its position with resolution and obstinacy."

As the term of the enlistment of the regiment had nearly expired, when General Sherman started his advance on Atlanta, it was assigned to guard duty near Huntsville, Ala. Its term of service expiring May 24, 1864, it returned to Illinois and was mustered out on the 18th day of June, 1864.

MONUMENT FOR 13TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

One marker has been placed for this regiment to mark its position in the assault on May 22d in the investing line. There has also been a marker erected for this regiment nearly opposite to its regimental monument, on ground immediately adjacent to the Park, which commemorates the participation of this command and its great loss in December, 1862, during the first attack on Vicksburg, not very far distant from the place of its location during the siege.

14TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized under the "ten regiment bill" under which the State of Illinois recruited a number of regiments in anticipation of the general government's requirements, equipping and drilling one in each Congressional district.

It was mustered in at Jacksonville on May 25, 1861. The men came mostly by companies from Beardstown, Shelbyville, Girard, Greenfield, Petersburg, Jerseyville, Springfield, Taylorville, Waverly and Winchester.

General John M. Palmer of Carlinville, afterwards Governor and Senator from Illinois, was its first colonel and Dr. Benjamin F. Stephenson, later the founder of the Grand Army of the Republic, was its surgeon. The regiment proceeded to Quincy, Illinois, on July 5th, from whence it made an excursion through Missouri, assisting in the dispersing of General Martin E. Green's force and the capture of James Green, then a United States Senator from Missouri, but an aider and abettor of the secessionists. It was stationed at Rolla, Missouri, and there became part of Fremont's army in his Springfield campaign; returned and went into winter quarters at Otterville.

In February, 1862, the regiment was ordered to Fort Donelson, which it reached the day after its surrender. From this point it marched to Fort Henry, whence it proceeded to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee. Participated in the battle of Shiloh April 6th and 7th. General Veatch with reference to the work of this regiment on Monday, April 7th, said:

"Colonel Hall of the 14th Illinois led, with his regiment, that gallant charge on Monday evening which drove the enemy beyond our line and closed the struggle of that memorable day."

The next labors of this regiment were performed during the siege of Corinth, after which it was stationed for a short time at Memphis and then at Bolivar, Tennessee. On October 4, 1862, it participated in the relief of General Rosencrans at Corinth.

It formed part of General Grant's northern Mississippi campaign in November and December, 1862, being then attached to the portion of the army commanded by General McPherson. After the capture of Holly Springs by General Van Dorn, the regiment proceeded to Lafayette, Tennessee, where it arrived on January 18, 1863.

In May of that year it was ordered to Vicksburg, which it reached after Grant's army had completed the investing line, which, with the 4th division of the 16th corps, of which the regiment formed a part, it strengthened on the left of the line until the surrender of Vicksburg.

On the night of the 23d of June, 1863, during the service of the regiment in the trenches, in the rear of Vicksburg, the Confederates made a sortie and captured Lieutenant Colonel Cam and five men, killed four and wounded five and also captured a number of spades and picks belonging to its working party.

On July 5th it became part of General Sherman's army to drive General Johnston's relieving army from the State and participated in the second siege of Jackson, Mississippi. In August it was ordered to Natchez and formed part of an expedition from there to Harrisonburg, Louisiana, which captured Fort Beauregard on the Ouachita River.

It returned to Vicksburg and accompanied General Sherman in his Meridian expedition. The regiment then re-enlisted as veterans and was sent north on a furlough prior to its second term of enlistment.

On its return from veteran furlough, it was sent to the army then advancing on Atlanta. On July 1, 1864, near Kenesaw Mountain, Georgia, General McPherson consolidated the veterans of the 14th and 15th Infantry into one organization, known as the Veteran's Battalion of the 14th and 15th Illinois Infantry. The soldiers of these regiments which had not re-enlisted were mustered out of the service and discharged. This battalion was detailed to guard railroad communications at Ackworth, Georgia. In October, 1864, a large number of the command were killed during General Hood's demonstration upon Sherman's rear, and many of the remainder were taken prisoners and sent to Andersonville.

The men who escaped capture acted as mounted scouts during the march to the sea, in advance of the army, reaching the pickets of the enemy at Savannah, Georgia, first. The remnant of this battalion was first to enter Cheraw, South Carolina and Fayetteville, North Carolina, and participated in the battle of Bentonville.

In the spring of 1865, at Goldsboro, North Carolina, a large number of organized recruits having arrived by way of New York, sufficient to fill up the two regiments, the battalion organization was discontinued and Colonel Hall was again assigned to the command of the 14th Infantry.

After Johnston's capitulation, the regiment marched to Washington, D. C., where on the 24th of May it participated in the grand review of Sherman's army. Thence it proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky: thence by river to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, from where it marched to Fort Kearney, Nebraska Territory and back. It was finally mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, September 18, 1865, and arrived at Springfield, Illinois, on September 22, where it received its final pay and discharge.

MONUMENT FOR 14TH INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

One marker has been erected to designate the position of the sharpshooters of this regiment along the investing line from June 25th to July 4th, 1863.

15TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was raised and organized under the "ten regiment act," at Freeport, Illinois, and mustered into the United States service on the morning of May 24, 1861.

The companies came from the then 1st Congressional District of Illinois, consisting of Lake, McHenry, Boone, Winnebago, Stephenson, Jo Daviess, Carroll and Ogle Counties.

Shortly after its organization it was sent to Alton, Illinois, from whence it proceeded by steamer to St. Charles, Missouri, thence to Mexico, Missouri, early in July. Soon thereafter a portion of the regiment marched to Fulton, Missouri, thence by steamer to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri. The other portion marched to Hannibal, Missouri, and took steamer thence to same point, (Jefferson Barracks).

From there it moved to Rolla, Missouri, arriving in time to cover General Siegel's retreat after the battle of Wilson's Creek, Missouri. Later the regiment was ordered to Jefferson City and thence to Tipton, Missouri, where it was attached to General Fremont's Army (destined for Springfield, Missouri). This regiment made a forced march of nearly one hundred miles to Springfield, returning to Sedalia, Missouri, and after the capture of a considerable Confederate force there, it took up its march to Otterville, Missouri, where it went into winter quarters.

On the first of February, 1862, it marched to Jefferson City, Missouri, thence by rail and transport to St. Louis, Missouri, and finally to Fort Donelson, Tennessee. From here it marched across to Fort Henry (on the Tennessee River). From there it proceeded up the river with the great fleet of troops and was the first regiment to embark and land at Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee.

This regiment was in General S. A. Hurlbut's Division and was in the first line of battle at Shiloh, on the early morning of April 6, 1862, where it struggled in the terrible contest of the "Hornet's Nest." On the next day (April 7th) it also participated in the final charge and defeat of the enemy.

Later it moved to Corinth, Mississippi, and participated in its siege. After the evacuation of Corinth it changed station frequently. Went first to Grand Junction, Tennessee, thence to Holly Springs, Mississippi, returning to La Grange, Tennessee, and then to Memphis, where it remained until September 6, 1862. From here it finally went to Bolivar, Tennessee, and was part of the army sent to the relief of General Rosecrans, who was hotly pressed at Corinth, Mississippi. It made a forced march from Bolivar, and reached the Hatchie River on the morning of October 4th and participated in the engagement of Metamora Hills. It captured one battery of artillery and many prisoners.

It participated next in the Northern Mississippi Campaign, advancing as far as Coffeeville. After abandonment of this campaign the regiment was stationed most of the time at La Grange and Memphis, Tennessee.

In May, 1863, it was sent, as part of General Lauman's 4th Division, 16th Army Corps, to reinforce General Grant's army at Vicksburg, Mississippi, being assigned to the left of the investment line about May 25th. Here it served during the siege, until the surrender, July 4, 1863. It then participated, under General Sherman, in the second campaign and siege of Jackson, Mississippi.

Having again returned to Vicksburg, it embarked for Natchez, Mississippi, where it remained until about November 10, 1863. In the meantime it participated in various expeditions, principally to Harrisonburg, Louisiana, where Fort Beauregard—on the Ouachita River—was captured and destroyed. It then returned to Vicksburg, where the regiment re-enlisted.

On February 1st, 1864, it participated in General Sherman's Meridian expedition, having an encounter with a Confederate force on Champion's Hill. Upon its return to Vicksburg in March, 1864, the Veteran Regiment went to Illinois on its furlough. At expiration of its Veteran furlough it proceeded to Huntsville, Alabama, and was there attached to the 17th Army Corps, Commanded by General F. P. Blair. From Huntsville it moved to Decatur and Rome, Georgia, becoming part of General Sherman's Army on its march to Atlanta. It assisted in building the Forts at Allatoona Pass and in the heroic defense of this strategic point.

The 15th Illinois Regiment having become greatly decimated in numbers, was consolidated with the 14th Illinois Regiment of Infantry and was known as the Veteran's Battalion of the 14th and 15th Illinois Infantry. Both organizations, together, only numbering 625 men. This new command was stationed at Ackworth, Big Shanty and Marietta, Georgia, guarding General Sherman's line of communication.

This consolidated command was mounted and acted as scouts, marching in advance of General Sherman's Army to the Sea. After the capture of Savannah, Georgia, the regiment participated in the Campaign of the Carolinas, at Columbia, South Carolina, and at Fayette, Bentonville, Goldsboro and Raleigh, North Carolina. At this last place a sufficient number of recruits arrived to again fill up both the 14th and 15th Regiments, and the veteran battalion designated by these numbers was then discontinued.

General Johnston having surrendered, the 15th Regiment marched to Washington, D. C., via Richmond and Fredericksburg, Virginia, and participated in the Grand Review of May 24, 1865. Here it remained for only two weeks, then it proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, thence to Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, arriving at this Fort July 1st, 1865. It was then sent out to the plains, arriving at Fort Kearney, Nebraska, on the 14th day of August, 1865, from which place it returned to Fort Leavenworth to be mustered out of service, September 16, 1865. It was then ordered and moved to Springfield, Illinois, for final payment and discharge, on September 22, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 15TH INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

One marker has been erected, for this regiment, along the investing line, to mark the position occupied by its sharpshooters from June 25th to July 4th, 1863.

17TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Was organized and mustered into the United States service on May 25, 1861, at Peoria, Illinois, with companies coming from the vicinity of Peoria, Canton, Galva, Galesburg, Monmouth, Eureka, Lewistown, Keithsburg and Mason City. On the 17th of June it proceeded to Alton, Illinois, thence to St. Charles, Missouri, and to Warrenton, Missouri. From here it went by way of St. Louis to Bird's Point, Missouri, where it did garrison duty. Having proceeded via Sulphur Springs Landing, Pilot Knob and Ironton to Fredericktown, Missouri, in pursuit of the Confederate general Jeff Thompson, it joined General B. M. Prentiss' command at Jackson, Missouri. From here it went to Fort Holt, Kentucky, thence to Cape Girardeau, Missouri, from whence it again went in pursuit of General Jeff Thompson's forces, whom they assisted in defeating at Fredericktown, on October 21, 1861. Returning from this expedition, it remained at Cape Girardeau until February 1862 when it was ordered to Fort Henry. It participated in the battle and surrender of Fort Donelson and on April 6th and 7th, it formed part of General John A. McClernand's command in the battle of Shiloh. It then marched with the forces to Corinth and after the evacuation of Corinth, marched via Purdee and Bethel to Jackson, Tennessee, where it remained until the 17th of July. It then moved to Bolivar, Tennessee, where it acted as provost guard until November 1862, participating during this time in an expedition to Iuka, Mississippi, to reinforce General Rosecrans.

In November it was stationed at LaGrange as provost guard and early in December formed part of General Logan's command in the northern Mississippi campaign, proceeding as far south as Oxford, Mississippi. After the capture of Holly Springs, it was assigned to McArthur's division and proceeded via Moscow, Tennessee, to Collierville and from thence to Memphis. Here it remained until January 16th and when it proceeded by river to Lake Providence, Louisiana, where it participated in the attempt to secure a water-way via the interior bayous into the Ouachita and Red rivers, and thence into the Mississippi below Vicksburg. From thence it proceeded by way of Milliken's Bend on the march across the Louisiana delta to Perkins Landing, crossed the river below Grand Gulf and joined the army on the 17th of May as part of General Logan's Division just as this Division reached the Big Black river.

It served during the siege in the investment line in General Stevenson's brigade who says of its service in the assault of the 22d of May: "The 17th Illinois Volunteers and their officers are entitled to special mention for the prompt manner in which they occupied the ground assigned them and the efficient service rendered in protecting their comrades in the defences and especially for the hot fire poured into the enemy as the column retired." It was one of the regiments ordered to the city of Vicksburg on July 4th to take possession.

After the surrender of Vicksburg, the regiment remained there, doing garrison duty and participated in the expeditions to Monroe, Louisiana, and Meridian, Mississippi. On the 24th of May, 1864, the three years' term of service of the regiment having expired, it was ordered to Springfield, Illinois for muster out and final discharge. The members of the regiment that had re-enlisted and those who had joined as recruits and whose term of enlistment had, therefore, not expired were consolidated into two companies and were assigned to the 8th Infantry on June 14, 1864, which was then stationed at Vicksburg. Their history thence forward became that of the 8th.

MONUMENT FOR 17TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Two markers have been erected to designate positions occupied by this regiment along the investment line; one marks its position in the assault on May 22, 1863, and the other the line of its sharpshooters during the siege.

18TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 18th Infantry was organized and mustered in at Anna, on May 19, 1861. Its companies came mostly from Pinckneyville, Shawneetown, Ava, Centralia, Cairo, Mound City, Fairfield, Harrisonville, Anna and Carbondale. It was one of the regiments organized under "the ten regiment bill" and was first mustered into the State service by Ulysses S. Grant, State Mustering Officer, and then into the United States service by Captain Pitcher.

It moved to Bird's Point, Missouri, on June 24th. On August 26th it took station at Mound City, Illinois, and was engaged in guarding gun-boats being built there. October 5th took station at Cairo and on November 3d became part of an expedition to Bloomfield, Missouri, for the purpose of routing Jeff Thompson and his band. It returned to Cairo November 13th and on January 10, 1862, participated in a grand reconnaissance in the vicinity of Columbus, Kentucky. Having returned to Cairo, it became a part of an expedition up the Tennessee river on February 3d. February 6th it participated in the attack and capture of Fort Henry; February 11th it started on the march to Fort Donelson and participated in the battle and capture of that fort. On March 11th the regiment embarked for Pittsburg Landing and went into camp there on the 23d. It was in the battle of Shiloh on April 6th and 7th; it formed part of the column that moved upon Corinth and then was stationed, after the evacuation of that point, at Bethel and Jackson, Tennessee.

The regiment had been so depleted after the battles of Donelson and Shiloh that it became necessary to consolidate Companies H and C into the other companies. New companies with these designations joined the regiment on September 26th, 1862, at Jackson, Tennessee. On December 11th, Company K was ordered to Memphis to become part of the Mississippi Marine Brigade, and was permanently detached. During the period of General Van Dorn's attack on Holly Springs this regiment marched towards Lexington and Trenton to strengthen the union troops guarding the railroads. Companies E and H were engaged on December 31st with Forrests's Cavalry near Lexington. Having returned to Jackson, on January 7, 1863, it did not again change station until March 4th. During March it made several expeditions to Huntington and Trenton, the regiment at this time being mounted. During April reconnoitering and scouting by this mounted regiment continued toward Bolivar, Whiteville, Danceyville and Covington. On May 30th, the regiment broke camp and took train for Memphis and proceeded by steamer to Vicksburg. It arrived at Haines Bluff about the 4th of June, and served throughout the siege on the line, facing the east, from the Yazoo to the Big Black River.

On July 24th it changed station to Helena, Arkansas, whence it moved as part of General Steele's Arkansas expedition on August 13th. It proceeded to Clarendon on the White River, Duvall's Bluff, Brownsville and Little Rock, Arkansas, where it remained during the fall and winter of 1863 to 1864, participating in numerous minor expeditions. On May 28, 1864, all of the men whose original enlistment had expired were mustered out and sent to Springfield, Illinois, for final discharge. The re-enlisted veterans and the recruits who had joined the regiment since its original muster-in, were formed into companies making A, B and C and seven new companies of recruits, enlisted for one year, were assigned to the regiment while at Little Rock in March, 1865.

The regiment was mustered out at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, on December 16, 1865, and finally paid and discharged at Springfield, Illinois, on January 6, 1866.

20TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 20th Infantry was organized during May and June, 1861, under the "ten regiment bill" at Joliet, Illinois, and mustered into the United States service on June 13th. It moved to Alton on the 18th of June, then to St. Louis on July 6th, thence by boat to Cape Girardeau on July 10th. From here it participated in numerous expeditions, especially that to Fredericktown from October 18th to 23d where it was engaged with Jeff Thompson's troops. January 15th to 21st, 1862, it participated in the feint on Columbus, Kentucky. On February 5th it reached a point on the Tennessee River below Fort Henry, which fort it entered on the 6th. On February 12th to 16th it participated in the Fort Donelson campaign and its surrender. On March 5th, it marched to Fort Henry and embarked on the Tennessee River for Savannah, Tennessee. It reached Pittsburg Landing on March 25th.

On April 6th and 7th it participated in the battle of Shiloh, April 8th to June 4th in the movement on Corinth, Mississippi, then was encamped at Jackson, Tennessee, and on September 1, 1862, fought at Brittan's Lane in conjunction with the 30th Illinois Infantry. It remained at Jackson, Tennessee, until October 22d and then served along the Mobile and Ohio railroad, guarding bridges.

It then participated in the northern Mississippi campaign, moving as far south as Oxford, Mississippi. On December 25th it broke camp at Oxford for a northward march reaching Holly Springs on January 6, 1863, and entering Memphis on January 22d. Here it remained until February 20, 1863, and embarked on steamer for Lake Providence, Louisiana, where it arrived on February 24th.

From this date to April 19th it was engaged in several minor movements and on the latter date it took steamer for Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, whence it joined the column on the march across the Louisiana Peninsula by way of Richmond, to get below Vicksburg, on April 25, 1863.

It crossed to the east bank of the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg on April 30th; was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson on May 1st; on May 4th to 7th it camped on the south bank of the Big Black River; marched by way of Rocky Springs, Utica and Raymond, where, on the 12th day of May, it participated in the battle of Raymond. In General Logan's report of this battle he says "the 8th Illinois was detached from the 3d brigade and moved to the support of the 20th Illinois Infantry, which had penetrated to the ravine where they charged the enemy with bayonets and materially aided the first brigade in dislodging them. Lieutenant Colonel Richards, 20th Illinois Infantry, was killed by a musket shot through his left breast." . . . "The result of this engagement was the capture by the 20th, the 124th Illinois and 23d Indiana of a battery consisting of six pieces and a large number of prisoners."

It next participated in the battle of Jackson on May 14, 1863; in the battle of Champion's Hill on May 16th; and reached the investment line around Vicksburg on May 19th. It participated in the assault on May 22d and in the siege operations from that date to July 4, 1863, when the surrender took place. On June 25, when General Logan blew up the fort in his immediate front, the 45th Illinois was first sent into the crater in an attempt to gain entrance, through it, to the Confederate stronghold. That regiment was relieved by the 20th Illinois who were in their turn relieved by the 31st. All belonging to the 1st brigade of Logan's division.

On the day of the surrender this regiment formed part of the column that took possession of the city, where it remained in camp until November 6th. From this date until February 4, 1864, it camped on the Big Black River where a large portion of the men re-enlisted for three years. It then participated in the Meridian expedition, returning from which it was ordered to Springfield, Illinois, on veteran furlough.

On April 30, 1864, it embarked at Cairo on its return journey to the field and proceeded from thence to Clifton, Tennessee. From there it marched to Huntsville, Alabama, and from there to Decatur, Alabama, and from May 28th to June 7th was on the march from Decatur, Alabama, to Rome, Kingston and Ackworth, Georgia.

June 8, 1864, it was part of Sherman's army in front of Kenesaw Mountain and remained there until July 2, 1864, when it changed from the extreme left to the extreme right of Sherman's army. July 20th it was at Decatur, Georgia, having moved there by way of Marietta, Georgia. July 21st to 22d it participated in the battles in front of Atlanta.

It remained in Atlanta until November 15th when it started with General Sherman on the march to the sea. It entered Savannah, Georgia, on December 25, 1864. January 13, 1865, it started on the Carolina campaign; participated in the capture of Pocotaligo, Orangeburg, Columbia, South Carolina, and Fayetteville and Goldsboro, North Carolina, which it reached on March 24, 1865. On April 14th it entered Raleigh, North Carolina, whence it started on the 29th on its march to Richmond, Virginia. On May 9th it left Richmond for Alexandria, Virginia, and took part in the grand review at Washington on May 24th.

June 7th left Washington for Louisville, Kentucky, where it arrived on June 12, 1865. Here it was mustered out of the service on July 16, and moved by rail to Chicago where it was finally paid and disbanded on July 24, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 20TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Two markers have been erected to designate the locations occupied by this regiment during the siege; one marks the place where it assaulted on May 22, 1863, and the other the line its sharpshooters occupied from June 6th to July 4th of that year.

26TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Camp Butler near Springfield and was mustered into the United States service on August 31, 1861, with seven companies. Three more companies were organized later and by January 1, 1862, the organization was completed, the regiment having in the meantime performed guard duty at Quincy, Illinois, and Hannibal, Missouri. February 19, 1862, it left Hannibal, Missouri, arriving at New Madrid on March 3d and participated in the action there. Thence it marched to Point Pleasant where it arrived on the 6th and where it engaged Confederate gunboats with its sharpshooters. After the evacuation of Island No. 10 by the Confederates it returned to New Madrid, from which point it participated in an expedition against Fort Pillow. Thence it proceeded up the Ohio and Tennessee Rivers to Hamburg Landing and marched to Corinth, Mississippi, participating in the siege at this place. On May 8th and 9th it was engaged at Farmington, Mississippi, and on May 28th was in an encounter with the Confederates near Corinth. Company G of this command is said to have been the first Union force to enter Corinth after its evacuation. The regiment served in the vicinity of Corinth till August, 1862, when it marched to Tuscumbia. Thence in September to Clear Creek. On the 18th of September to Iuka, Mississippi. Was engaged at this place on the 19th and joined in pursuit of the Confederate force, arriving again at Corinth on October 3d and participated in the battle of Corinth.

After this action, it followed the retreating foe to Ripley, then returned to Corinth on November 2d. It became part of General Grant's army in the northern Mississippi campaign, going as far south as Oxford, where it remained until December 20th and was ordered to Holly Springs to prevent the capture of that place by Van Dorn, which place it reached only after its capture by the Confederates and after they had fled. Thence the regiment moved to La Grange, Tennessee, where it remained until March 8, 1863. On this day it moved to Collierville, Tennessee, and was engaged in fortifying the place and defending the railroad leading to Memphis. On June 7th it broke camp here for Memphis and Vicksburg, it disembarked at Haines' Bluff about June 11th and went into camp at Oak Ridge, forming part of the line of defense across the Yazoo and Big Black Peninsula, opposing General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army.

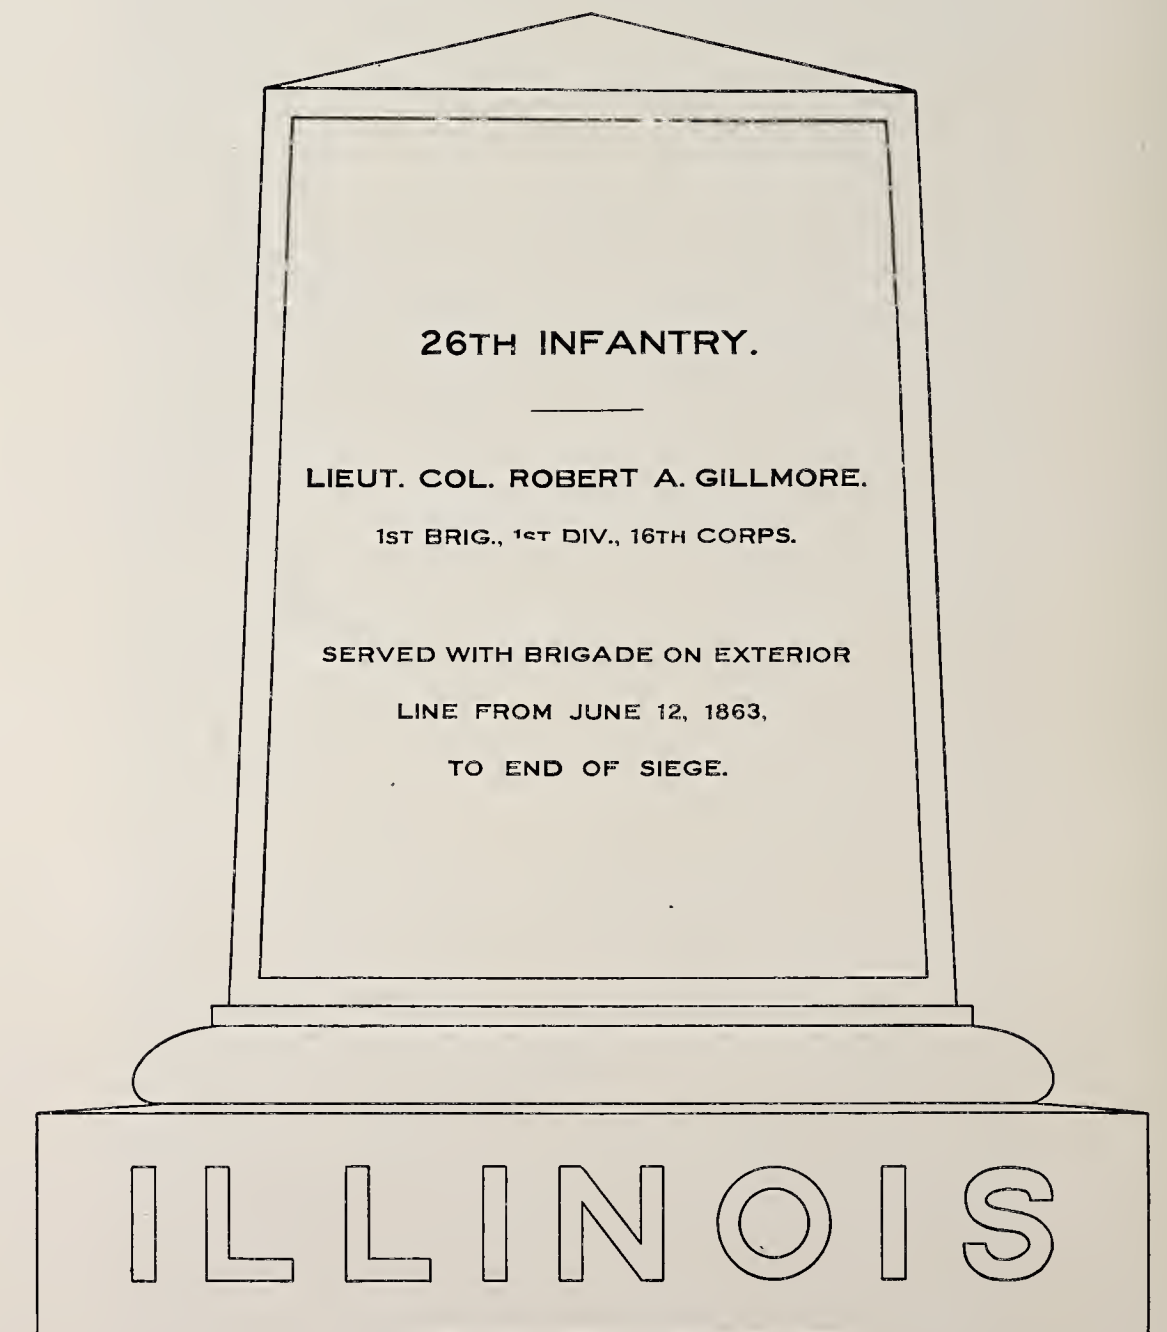

Upon the fall of Vicksburg on July 4th, in the afternoon, this regiment formed part of the column to disperse this relieving army. The regiment participated in the second battle of Jackson and about July 22d began its return march to the Big Black River. Here it remained until September 28th and returned to Memphis on the 7th of October.

After a few days' preparation, the regiment started for its long march from Memphis to Chattanooga on October 11th. Reached Bridgeport, Alabama, on November 15th and participated in the battle of Mission Ridge on the 24th and 25th of November. Before daylight on the 26th, it followed the retreating Confederate column to Ringgold, Georgia, and then took up its march of two hundred miles to the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville. It returned to Bridgeport late in December and went into winter quarters at Scottsboro, Alabama.

On January 1, 1864, out of 515 men present for duty 453 re-enlisted as veterans and started home on veteran furlough soon after. It returned with full ranks on March 3d and remained at Scottsboro until it started on the Atlanta campaign May 1st. The regiment was engaged in the campaign and capture of Atlanta and then became part of General Sherman's army, in its march to the sea.

It participated in the siege of Savannah and capture of Fort McAllister and then proceeded to Beaufort, South Carolina, and served there and at Port Royal Ferry until the beginning of the Carolina's campaign. It was in the action of Columbia and battle of Bentonville. Thence proceeded to Goldsboro, North Carolina, and on April 10th started on the march to Raleigh. Left Raleigh May 1st for Washington. Was in the grand review at Washington. Thence proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, where it remained until July 20, 1865, and was mustered out of service. Started for Springfield, Illinois, and received its final pay and discharge on July 28, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 26TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

28TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The companies of this regiment came mostly from Havana, Pittsfield, Winchester, Macomb, Milton, Petersburg, Rushville, Vermont, Barry and Sweetwater.

It was organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield, and mustered into the United States service on August 15, 1861. It proceeded to St. Louis, Missouri, and thence to Thebes, from there it moved to Bird's Point, Missouri, and thence to Fort Holt, Kentucky, on October 2d, remained here until January 31, 1862, participating in reconnaissances towards Columbus, Kentucky. It next moved to Paducah and, on February 5th, up the Tennessee River. On the 6th it moved upon Fort Heiman and Fort Henry. On the 13th it had an affair with the Confederate cavalry at Little Bethel Church. On March 6th, it moved to Paris Landing and on the 9th, to Pittsburg Landing.

On April 6th and 7th it was engaged in the battle of Shiloh. It next went to Corinth, Mississippi; was engaged in the siege there and then marched to Memphis, where it arrived on July 21st. Here it remained until September 26th, when it moved to Jackson, Tennessee. On September 14th it moved to Bolivar and on the 20th, on an expedition to Grand Junction. On October 4th it formed part of the column sent for the relief of General Rosecrans at Corinth, but before reaching there, it encountered the defeated Confederates and participated in the engagement of the Hatchie River near Metamora. On October 8th it returned to Bolivar and moved from there to LaGrange on November 4th.

It then participated in the Northern Mississippi campaign, advancing as far south as Yocona Creek, below Oxford.

After VanDorn's raid upon Holly Springs, the regiment returned north, and on December 30th performed guard duty along the railroad from Holly Springs to Waterford, Mississippi. On January 8, 1863, it marched to Moscow and Lafayette, Tennessee, and on the 14th to Colliersville, in the vicinity of which it remained, guarding the railroad to Memphis, until about the middle of May, when, with Lauman's 4th division of the 16th corps, it proceeded to Young's Point and Milliken's Bend, relieving the rear guard of General Blair's division of the 15th corps, and about June 11th it entered the investment line at Vicksburg and served during the siege operations until July 4, 1863.

After the surrender, it became part of General Sherman's army that moved eastward to destroy or disperse the relieving Confederate army under General Joseph E. Johnston, and on July 12th it was part of the assaulting column in the second battle of Jackson, Mississippi. The loss sustained by this command in this assault was 5 officers and 63 men, out of a total of 200 men taken into the engagement.

After this second Jackson campaign it proceeded by way of Vicksburg to Natchez, Mississippi, where on September 1, 1863, it formed part of an expedition to Harrisonburg on the Ouachita River and assisted in the destruction of Fort Beauregard.

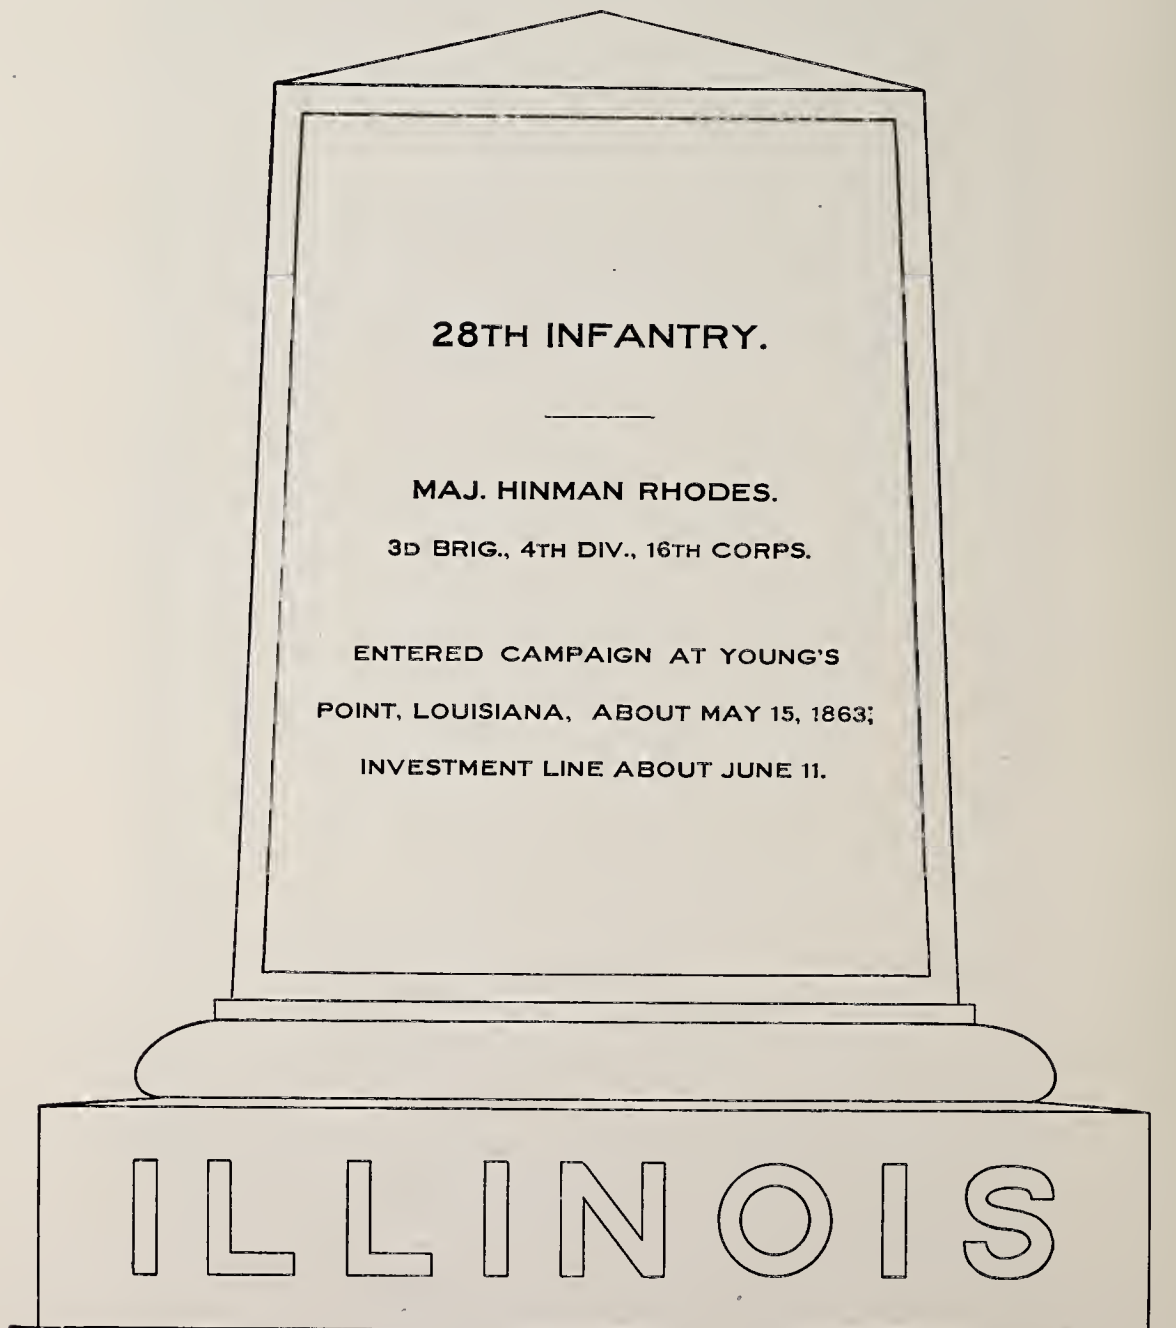

On January 4, 1864, most of the men of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and on May 18th they proceeded to Illinois on a veteran furlough. On June 29th, every furloughed man reported at Camp Butler, near Springfield, and the regiment again returned to Natchez on the 8th of July. The regiment remained here until November 3d, having participated in expeditions to Black Bayou, Mississippi, Cicily Island, Louisiana, Homochita River and to Morganza, Louisiana. It then embarked for the mouth of the White River, where it remained from November 7th to the 20th, thence it proceeded to Memphis, it remained here until December 21st and participated in an expedition to Moscow, Tennessee, returning on the 31st of December.

On January 3, 1865, it embarked for Kennerville, Louisiana, and on February 12th for Mobile Point. On this voyage it encountered a heavy gale, which compelled them to throw overboard a large number of mules and horses to lighten the vessel. It was compelled to return to the mouth of the Mississippi river on February 4, 1865, and proceeded thence to Lake Pontchartrain. It then moved to Mobile Bay by way of Fort Morgan and arrived at Fish river on March 25th and at Spanish Fort on the 27th. Here it remained in participation of the siege operations until the evacuation of the fort on the 8th of April. On the 10th it marched to Fort Blakely and on the 12th entered the City of Mobile. On June 3, 1865, Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase of the Supreme Court visited the army and reviewed the troops.

July 2, 1865, the regiment embarked for Brazos Santiago, Texas, where it arrived on the 6th and marched to Clarksville, on the 7th and on August 2d, it marched for Brownsville, Texas. Here it remained with the army of observation along the Rio Grande river ready to support the Monroe doctrine by force of arms, if the necessity for this had not been removed by the withdrawal of the French and Austrian troops from Mexico. It was mustered out of the United States service on March 15, 1866, and arrived at Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois, May 13, 1866, for final payment and discharge.

MONUMENT FOR 28TH INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

29TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized and mustered in to the United States service near Springfield, Illinois, on August 19, 1861. Only two companies of it participated in the Vicksburg campaign. These came mostly from White, Gallatin, Massac and Pope counties. The regiment was first ordered to Cairo and in October, 1862, formed part of an expedition commanded by Gen. Richard J. Oglesby to Bloomfield, Missouri. In January, 1862, it joined an expedition into Kentucky under General John A. McClernand. It was engaged at the battle of Fort Henry, which it is said to have been first to enter after its evacuation. It also participated in the battle of Fort Donelson on February 1, 1862. March 20th it proceeded to Savannah, Tennessee, on the way to Pittsburg Landing and was engaged in the battle of Shiloh on April 6th and 7th, 1862. It also participated in the siege of Corinth. During the month of June it was stationed at Jackson, Tennessee and from July 1st to October 1st it participated in many incursions to various points into west Tennessee. On October 1st it moved with the column that was sent to the relief of General Rosecrans at Corinth; it arrived too late for the battle but went in pursuit of the fleeing foe as far as Ripley, Mississippi, and then returned to Jackson, Tennessee.

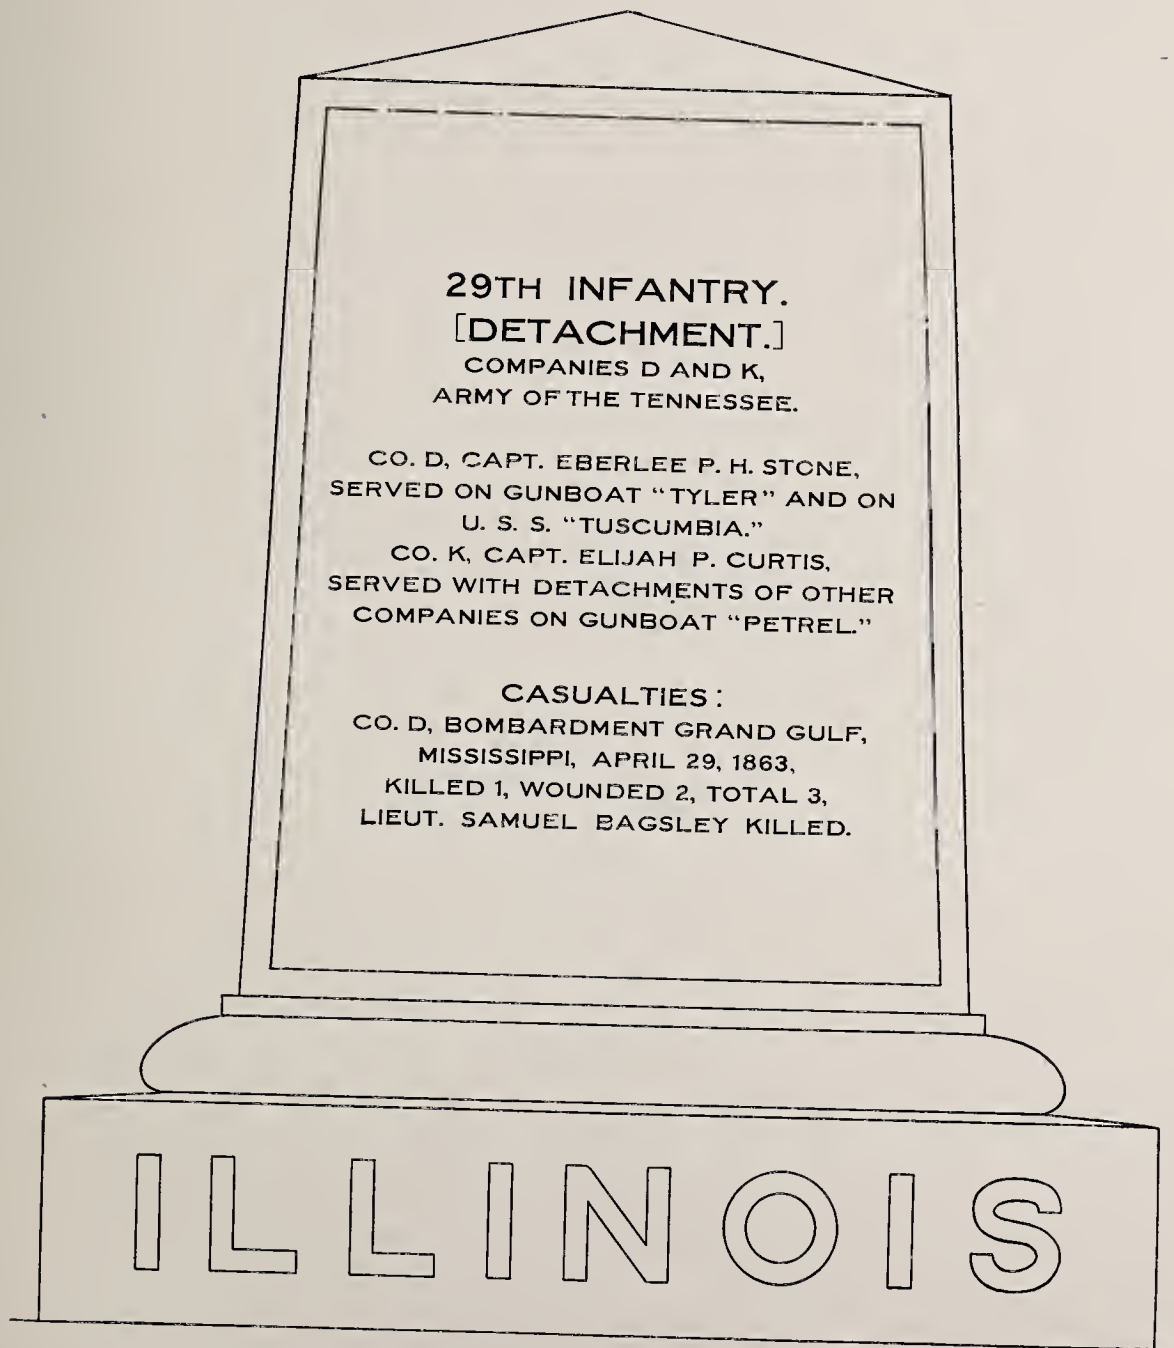

On December 1st, the regiment became part of the army engaged in the Northern Mississippi campaign and moved to Coldwater, and then went into camp at Holly Springs, Mississippi. On the 18th of this month Lieutenant Colonel Kent, with companies D and K, was ordered to Jackson, Tennessee, to strengthen the garrison at that point. This was just two days before the surrender of Holly Springs to General VanDorn, to whom Colonel R. C. Murphy gave up his entire garrison, including the other eight companies of the 29th Illinois Infantry. These companies were paroled and sent to Benton Barracks where they remained until their exchange late in July, 1863.

The service of Companies D and K during the Vicksburg campaign will be found on the inscription of the regimental monument accompanying this sketch.

On October 16, 1863, the regiment was assigned to General Logan's division of the 17th corps and on October 19th the very much reduced 131st Infantry was consolidated with the 29th. At this time the 131st was stationed at Vicksburg. The consolidated regiment remained at Natchez, Mississippi, from December 31, 1863, on garrison duty. In January, 1864, the original men of the 29th re-enlisted and on July 19th of that year they received veteran furloughs and moved to Springfield, Illinois. On August 22, 1864, they returned to Natchez. Here the regiment remained until October, when it moved to the mouth of the White river. It was then ordered to Memphis and thence to Paducah, Kentucky, where it arrived on October 20, 1864. On November 26 it again returned to Memphis and on December 21st formed part of an expedition to the interior of Tennessee, reaching Memphis again on the 31st. On January 1, 1865 it moved to New Orleans and on February 11th embarked for Mobile; landed at Dauphin Island on the 15th of February and on March 17th embarked for Fort Morgan; thence moved upon Spanish Fort, arriving in its front on the 26th and joined the siege operations. Moved to Fort Blakeley where it arrived on April 2d and participated in the siege until the surrender. Went into camp at Mobile about April 12th and on June 26th embarked for Texas, arriving off Galveston on July 1st. Thence it proceeded to Mullican, Texas, on the 9th. On November 6, 1865, it was mustered out of the United States service; arrived at Springfield, Illinois, on the 26th of November and received its final pay and discharge on the 28th.

30TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 30th Infantry was mustered in at Springfield, Illinois, in Camp Butler on August 28, 1861. The men came mostly from the vicinities of Aledo, Loami, Sparta, Hutsonville, Chester, Marshall, Keithsburg, Nilwood, Trenton, Carlisle and Bond County. It moved to Cairo, Illinois, on September 1st. On October 22d it formed part of a scouting party to the vicinity of Columbus, Kentucky. On November 7th it participated in the battle of Belmont and captured Watson's New Orleans battery. On January 10, 1862, went on a reconnaissance into Kentucky, and returned to Cairo, Illinois, on the 22d. It then moved up the Tennessee river, and on the 6th of February was in the attack upon Fort Henry, and on the 14th and 15th of February participated in the battle and capture of Fort Donelson. It arrived at Pittsburg Landing on April 25th and marched to Corinth, Mississippi, where it took part in the siege. It then moved to Bethel; on the 8th of June occupied Jackson, Tennessee; on the 13th of August, moved to Escenaula, and on the 31st to Denmark.

On September 1, 1862, it was in the affair at Medan Station on the Mississippi Central Railroad, and the battle of Britton's Lane. It remained at Jackson, Tennessee, until November 2d when it moved to LaGrange, and on the 11th toward Water Valley, Mississippi, where it arrived on December 19th. On the 21st it took up its march for Memphis, arriving there on January 19, 1863. Here it remained until February 22d when, with General Logan's division, it moved to Lake Providence, Louisiana. On April 17th it embarked for Milliken's Bend and thence took up the march over the peninsula, crossing the Mississippi river to Bruinsburg, Mississippi, on April 30th. On May 1st it moved to Thompson's Hill, thence to Hankinson Ferry, on the Big Black river, having skirmishes on the way. At Raymond, Mississippi, it was engaged in the battle of May 12th, moved thence via Clinton to Jackson, Mississippi. It was in the pursuit of the defeated confederates, after the battle of Jackson, and on the morning of May 16th entered the battle of Champion's Hill, where it lost heavily. It crossed the Big Black river on the morning of the 19th of May and reached the investment line around Vicksburg in the evening.

In the assault of May 22d this regiment, with its brigade, was held in reserve to support the other two brigades of Logan's division and on May 25th it moved with an expedition to Mechanicsburg, under General Blair. Having returned from this expedition it actively participated in the operations of the siege until June 23d, when it was ordered back to the Big Black river, to form part of General Sherman's army of observation to resist General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army.

After the surrender of Vicksburg, on July 4th, the regiment moved to Jackson, Mississippi, and assisted in the investment and capture of that place. Johnston's army having been scattered the regiment returned to Vicksburg on July 25th. It joined an expedition on August 20th to Monroe, Louisiana, from which it returned on the 28th. On October 14th it participated in another expedition toward Canton, Mississippi, during which it was engaged at Bogue Chitta Creek. On January 1, 1864, the regiment reenlisted and on the 10th formed part of an expedition up the Mississippi against Guerillas. On February 3d it formed part of General Sherman's column in the Meridian campaign. It returned on March 3d. On the 5th of this month it proceeded to Illinois on its veteran furlough; arrived at Springfield on March 12th. Left Springfield on the 18th of April and joined the Tennessee river expedition, reaching Clinton, Tennessee, on the 30th of April.

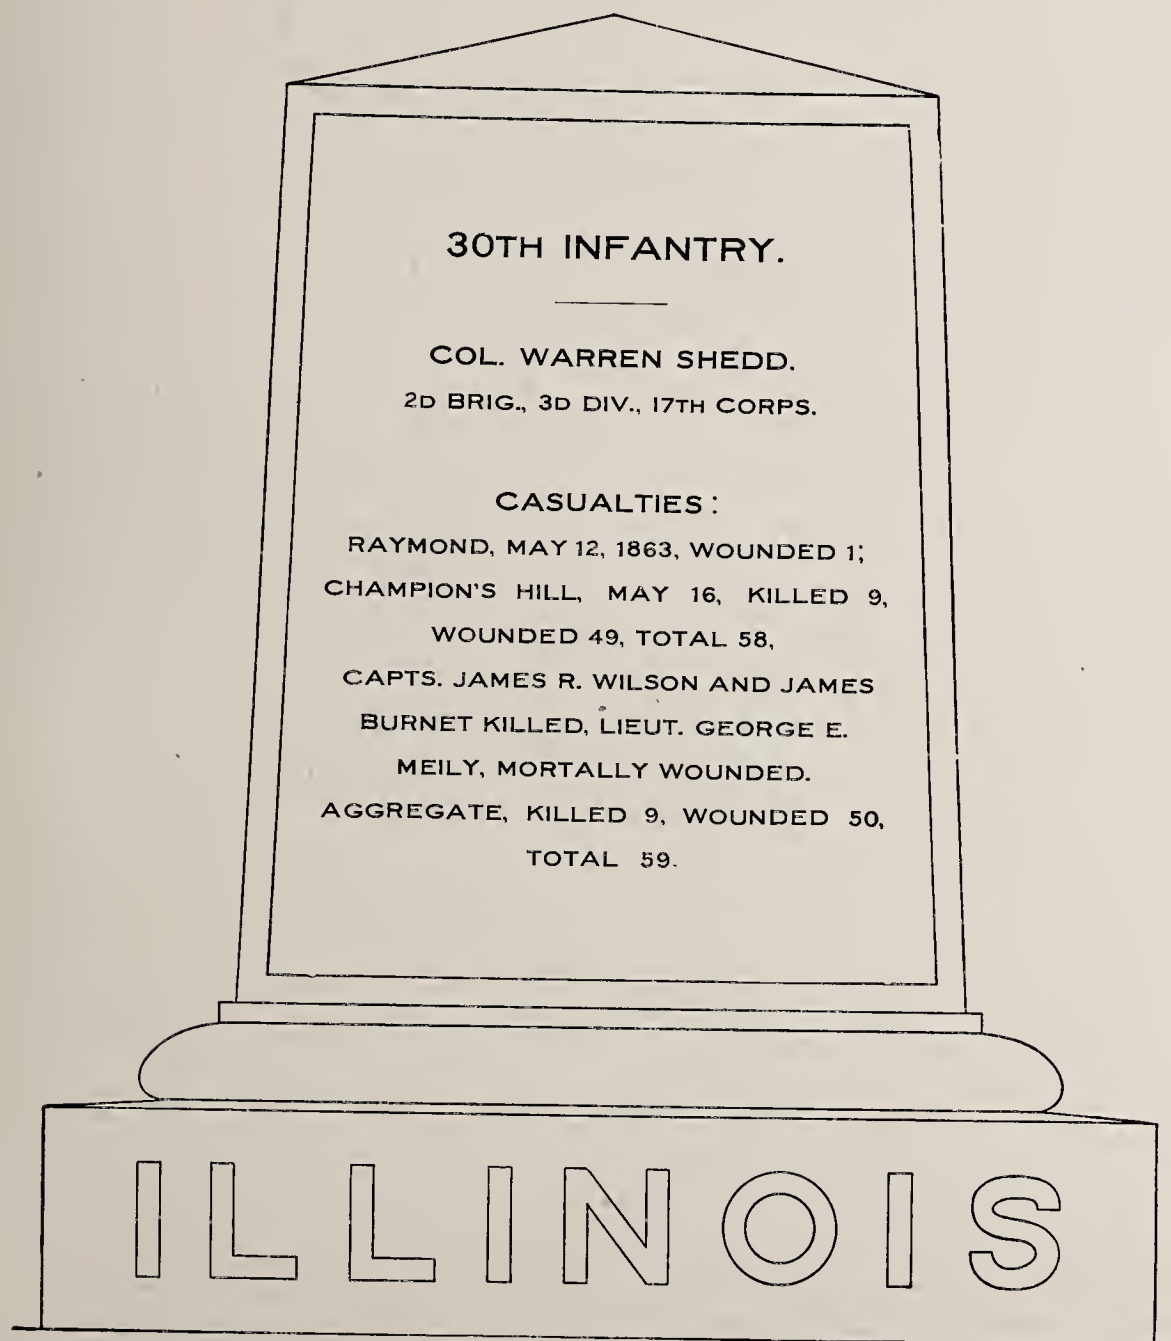

On May 5th it marched to Huntsville, Alabama, and on May 25th to Decatur and finally joined General Sherman's army at Ackworth, Georgia, on June 8th. On the 10th it moved to Big Shanty and on the 27th began skirmishing with the enemy and took part in the assault of Kenesaw. On July 5th it moved to Nickajack creek and on the 12th to Sweetwater creek. On July 7th it moved to Decatur, Georgia, via Marietta, crossing the Chattahoochie river at Roswell, and was engaged in the battle before Atlanta on July 21st; also on July 22d. It participated in all the movements that resulted in the fall of Atlanta, then remained at Eastpoint until October 4, 1864, when it moved towards the north via Kenesaw mountain to Resaca, in pursuit of General Hood and proceeded to Smyrna Camp ground, where it arrived November 5th. On November 15th it joined the march to the sea, took part in the capture of Savannah, Georgia. On December 21, 1864, went to Beaufort, South Carolina, which it left on January 13, 1865, and was present at the capture of Pocotaligo on the 15th; then moved with Sherman's army to Goldsboro, North Carolina, arriving there March 25th. During this march it participated in the operations at Orangeburg, Columbia and Cheraw, South Carolina, and Fayetteville, North Carolina. April 10th it moved to Raleigh, where it arrived on the 14th and remained until the surrender of General Joseph E. Johnston's army.

On April 29th it took up its march to Washington, arriving at Alexandria, Virginia, on May 19th. It participated in the grand review at Washington on May 24th. Left Washington June 7th for Louisville, Kentucky. Here it was mustered out of the service on July 17, 1865, and was finally paid and discharged on July 27, 1865, having arrived at Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois, on the 20th.

MONUMENT FOR 30TH INFANTRY ON JACKSON ROAD.

This regiment has two markers placed in the investing line to mark its positions during the siege; one designates the place where it was held in reserve to the assaulting column on May 22d and the other designates the line of its sharpshooters from June 5th to June 22, 1863.

31ST INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 31st Infantry was organized in August and September, 1861, at Jacksonville, Illinois, but was mustered into the service on the 18th of September, 1861, at Cairo, Illinois. General John A. Logan was its first Colonel, and General John A. McClernand its first brigade commander. The men of the regiment came mostly from Pinckneyville, Harrisburg, Carbondale, Marion, Benton, Vienna, Anna, Golconda, Cairo, Centralia and Pekin.

On November 7, 1861, the regiment was engaged in the battle of Belmont, Missouri; on the 7th of February, 1862, at Fort Henry, Tennessee, and on the 15th at Fort Donelson. From Donelson it moved by steamer to Shiloh, Tennessee, and thence marched to Corinth, Mississippi, but only reached the place after its evacuation. From there it marched to Jackson, Tennessee, where it spent the summer of 1862 in guarding railroads, reconnoitering and scouting in the Forked Deer River country and in the direction of Memphis. It was then ordered to the relief of General Rosecrans at Corinth, which place was reached, however, only in time to be of use to follow the retreating Confederates whom it pursued as far as Ripley, Mississippi. During this expedition it had skirmishes at Chewalla and Tuscumbia and returned to Jackson on October 6, 1862.

It participated in the Northern Mississippi campaign and went as far south as Coldwater, where it found itself on short rations, due to General VanDorn's capture of the Federal supplies at Holly Springs.

On the 15th of January, 1863, the regiment proceeded to LaGrange, Tennessee, thence to Colliersville and then to Memphis.

On March 10th it left Memphis for Lake Providence, Louisiana. Here it assisted in the labors to secure a water-way through the bayous and rivers of Louisiana into the Mississippi river, below Vicksburg, and after these attempts had been abandoned it moved to Milliken's Bend, and then with its division, commanded by Major General Logan, its own first Colonel, it moved down the Louisiana side and was ferried across the Mississippi river to Bruinsburg, Mississippi, on April 30, 1863. It was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson, on the left of General McClernand, and attacked the Confederate right in full view of Generals Grant and Logan and Governor Yates of Illinois, who were near enough to see the operation. On May 3d the regiment crossed Bayou Pierre and had a skirmish at Ingram Heights, and on May 12th it was engaged in the battle of Raymond. It participated in the battle of Jackson on May 14th and early in the morning of the 16th did yeoman service at the battle of Champion's Hill. It reached the investing line around Vicksburg early on the 19th and participated in the assault of the 22d and was engaged throughout the siege operations in the immediate vicinity of the Shirley House, where now stands the Illinois Memorial Temple. On the 25th of June, after the explosion of the Confederate works in its immediate front, it was ordered into the crater, relieving the 20th Illinois; it was in its turn relieved by the 17th Iowa, whom it again relieved later. It held the position until it was proven unavailable as a point for successful attack and entry. On July 4th it became part of the force that was sent into Vicksburg to take possession of the city.

After the fall of Vicksburg it participated in an expedition to Monroe, Louisiana; returning from this it proceeded to camp, near Big Black river bridge, Mississippi. On the 15th of January, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted. It next participated in General Sherman's Meridian campaign, after which it took its veteran furlough, starting for home on March 19, 1864. Returning to the field via Cairo it moved to Clinton on the Tennessee river and thence joined Sherman's army at Ackworth Station, Georgia. It had skirmishes at Big Shanty and Brush Mountain and was in the assault upon Kenesaw on June 27, 1864; was in the battles around Atlanta and the siege.

It participated in the pursuit northward of General Hood and retracing its steps, reached Atlanta on the 13th of November, and on the 15th joined in the march to the sea. On the 10th of December, 1864, it reached Savannah. On the 24th of January it embarked for Beaufort, South Carolina, participated in the skirmishing at Fort Pocotaligo. On the 30th of January it joined the campaign of the Carolinas and was at Orangeburg, Columbia, Winsborough, Cheraw, Fayetteville and Bentonville, the last struggle of Johnston's army. Then marched to Goldsboro, North Carolina, arriving there on March 24, 1865. On the 14th of April it reached Raleigh, North Carolina; then came the surrender of Johnston's army; and the 9th of May the regiment reached Richmond, Virginia, and on the 10th, Alexandria. It participated in the grand review on May 24th at Washington, D. C.

Soon after this it was ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, where it arrived on the 11th of June. Here it remained until the 19th of June, 1865, and was mustered out of the service. It then proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, where it was finally paid off and discharged on the 31st day of July, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 31ST INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

This regiment has two markers to designate its positions on the line of investment; one marks the place of its assault on May 22, 1863, and the other its line of sharpshooters from June 6th to July 4th.

32D INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Springfield, Illinois, and mustered into the service of the United States on December 31, 1861. Its companies came from Milo, Carthage, Carlinville, Greenfield, Moweaqua, St. Marie, Lebanon, Franklin, Upper Alton, Quincy, Macoupin and Logan counties. This was one of the regiments organized under the Ten-Regiment act. It originally had a company of cavalry and a battery of artillery attached to it, but before being mustered into the United States service these were transferred to organizations of their own branch of the service.

It reached Cairo on January 20, 1862, where it was equipped and armed. On February 2d it proceeded to Bird's Point, Missouri, and from there it went by water to Fort Henry, Tennessee, which it reached on February 9th. Company A, of this regiment, proceeded to Fort Donelson as escort to a battery of artillery, and participated in that engagement. Companies B, C and K were detached early in February to serve as sharpshooters on gunboats "Tyler" and "Lexington" and on March 1st participated in the action of these boats with a battery at Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, losing one man of Company C. This was in advance of General Grant's army.

On March 15th the regiment reached Pittsburg Landing and on April 6th and 7th it participated in the battle of Shiloh, sustaining a severe loss. It was next engaged in the siege of Corinth, and after the occupation of this place it proceeded to LaGrange and Grand Junction, Tennessee, and Holly Springs, Mississippi, meeting the Confederate forces of Generals Price and Van Dorn in several skirmishes. On October 15, 1862, it was part of the column which encountered these same Confederate leaders at Metamora on the Hatchie river. Returning to Bolivar on October 8th, it remained there until November 3d. It changed station to LaGrange, Tennessee, and from there made a forced march to Lamar, Mississippi, on November 8th, having a severe brush with a small force of Confederates.

On November 28th it became part of General Grant's army in the Northern Mississippi campaign, reaching the Yocona river on December 13th. After the disaster at Holly Springs on December 20th, the regiment proceeded to a position along the line of the Memphis and Charleston railroad, where it remained from January 11 to March 11, 1863, engaged in picket and scouting duty. On March 11th, it moved to Memphis, whence it proceeded on the 11th of May to Young's Point, Louisiana. From there it was ordered to Grand Gulf, Mississippi, marching opposite to this point on the Louisiana side, and reaching it on the 16th of May. On June 12th it reached the investment line of Vicksburg, having performed garrison and other duty at Grand Gulf in the meantime. From this date to June 27th it shared in the siege operation and was then ordered to Warrenton, Mississippi, where it remained doing garrison duty until July 4th when it rejoined its division in the march to Jackson, Mississippi, and became part of General Sherman's army that dispersed General Joseph E. Johnston's Confederate relieving army.

On August 15th, the regiment moved to Natchez, Mississippi, and on September 1st it participated in the expedition against Harrisonburg, Louisiana. On November 24th it again returned to Vicksburg; on December 4th, having been ordered back to Natchez, it participated in an expedition to Fayette, Mississippi, on December 21st and 22d. On January 23, 1864, it was ordered back to Vicksburg, having re-enlisted as veterans, and on February 4th it formed part of General Sherman's force in the Meridian expedition. Having returned from this it embarked for Springfield, Illinois, on March 16th. Its veteran furlough having expired the regiment moved to Birds Point, Missouri, on April 28th, which point it left on May 8th by transport, arriving at Clifton, Tennessee, on the 15th. On the 17th it began a march via Huntsville and Decatur, Alabama, to Rome and Ackworth, Georgia, where it joined General Sherman's army on June 11th, going into position on the extreme left of the army before Kenesaw mountain. On July 2d it changed position to the extreme right of the army and was in the assaulting column near Nickajack creek. The regiment was constantly engaged during the operations until July 18th when it was ordered to Marietta, Georgia, to guard a supply depot. On September 8th a foraging party of this regiment, consisting of fifty men, was captured, only nine succeeding in making their escape. On October 1st the regiment was stationed at Big Shanty and resisted an attack of Confederate cavalry on the 3d. This was one of a series of assaults on General Sherman's line of communication which occurred just before the battle of Allatoona.

On the 13th of November the regiment became part of Sherman's army on the march to the sea. It reached Monticello on the 20th, the Oconee river on the 26th and the Ogeechee river November 30th. It entered Savannah on the 21st of December and embarked for Beaufort, South Carolina, on January 5, 1865; on February 1st it entered the Carolinas campaign, reaching the North Edisto river on the 11th and the Congaree on the 16th, on the outskirts of Columbia.

A company of the 13th Iowa and Company C of the 32d Illinois having crossed the river in scows, on the 17th of February, respectively hoisted their flags over the State House and over the Town Hall, retaining the Confederate flags which they had displaced. On March 3d the command reached Cheraw, and on the 13th Fayetteville, North Carolina; became engaged at Bentonville on the 21st; March 22d reached Goldsboro and on April 13th Raleigh, where it remained until the surrender of General Joseph E. Johnston's army. On the 29th it took up its march to Washington by way of Petersburg, Richmond and Alexandria, Virginia, participating in the grand review on May 24th.

On June 6th it moved by way of Parkersburg, Virginia, to Louisville, Kentucky, thence it moved on June 20th by steamer to St. Louis, and on the 22d it moved to Fort Kearney, Nebraska territory, where it arrived on August 13th. It was returned to Fort Leavenworth for muster-out on September 2d and was finally mustered out and discharged at Springfield, Illinois, on September 16th.

MONUMENT FOR 32D INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

33D INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 33d Infantry was organized in August and September, 1861, and mustered in to the United States service at Springfield on September 19th. Its companies came mostly from Bloomington, Downers Grove, Taylorville, Princeton, Winchester, Lexington, Galesburg, Griggsville and Springfield. It was known as the Normal or teachers' regiment and attracted to its ranks teachers and students from all parts of the state. In recognition of this the teachers of Chicago public schools kept it supplied with battle flags during all its service.

Its first service was at Ironton, Missouri, from which point it made several expeditions, notably one to Fredericktown, where it was engaged with the Confederates under Jeff Thompson. In March, 1862, it moved into Arkansas and to Batesville, where it became part of General Curtis' army. It then moved by way of Jacksonport, Augusta and Clarendon to Helena, Arkansas, on the Mississippi river. It remained in the vicinity of Helena, participating in raids and expeditions to various points up and down the river. In October, 1862, it was sent to Pilot Knob, Missouri, and on November 15th to VanBuren, Arkansas. Here it participated in the campaign of Southwestern Missouri, marching through Patterson, Alton, West Plains, Eminence and Centerville, and then returned to the vicinity of Pilot Knob about March 1, 1863. From here it proceeded to Ste. Genevieve, Missouri, and at this point embarked for Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, and was assigned to the 13th army corps.

It was one of the regiments that were embarked ready to pass below Grand Gulf, Mississippi, so soon as the batteries of that place should have been destroyed or silenced by the navy, and this event not transpiring; after having watched the bombardment all day, it marched across the narrow strip of land on the levee, reaching the river below as described in the history of the campaign narrated in this volume. It was one of the first regiments to be ferried across from the Louisiana to the Mississippi side of the river, and on May 1st the skirmish line of this regiment, under Major Potter, developed the position of the Confederate forces on the left of General Carr's front and held them in check until the arrival of General Osterhaus' division.

On May 2d the regiment entered Port Gibson and assisted in the construction of a floating bridge, the enemy having burned the suspension bridge over Bayou Pierre. It then participated in the movements of its division. Held in reserve at the battle of Champion's Hill on May 16th it was engaged in the pursuit of Pemberton's army, halting at Edwards station on the night after the battle. At daybreak, on the 17th, it moved toward Big Black river bridge and participated in the action there which resulted in the capture of the Confederate works and a large number of prisoners. On May 19th it reached the Confederate defenses at Vicksburg and sustained a loss of several men in skirmishes prior to the assault of May 22d. It participated in the assault of that day and then settled down with the rest of the besieging army in the operations which resulted in the surrender on July 4th.

On July 5th it became part of the army of General Sherman that was sent east to destroy or disperse General Johnston's relieving army and participated in the actions leading to the second siege of Jackson, Mississippi, to the 16th of July, when the place was evacuated. It returned to Vicksburg on July 24th.

In August it was ordered to New Orleans, Louisiana, and entered the Bayou Teche campaign; it returned to New Orleans in November; was then ordered to Brownsville, Texas, but proceeded to Aransas Pass. It landed on St. Joseph's island and marched to Saluria, sharing in the capture of Fort Esperanza. From there it moved to Indianola and Port Lavaca.

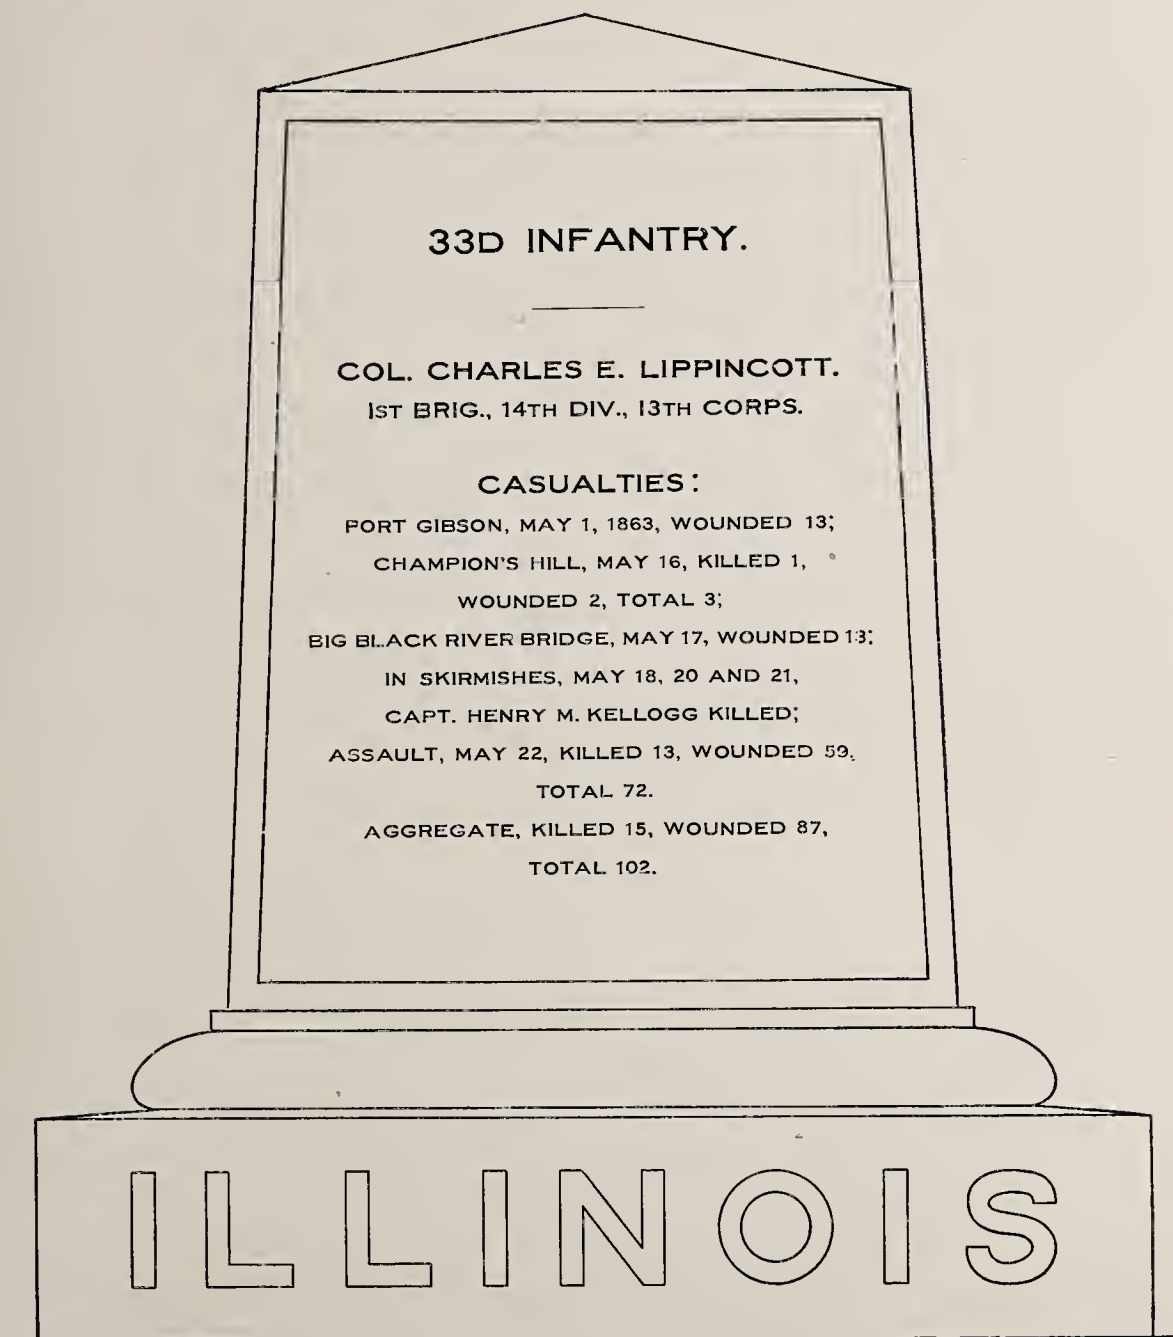

January 1, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans and proceeded north on its furlough, reaching Bloomington, Illinois, March 14th. On April 18, 1864, the regiment having re-assembled at Camp Butler near Springfield, Illinois, it proceeded to New Orleans where it arrived on the 29th and went into camp at Carrollton.

May 17th it was ordered to Brashear City, Louisiana, and was scattered, in one-company posts, at a number of points. On September 18, 1864, the members of the regiment who had not re-enlisted were sent home via New York City, in charge of Confederate prisoners and having reached Springfield, Illinois, they were mustered out of service about October 11, 1864.

On March 2, 1865, the regiment was re-assembled and proceeded to join the 16th army corps. Near Boutte's station the train was derailed and nine men were killed and more than 70 severely injured. On the 18th of March the regiment proceeded to join the Mobile campaign via New Orleans and Lake Pontchartrain, and marched with General Canby's army up the east side of Mobile bay. On March 27th it arrived in front of Spanish Fort and was actively engaged there until April 8th, the date of its capture. Mobile having surrendered, the regiment on April 13, 1865, was ordered to Montgomery, Alabama, arriving there on the 25th. On May 10th it marched to Selma, and on May 17th proceeded by rail to Meridian, Mississippi. In the latter part of July, the regiment had added to it a large number of men from the 72d, the 117th, the 122d and the 124th Illinois Infantry regiments, whose terms of enlistment had not expired when their regiments were mustered out. It was ordered to Vicksburg and remained at this place until early in November when it was sent to Yazoo City, Mississippi, where it remained until November 24, 1865, when it returned to Vicksburg for muster out. It was then ordered to Camp Butler, Illinois, near Springfield, for final payment and discharge, which took place on December 7, 1865.

Three markers have been erected to designate positions occupied by this regiment in the investing line; one marks its position on May 22d during the assault; another designates its sharpshooters line from June 15th to July 4, 1863, and the third indicates the camp site which was occupied by this regiment during the siege.

37TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 37th Infantry was organized and mustered in at Chicago on September 18, 1861. The companies came from Rock Island, Goshen, Waukegan, Chicago, Mendota, Libertyville, Moline, Belvidere and Danville. It was known as the Fremont Rifles, and in addition to ten Companies of Infantry it had attached to it two Companies of Cavalry. The Chicago Board of Trade presented a stand of colors to the regiment before its departure for St. Louis on September 19th.

Early in October the regiment proceeded to Boonville and by the middle of October eight Companies of the command became part of General Fremont's army, which operated against Springfield, Missouri, the other two Companies remaining at Boonville. On February 7, 1862, while the regiment was in camp on the Lamine river the two Companies from Boonville rejoined it and the command was assigned as part of the army of the frontier under Generals Curtis and Herron.

On March 6th, 7th and 8th it participated in the battle of Pea Ridge, Arkansas, in which Colonel Julius White of this regiment commanded the brigade, composed of his own and the 59th Illinois Infantry regiment and the Peoria, Battery A, 2d Artillery. The regiment was then stationed at Cassville, Missouri, doing outpost duty. During the summer of 1862, the regiment, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel John C. Black, proceeded to Neosho, where it encountered a strong force of Confederates, which it dispersed into the Indian Territory. During the summer of 1862, it continued to serve in southwestern Missouri, sustaining frequent encounters with Dick Quantrell and Coffee's irregular bands between Springfield and Cassville, Missouri.

On October 1, 1862, it moved to Pond Springs, Newtonia and via the battlefield of Pea Ridge to Huntsville, Arkansas. Reached Bentonville on the 23d of October, Osage Springs on the 24th and on 27th surprised the Confederates at Fayetteville, Arkansas, then returned to Osage Springs on October 30th. It continued rapid movement expeditions until December 1, 1862, when it went into camp at Camp Lyon, Missouri. During this campaign, because of its long and rapid marches, it had been given the name of the Illinois Greyhounds.

On December 3, 1862, the regiment marched to the relief of General Blunt to Prairie Grove, Arkansas, and on the morning of December 7th it engaged the Confederate forces at Prairie Grove, near Illinois Creek. Colonel Black was in command of the regiment and sustained a wound from a rifle ball in one arm while still carrying the other arm in a sling as the result of the battle of Pea Ridge. Following the battle the regiment pursued General Marmaduke's retreating army across the Boston Mountains to Fort Smith, Arkansas. After its encounter it returned to Prairie Grove, and during the winter months and spring of 1863 it kept moving about in Missouri and Arkansas, being engaged in skirmishes here and there until April 24, 1863. It was ordered to proceed to St. Louis. From there it moved to Cape Girardeau, Missouri, where it encountered a Confederate force, which it drove to Chalk Bluffs on the St. Francis River on May 2, 1863. Returning to St. Louis it became part of General Herron's division which proceeded to Vicksburg, Mississippi, where it arrived about June 13, 1863, and entered the extreme left of the investment line about June 15th. The regiment occupied the left of General Herron's Division. The pickets and rifle pits of the Division were commanded by Lt.-Col. E. P. Payne of this regiment. On July 4th it entered the City along the Warrenton Road, being one of the regiments stationed on the extreme left of the Union investing lines.

On July 13th it formed part of an expedition up the Yazoo River and participated in the first campaign of Yazoo City; the Confederates evacuated their intrenchments and the city and the expedition returned to Vicksburg via a march to the Big Black River. From here it was ordered to Port Hudson, which place it left on August 13th for New Orleans, Louisiana, and went into camp at Carrollton.

On September 5th it proceeded to Morganza and became part of an expedition against General Dick Taylor and the forces west of the Atchafalaya River. On September 29th it was engaged near Morganza Bend and again on October 1st. It returned to New Orleans on October 11th and on October 13th proceeded with the Brigade commanded by Colonel Black to Brownsville, Texas. From this date until February, 1864, it remained stationed along the Rio Grande River, extended as far north as Ringgold Barracks.

During this month it re-enlisted for three years and on February 28th was re-mustered. It returned to Illinois, and after its rendezvous at Chicago it returned to Memphis on April 30th. From here it joined an expedition after General Forrest; having returned from this expedition it proceeded on its way down the river to Atchafalaya Bayou. On May 30th it engaged in a scout to Morganza, Louisiana. It was attached to the 19th army corps June 14th. On July 12th it proceeded up the White River to St. Charles, Arkansas, and then returned to Morganza. The regiment was then attached to the 13th army corps, and on October 7th went into winter quarters at Duval's Bluff, Arkansas. On January 4, 1865, it proceeded to New Orleans, Louisiana, and thence to Barrancas, Florida, and moved to Pensacola on March 11th. On March 20th it moved to Pollard, and on April 2d participated in the siege of Mobile and in the attack on Fort Blakeley and its capture. On April 14th it went into camp in Mobile. On the 20th it proceeded up the Alabama River to Cahawba, where it liberated and relieved half-starved and emaciated union prisoners confined there. On April 29th it reached Montgomery, Alabama, thence moved to Selma on May 1st and returned to Mobile on May 15th. On June 28th it moved by steamer to Galveston, Texas, which it reached on July 1st, thence proceeded to Sabine Pass on July 5th, and was encamped at Beaumont. On July 17th it proceeded to Houston, Texas. The regiment was divided up by Companies and stationed at various points along the railroad.

On May 15, 1866, the regiment was mustered out of the United States service at Houston, Texas, and proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, for final payment and discharge, which occurred on May 31, 1866.

MONUMENT FOR 37TH INFANTRY ON WARRENTON ROAD.

One marker placed along the Warrenton Road within the Park lines designates the line of sharpshooters occupied by this regiment from June 24th to July 4th.

40TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized August 10, 1861. The Companies came mostly from Knights Prairie, Kinmundy, Liberty, Fairfield, Jeffersonville, Benton, New Baltimore, Salem, Mt. Carmel and Clay City.

It proceeded to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, August 13th, where it remained until the 30th. It moved thence to Bird's Point, Missouri, thence to Paducah, Kentucky, where it arrived on September 8th. It remained here during the winter, excepting that Companies A and F were stationed at Smithland, Kentucky. On the 10th of March, 1862, it proceeded to Eastport, Mississippi, by transport, no landing being possible at this place by reason of high water, it returned to Pittsburg Landing, where it disembarked on the 17th of March.

It became engaged in the battle of Shiloh July 6th and 7th. It then moved to Corinth, participating in the siege and engagement at this place. On July 21, 1862, it was sent to Memphis, where it remained until November 26th. It participated in the Northern Mississippi campaign, marching across with General Sherman from Memphis to Oxford. After the Holly Springs disaster it proceeded to this point and went into winter quarters near Davis' Mills. On the 17th of April, 1863, it participated in an expedition through northern Mississippi, stopping at La Grange, Tennessee, on the 25th of May.

It started for Vicksburg via Memphis, Tennessee, on June 7th, was stationed at Snyder's Bluffs until June 23d, when it changed station to the Big Black River, forming part of the army of observation during the siege of Vicksburg along the line of the Big Black and Yazoo Rivers. After the fall of Vicksburg, it formed part of the column under General Sherman to disperse General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army and was engaged in the battle of Jackson, July 16th.

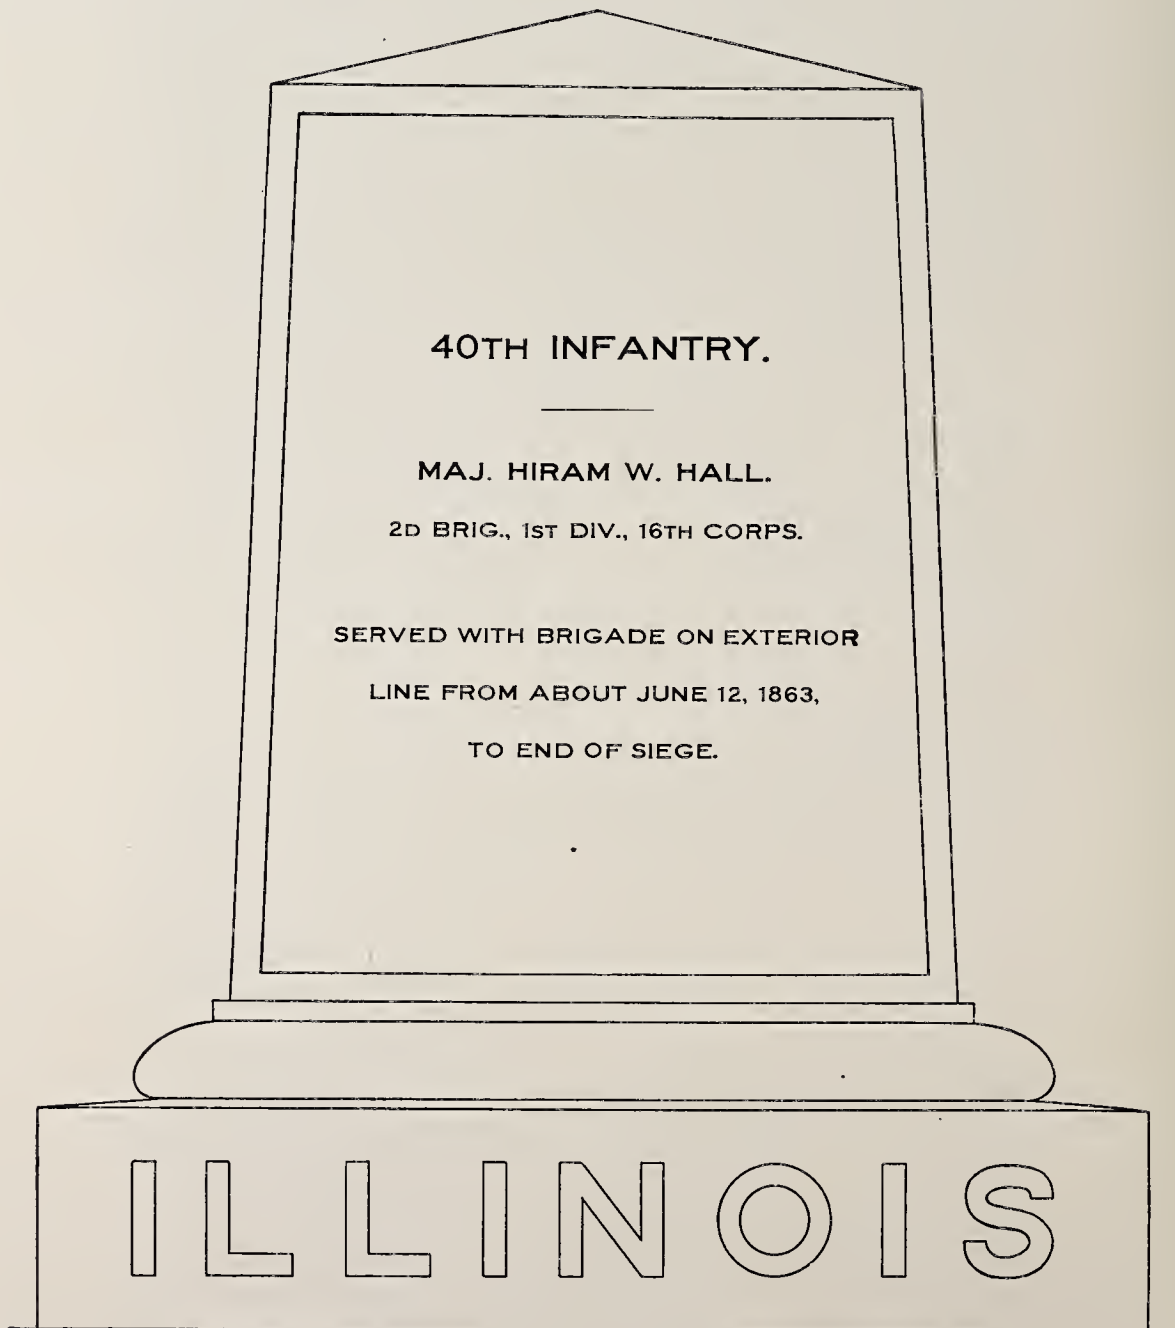

It returned to the Big Black River and went into camp there, remaining until September 25, 1863, when it returned to Memphis and thence marched across the country to Chattanooga via Corinth and Eastport Mississippi, and Florence and Stevenson, Alabama, reaching Brown's Ferry, below Chattanooga, on November 22, 1863. On this march five companies of this regiment were mounted and acted as scouts. At daylight on November 24th the regiment crossed the mouth of Chickamauga Creek and gained a foothold on a high hill, and at daylight on the morning of the 25th it led the assaulting column on Mission Ridge. On the 26th it pursued the retreating Confederate forces and on the 29th formed part of the relieving column sent to General Burnside at Knoxville, Tennessee.

On the 5th of December it crossed the Tennessee River at Morgantown, proceeded to Marysville and then began the return march to Chattanooga and from there to Scottsboro, Alabama, when the mounted Companies rejoined the regiment and the entire command went into winter quarters. The regiment re-enlisted as veterans on January 1, 1864. In March it took a veteran furlough and after it returned from this, it entered the Atlanta campaign and participated in the assault on Kenesaw Mountain on June 27th. During the battles around Atlanta, on July 22d, the regiment was assaulted in the front and rear and was compelled to fight on both sides of its works. It was again engaged on the 28th of July on the Ball's Ferry road near Atlanta. On August 24, 1864, near Jonesboro, Georgia, it was hotly engaged by the enemy, whom it repulsed.

The regiment was next sent in pursuit of Hood's army in his movement upon Chattanooga and into Northern Alabama, thence it returned to Atlanta and on November 16, 1864, it became part of Sherman's army in its march to the sea. Was engaged on November 22d near Macon, Georgia, reached the Ogeechee River near Savannah on December 10, 1864, was constantly engaged in the skirmishes in this vicinity until December 21st, when it marched into Savannah. It participated in the South Carolina campaign, and on February 20th marched out of Columbus, entered Cheraw on March 4th and Fayetteville, North Carolina, on March 14th. It was engaged in the battle of Bentonville, North Carolina, on March 22d and March 24th reached Goldsboro, where it remained until April 10th. On April 13th it reached Raleigh after several skirmishes. Here it learned of the surrender of General Lee to General Grant and remained until the surrender of General Joseph E. Johnston's army on April 29th, when it began its northward march by way of Petersburg and Richmond, Virginia. On May 13th, crossed the James River at Libby Prison and May 17th, reached Mt. Vernon and took part in the grand review in Washington, May 24th.

It remained in camp near the city until it was moved to Louisville, Kentucky, where it remained until mustered out of service on July 24, 1865, and was then sent to Springfield for final payment and discharge.

MONUMENT FOR 40TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

41ST INFANTRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 41st Infantry was organized at Decatur and mustered in on August 5, 1861. The companies came from Decatur, Sullivan, Bethany, Clinton, Blue Mound, Taylorville, Mt. Auburn, Illiopolis, Mattoon and Shelbyville.

On August 8th it was transferred to St. Louis, where it remained until the 29th, when it proceeded to Bird's Point, Mo. On September 8th it changed station to Paducah, Kentucky, where it remained until February 5, 1862, being engaged in building fortifications and in frequent incursions to a number of points in Kentucky.

It was present at the capture of Fort Henry and assisted in the capture of Fort Heiman. It was next engaged in the battle of Fort Donelson. On March 10th it returned to Fort Henry and proceeded up the Tennessee River to Pittsburg Landing. It participated in the battle of Shiloh on the 6th and 7th of April, being in the left wing of the "hornet's nest."

It then participated in the campaign and siege of Corinth, after the capture of which point it marched through northern Mississippi and western Tennessee toward Memphis and was stationed at Germantown from July 21st until September 6th, when it proceeded to Bolivar, Tennessee. On October 4th it formed part of the army that was sent to intercept Generals Price and Van Dorn in their retreat from Corinth and participated in the battle of the Hatchie River. It then returned to Grand Junction and participated in the Northern Mississippi campaign, going as far south as Oxford. After the disaster of Holly Springs, on December 20th, the regiment returned to Moscow, Tennessee, where it remained in the discharge of guard duty along the railroad until March, 1863, when it proceeded to Memphis.

On April 12th it participated in an expedition to Hernando and on May 12th it embarked for Vicksburg. On the way down it was fired into at Greenville, Mississippi, by Confederate Batteries. It arrived at Haines Bluff on the Yazoo River on May 22d and marched thence to near the left of the investment line, on which it served from about May 25th to July 4th, the day of the surrender. On July 5th, it moved with General Sherman's army in his campaign against Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army and participated in the second battle of Jackson, where it lost very heavily. It returned to Vicksburg and on November 18th moved to Natchez, Mississippi. From there it returned on December 16th and went into camp on the Big Black River, where the regiment re-enlisted as veterans on March 17, 1864, and proceeded north on a veteran furlough. The members of the regiment that did not re-enlist were sent to participate in the Red River campaign.

On its arrival in Illinois it was sent to quell a riot at Charleston in which sympathizers with the South were engaged. It proceeded from Mattoon to disperse an alleged camp of 1,500 Confederate sympathizers, and finding no one under arms upon its arrival, it quietly returned to Mattoon and dispersed for its thirty-day furlough. At its expiration, the regiment moved to Cairo and thence to Nashville, Tennessee. From there it proceeded to Tunnel Hill to guard the line of communication with Atlanta, thence it was sent to Moon Station, Big Shanty, Marietta and Kenesaw Mountain. Upon the death of General McPherson in front of Atlanta on July 22d, the non-veterans of this regiment under command of Major G. R. Steele were detailed as escort to his body.

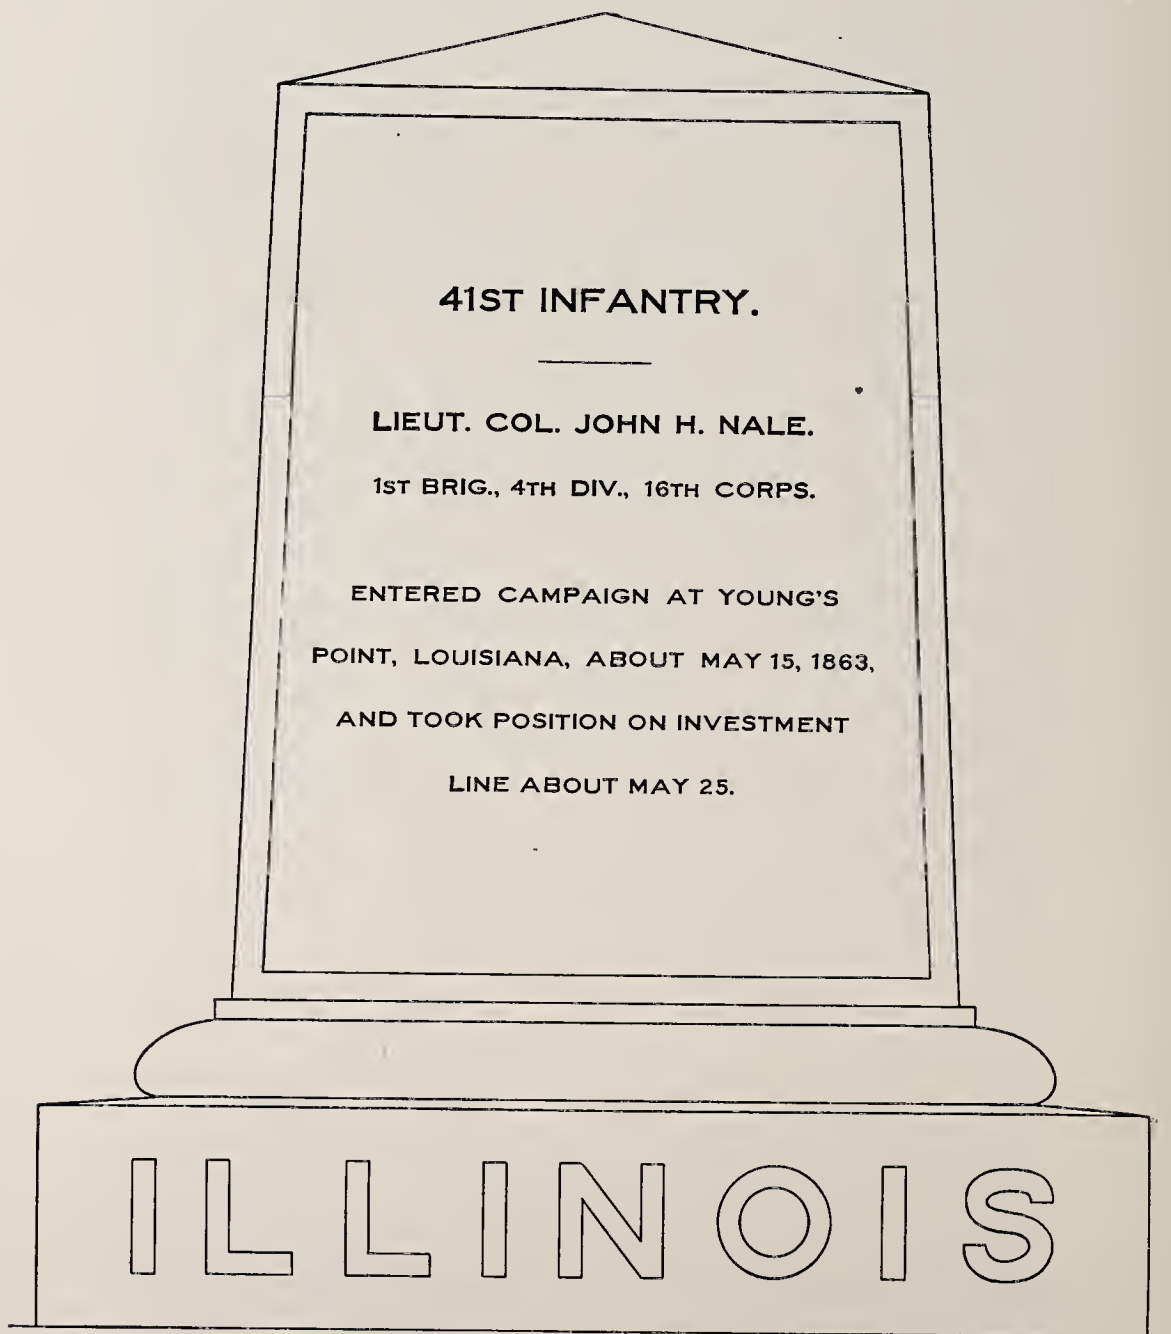

The regiment, having been very much reduced, was organized into a battalion and was stationed at the base of Kenesaw Mountain during General Hood's movement northward, and while stationed here it witnessed the struggle at Allatoona. It joined the army on the "march to the sea" and arrived at Savannah, Georgia, on December 4, 1864, and on January 4, 1865, it was consolidated with the 53d Infantry as Companies H and G of this command.

Its further history is covered in that of the 53d.

MONUMENT FOR 41ST INFANTRY ON WISCONSIN AVENUE.

One marker has been placed along Wisconsin Avenue to mark the position occupied in the investing line by the sharpshooters of this regiment from June 9th to July 4, 1863.

43D INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Camp Butler near Springfield in September and mustered into the United States service October 12, 1861. The Companies came largely from Belleville, Mascoutah, Galesburg, Chicago and Rock Island.

The next day after its organization, comprising only eight Companies, the regiment moved to Benton Barracks, Missouri, where it was armed and equipped. It remained here until November 3d, when it proceeded to Tipton, Missouri, and the next day to Otterville. On December 30th it took up its march back to Tipton. On January 20th it was transferred to Benton Barracks and while here, Companies I and K were added to the command. On February 6th it proceeded by steamer to Fort Henry on the Tennessee River, which it reached on the 8th. On the 24th it moved to Fort Donelson, where it remained until March 4th, when it moved to Bell's Landing on the Tennessee River and proceeded to Savannah, where it arrived on the 12th. On the 18th it participated in an expedition to Pinhook and on the 22d moved to Pittsburg Landing, going into camp some distance northeast of Shiloh Church. It was engaged in the battle of Shiloh on April 6th and 7th and then participated in the advance on Corinth, moved thence on June 6th to Bethel and on the 15th and 16th to Jackson, Tennessee.

On July 7th it marched to Bolivar, arriving there on the 19th. While stationed here it was engaged principally in the work of building fortifications. It left Bolivar on September 19th and moved to Iuka, Mississippi, on the 20th, thence returned to Corinth, Mississippi, and on the 23d to Bolivar, Tennessee. It marched to LaGrange, Tennessee, but returned to Bolivar the next day.

On December 18th the greater part of the regiment moved to Jackson, Tennessee, and participated in an expedition against General Forrest, who had crossed the Tennessee River near Lexington. It returned to Bolivar on the 26th. In the early Spring of 1863, a large portion of the regiment was mounted and participated in various expeditions in the vicinity of Bolivar.

On May 31, 1863, the regiment proceeded to Memphis, and from there moved by river to Vicksburg, landing on the Yazoo River. It proceeded up the Yazoo River as far as Satartia and had an encounter with the Confederates under General Wirt Adams.

On June 8th it was moved to Haines' Bluff, on July 12th to the Big Black River and on July 22d to Snyder's Bluff, and on the 29th of that month it embarked for Helena, Arkansas. On August 13th it left Helena and proceeded to Clarendon on the White River, crossed the White River on the 22d and reached Duvall's Bluff on the 24th. It reached Little Rock on the 11th, having proceeded by way of Brownsville, Ashley's Mill and crossed the Arkansas River on pontoons.

The 43d was the first infantry command to take possession of the City. On March 23, 1864, it left Little Rock in the column of General Steele in his Red River expedition. It reached Arkadelphia on the 29th, having crossed many streams and placed a pontoon over the Ouachita River. On April 1st it moved to Spoonsville and on the 2d had a skirmish at Okolona. On the 10th it moved to Prairie d'Ahu. Here it was engaged in a lively skirmish. It reached Camden on the 14th of April, General Banks having been defeated, with whom General Steele had expected to make a junction, it was ascertained that the Confederates were massing all their forces against him and he decided to return to Little Rock.

The regiment left Camden on the 27th on its return trip. On April 30th it was engaged in the Saline River Bottom near Jenkins' Ferry.

It arrived at Little Rock on May 3, 1864, here it remained until its enlistment of three years had expired. The places of the discharged men were then filled by new recruits, about three-quarters of the old men having enlisted as veterans and the regiment continued doing duty at Little Rock until it was finally mustered out of the service on November 30, 1865.

It returned to Camp Butler near Springfield and was discharged on December 14, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 43D INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

45TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 45th was known as The Lead Mine regiment and was organized at Galena, Illinois, on July 23, 1861, on the Fair grounds. Only seven Companies gathered here, although the regimental organization was fully completed and the regiment armed. On November 22d, its camp was broken and the regiment proceeded to Camp Douglas, Chicago, where the full complement of ten Companies was secured and the organization mustered into the service of the United States as a regiment on December 25, 1861.

On January 12, 1862, it moved to Cairo, Illinois, where it remained until February 2d, when it proceeded with General Grant's army up the Tennessee River to Fort Henry. On the 6th of that month it marched to Fort Henry, the place having been evacuated. On February 11th it took up its march to Fort Donelson and on the 13th it became engaged in the three days' fight at Donelson, which resulted in the capture of that Fort.

On March 4th it marched across country to the mouth of the Big Sandy and embarked for up the Tennessee River, arriving at Savannah on the 11th. It remained here until March 25th and participated in the Pin Hook expedition. On the last date mentioned it proceeded to Pittsburg Landing and camped near the junction of the Purdy and Corinth roads not far from Shiloh Church.

On April 6th and 7th it was engaged in the battle of Shiloh. On April 24th it broke camp and moved forward with the army's approach upon Corinth and participated in the campaign and siege. On June 4th it moved to Jackson, Tennessee, where it remained guarding the railroad until August 11th, when it moved south on the Mississippi Central Railroad to various points. On August 31st Armstrong's Confederate Cavalry made a raid along this line and captured Company C of the regiment at Teagues. On September 17th, the regiment resumed its camp at Jackson. On November 2d it changed station to LaGrange, Tennessee. Here it was engaged in provost guard duty till November 28th, when it became part of General Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign, going as far south as Springdale, Mississippi.

After the disaster of Holly Springs, it took up its return march on December 22d to a position north of the Tallahatchie River, where it remained until January 1, 1863, and then took up its march for Memphis. In February of that year it boarded a transport at Memphis to enter the Vicksburg campaign. It proceeded to Lake Providence and Milliken's Bend. Here volunteers were called for, to run the Vicksburg Batteries with transports and an entire crew volunteered for this duty on the Anglo Saxon and took her safely through. Captain L. B. Fisk, being the Commander, Privates Charles Evans and Joshua Kendall being the pilots, Sergeants A. J. Esping and Charles Flint being engineers and privates J. M. Primmer, William Tripp and John Paul being firemen. On May 1, 1863, this regiment having been one of the first of the 17th Corps to cross at Bruinsburg to Mississippi soil, it participated in the battle of Port Gibson. It also participated in the battle of Raymond on May 12th, in the battle of Champion's Hill on the 16th and on May 19th it entered the investment line along the Jackson Road, serving immediately in the vicinity of the Shirley House, known as the White House during the siege, in front of the 3d Louisiana redan, which was called, by the Union forces at that time, Fort Hill.

The 45th participated in the assault on the 22d of May and in all the mining operations in its immediate vicinity throughout the siege. On the 25th of June, when the 3d Louisiana redan was blown up by a mine that this regiment had been largely instrumental in placing, it was the first to enter into the crater in the attempt to take possession as a storming party. It sustained a very severe loss in officers and men on this occasion. At the surrender of the City on July 4th, General McPherson complimented this regiment by designating it to be the first to enter the captured City, and its flag was placed upon the Court House steeple and displayed by Colonel William E. Strong of General McPherson's staff. It was detailed for Provost Guard duty on July 4th and continued discharging this task until October 14th, when it was relieved to participate in the Canton expedition. From November 7, 1863, until February 3, 1864, the regiment remained in camp at the Big Black River, about ten miles east of Vicksburg. In December a majority of its members re-enlisted as veterans. From February 3d to March 4th it participated in the Meridian expedition under General Sherman and was engaged in the skirmish at Chunkey Station.

On March 17th it took steamer at Vicksburg for Cairo on a thirty days' veteran furlough. It again assembled at Cairo on May 4th and proceeded to join the army then engaged in the Atlanta campaign, reaching Etowah Bridge, Georgia, on June 7th, having proceeded by steamer from Cairo to Clifton, Tennessee, and then marched overland by way of Pulaski, Huntsville and Decatur, Alabama, and Rome and Kingston, Georgia. From this time forth it shared in the Atlanta campaign until the beginning of the march to the sea. It left Atlanta November 12th and arrived at Savannah on December 21, 1864. On January 4, 1865, it took steamer at Savannah and reached Beaufort, South Carolina, on the 13th. It was engaged at Pocotaligo, South Carolina, on January 14th and left this place on January 30th on the march through the Carolinas, going into camp at Sugar Loaf Mountain on February 28th, having marched to Orangeburg, Columbia, Ridgway and Winsboro.

On March 3d it moved by way of Cheraw, Fayetteville and Bentonville to Goldsboro, North Carolina, arriving here on March 24th.

On April 10th, the march from Goldsboro was resumed toward Raleigh and Greensboro, then back to Raleigh. Here it received the news of the surrender of General Lee's and Johnston's armies and learned that the war was over.

May 1, 1865, it resumed its march for Washington, D. C., via Richmond. Survivors represent this as their hardest march. It was a foot race between the 15th and 17th corps to see which would reach Washington first. Neither won the race, as they were halted at Alexandria and went into camp there on May 19, 1865. At Washington it participated in the grand review of May 23d and 24th and on June 6th the regiment departed for Louisville, Kentucky, by rail, where it arrived on the 8th. On July 12th, it was mustered out of the service and sent to Chicago for final payment and discharge, which took place on July 15, 1865,

MONUMENT FOR 45TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Two markers designate positions held by this regiment on the investment line; the first marks the place occupied in its assault on May 20th; the other marks the line of its sharpshooters from June 6th to July 4th, 1863.

46TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 46th Infantry was enrolled and organized at Camp Butler near Springfield on December 28th, 1861. Its Companies came from Freeport, Lancaster, Township, Amboy, Mt. Morris, Clay City, Lane, Plainfield, Orangeville and Dixon.

It proceeded to Cairo, Illinois, on February 11th, and thence by way of the Cumberland River to Fort Donelson, Tennessee. It arrived on the 14th, on the 16th it moved through the works to Dover and on the 19th marched to Fort Henry. On March 6th it embarked for Pittsburg Landing, which it reached on the 18th. On April 6th and 7th it participated in the battle of Shiloh. It then was engaged in the siege and capture of Corinth and on the 10th of June marched to the Hatchie River and on the 15th marched to Grand Junction, Tennessee, and camped near this place until the 24th, when it took a position near LaGrange and, on the 30th, at Old Lamar Church.

On July 1st it took part in an expedition to Cold Water and on the 17th moved toward Memphis, marching by way of Moscow, Lafayette, Germantown and Whites Station, going into camp two miles south of Memphis on July 21st. August 27th engaged in a scout to Pigeon Roost. During September it was constantly on the go in minor expeditions in the vicinity of Memphis. September 6th marched northeast, arriving at Bolivar on the 14th. On October 4th it was sent toward Corinth and on the 5th had a skirmish at Metamora, an incident of the Battle of the Hatchie, in which the regiment lost its colonel, John A. Davis, and Lieutenant Moses R. Thompson. The regiment then proceeded to Bolivar, Tennessee, to camp. On November 3d, in consequence of casualties, Companies F and D were consolidated. It moved to LaGrange and then became part of the Northern Mississippi campaign, marching as far south as Yocona on the Yocona River. The disaster at Holly Springs causing a retracing of the army, the regiment then returned to the north side of the Tallahatchie River, which it reached on the 24th of December and thence was stationed near Holly Springs until January 6th, 1863, when it entered this City. It passed all of the Spring months in the vicinity of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, participating in various scouts and expeditions. On May 13th it proceeded to Memphis and embarked for Vicksburg and landed at Young's Point on the 15th. On the 18th it marched to Bowers Landing and on the 19th to Sherman's Landing and on the 20th again boarded the steamer and was transferred by way of the Yazoo River to Chickasaw Bayou. On May 21st it took up its march from the Chickasaw station to the right of General Grant's investing army and on the 24th, marched in the rear of this army, to a position toward the left of the investing line, which it reached on the 25th of May. On picket duty on the night of this day, five Companies of this regiment were captured by the enemy, the remainder of the regiment took an active part in the siege and on July 5th it was ordered to participate in General Sherman's campaign against General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army and took part in the second siege of Jackson, which culminated on July 16th, after which the regiment returned to Vicksburg.

On August 11th it proceeded to Natchez and remained here, taking part in numerous expeditions. November 10th embarked for Vicksburg and built barracks. On January 4, 1864, the regiment was re-enlisted and on the 12th started for the north on its veteran furlough with 20 officers and 334 enlisted men. It arrived at Freeport on the 23d. The officers and men spent their visit home in recruiting a new Company, which was raised at Freeport and completed the regiment as a ten-Company organization. It left Freeport on March 2d, 1864, for Cairo and Vicksburg and went into camp ten miles east of Vicksburg near the Big Black River. Here it remained until April 25th, when it moved to Vicksburg by rail and encamped near Battery Ransom, northeast of the City, doing garrison duty.

It participated in an expedition to Benton and Yazoo City on May 4th, from which it returned on the 18th. On July 1st it started on an expedition to Jackson, Mississippi, whence it returned on the 9th, having sustained considerable loss during a skirmish at Jackson on the 7th. On July 29th it participated in an expedition to Morganza Bend, Louisiana, where it remained for some time. On August 23d it marched to Port Hudson, Louisiana, from thence moved to Clinton, Louisiana, and returned to Morganza on the 29th. It proceeded then, in September, to the mouth of the White River in Arkansas; on October 7th it proceeded to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, where it arrived on the 9th and on the 28th of December it moved toward Memphis.

On January 2d, 1865, it proceeded to Kennerville, Louisiana, and from there moved to Dauphin Island, Alabama, where the regiment encamped on the 10th of February. On the 18th it began its march to Mobile. It was engaged at Spanish Fort and Fort Blakeley and arrived at Mobile on April 12th. On May 12th it moved by rail to Meridian, Mississippi, but returned to Mobile on the 21st and on the 27th embarked on steamer for New Orleans, arriving there on the 28th of May, thence it proceeded to Alexandria, Natchitoches and Shreveport on the Red River. On June 19th it moved to Grand Ecore, Louisiana. Here it remained doing garrison duty until November 20th, when it again moved to Shreveport. On December 27th the regiment was ordered to Baton Rouge, Louisiana. It then proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, for muster out and final discharge, which took place February 1st, 1866.

MONUMENT FOR 46TH INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

This regiment has one marker located in the investing line to designate the position of its sharpshooters' line from May 25th to July 4th, 1863.

47TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Peoria, with Companies coming mostly from Peoria, Washington, Whitefield, Pekin, Lacon, Sparland, Wheatland, Minonk and Wyoming and mustered into the United States service on August 16th, 1861.

On September 23d it went to Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, Missouri. It proceeded to Jefferson City, Missouri, on October 9th, where it performed garrison duty until December 22d, when it moved by rail to Otterville. Here it remained until the 2d of February, 1862, when it moved first to Booneville and then marched on the north side of the Missouri River to St. Charles, arriving there on the 18th. It then returned to St. Louis and embarked for Cairo on the 23d of February. On the 25th it proceeded to Commerce, Missouri, and became part of General Pope's army organizing for the Island No. 10 campaign. It arrived in front of New Madrid, on March 4th and occupied the City on April 7th. It thence proceeded down the river to Fort Pillow and Tiptonville and then by way of Cairo up the Tennessee River, arriving at Hamburg Landing Tennessee, on April 22d. On the 9th of May it was engaged in the battle of Farmington, Mississippi, and on the 28th at Corinth, where on the 29th it participated in the pursuit of the retreating Confederate forces, after the evacuation, as far as Booneville, Mississippi, returning to Corinth on June 11th.

On July 3d it marched to Rienzi, Mississippi, where it remained until August 18th, thence it took up its march to Tuscumbia, Alabama, reaching there on the 22d, broke camp on September 8th and marched to Camp Clear Creek, where it arrived on the 14th. On the 18th took up its march towards Iuka, Mississippi, and took part in the battle of this name on the 19th. It returned to Corinth on the 3d of October and participated in the battle of Corinth on the 3d and 4th. It became part of General Rosecrans army, which moved in pursuit of the defeated Generals Price and Van Dorn, whom it followed as far as Ripley, Mississippi. On October 14th it returned to Corinth and remained here until November 2d, when it marched to Grand Junction, Tennessee, to become part of General Grant's army of the Northern Mississippi campaign.

It moved as far south as Oxford, Mississippi, and after General Van Dorn's capture of Holly Springs returned to Grand Junction, Tennessee, on January 1st, 1863. This point it left on the 8th, moving by way of Bolivar, Tennessee, to Corinth, where it arrived on January 14th. From there it moved on January 26th to Ridgway Station, where it remained until March 12th, guarding the railroad. On this day it took up its march to Memphis and embarked for Vicksburg, Mississippi. It was retained near Helena, Arkansas, for ten days and then again proceeded down the river, reaching Duckport, Louisiana, on April 1st. While stationed here the regiment served by details in digging the canal across the Peninsula in front of Vicksburg. It moved with General Sherman's army from this point on May 2d, crossing the river at Grand Gulf and on the 14th of this month participated in the battle of Jackson, Mississippi. It was the rear guard of this army upon its evacuation of the Capital on the 16th. Colonel Cromwell of this regiment while engaged in the investigation and search for possible stragglers of the Union army was surprised by a body of Confederate Cavalrymen, who, upon his declination to surrender, fired upon him and killed him.

The regiment reached the investment line of Vicksburg too late for the assault on the 19th of May, but was engaged in the second assault on the 22d of May, on the stockade redan, and the Grave Yard road. It participated in the siege operations until the close of the same on July 4th, excepting that on May 26 and in June it took part in expeditions that were sent to the vicinity of Yazoo City and Mechanicsburg, Mississippi, respectively, to defeat threatening forces of Confederates; also in two expeditions to Richmond, Louisiana, west of the river.

After the surrender of Vicksburg, the regiment was encamped at Black River bridge and at Bear Creek, some twenty miles east of Vicksburg, during the months of August, September and October. In November it moved to Memphis and thence to LaGrange, Tennessee, as guard along the Memphis & Charleston Railroad. On January 26th, 1864, it again proceeded to Memphis and thence on February 1st to Vicksburg and Big Black River Bridge. On February 23d it was part of an expedition to Canton, Mississippi; having returned from this expedition it embarked on March 7th for the Red River expedition and was present at the capture of Fort De Russey, Louisiana, on March 14th. It also took part in the battle of Pleasant Hill, Louisiana, April 9th, 1864. On the 22d of May the regiment again returned to Vicksburg and on June 5th returned to Memphis. On its way hither it encountered General Marmaduke's forces at Lake Chicot. From Memphis, it proceeded to Tupelo, Mississippi. A number of men of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans and proceeded to Illinois on a veteran furlough. They returned on August 8th and participated in an expedition to Oxford, Mississippi, from which they returned on August 27th, 1864.

The original term of service having expired, the non-veteran members of the regiment were ordered to Springfield and were finally discharged on the 11th of October, 1864. The remaining members of the regiment left Memphis on September 2d on an expedition up White River to Brownsville, Arkansas, and from there marched north into Missouri in pursuit of General Price's raiding army.

It arrived at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, on October 4th and embarked for Jefferson City, which it reached on the 15th, thence it moved to Otterville and thence to Warrensburg, reaching this point on October 26th. Left here for St. Louis on November 2d. The veteran part of this regiment was ordered to Chicago, Illinois, to assist in quelling any riot that might occur there on the day of the Presidential election. Their services were not needed and they were then ordered to Camp Butler, near Springfield, where two hundred recruits were added to the command, and the regiment was organized into four full companies; this Battalion was on the 3d of December ordered to St. Louis, thence moved to Louisville, Kentucky, thence to Bowling Green, Kentucky, where it remained until January 22d, 1865, when it proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee. From this City it proceeded by steamer down the Cumberland and up the Tennessee River to Eastport, Mississippi. From thence it moved to New Orleans, thence to Mobile Bay and participated in the campaign and siege of Mobile and capture of Spanish Fort.

During these siege operations six additional companies joined it from Illinois, again making the organization a full regiment.

After the fall of Mobile it marched to Montgomery, Alabama, where it arrived on April 25th, 1865. It then moved to Selma, Alabama, on December 31st, 1865, and was here mustered out of service on January 21st, 1866, whence it moved to Springfield, Illinois, for final payment and discharge.

MONUMENT FOR 47TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

The 47th Infantry has one marker to designate its position in the assault on May 22d, 1863, near the Stockade Redan on the Graveyard Road.

48TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Was organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield, Ill., on September 15th, 1861. The Companies came from New Liberty "A," Louisville "B" and "K," Elizabethtown "C," Nashville "D," Marion "E," Centralia "F," Mt. Carmel "G," Carmi "H" and Johnsonville "I." It proceeded to Cairo on November 11th, and in January, 1862, joined General Grant's army in his reconnaissance in the rear of Columbus, Kentucky. On February 2d it embarked for Fort Henry and landed below the Fort on February 6th, it entered it after its surrender. On February 11th it marched toward Fort Donelson and was engaged in the battle leading to its surrender and capture during the 13th, 14th and 15th of the month. The regiment then moved to Savannah and Pittsburg Landing, and on April 6th and 7th was engaged in the battle of Shiloh.

It next became engaged in the siege operations about Corinth, Mississippi, and in June was sent to Bethel, Tennessee, as garrison of that post. Here it remained until 1863. It later moved to Germantown, and on June 9th proceeded to Memphis and thence to Vicksburg, Mississippi. It arrived near Snyder's Bluffs on the Yazoo River about the 14th of the month and became part of General Grant's army, facing the east along the line of the Yazoo and Big Black Rivers during the siege of Vicksburg. After the fall of Vicksburg it was part of General Sherman's army that moved for the dispersion of General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army, reaching Jackson July 11th, 1863. It participated in the second siege of this City and in the assault on the 16th of July. It was then in camp at Big Black River until September 30th and proceeded to Memphis, where it arrived on October 10th and whence it departed on the 11th on its long march to Chattanooga, Tennessee. Here it participated in the operations in Lookout Valley and took part in the battle of Mission Ridge, following Bragg's retreating army as far as Ringgold, Georgia.

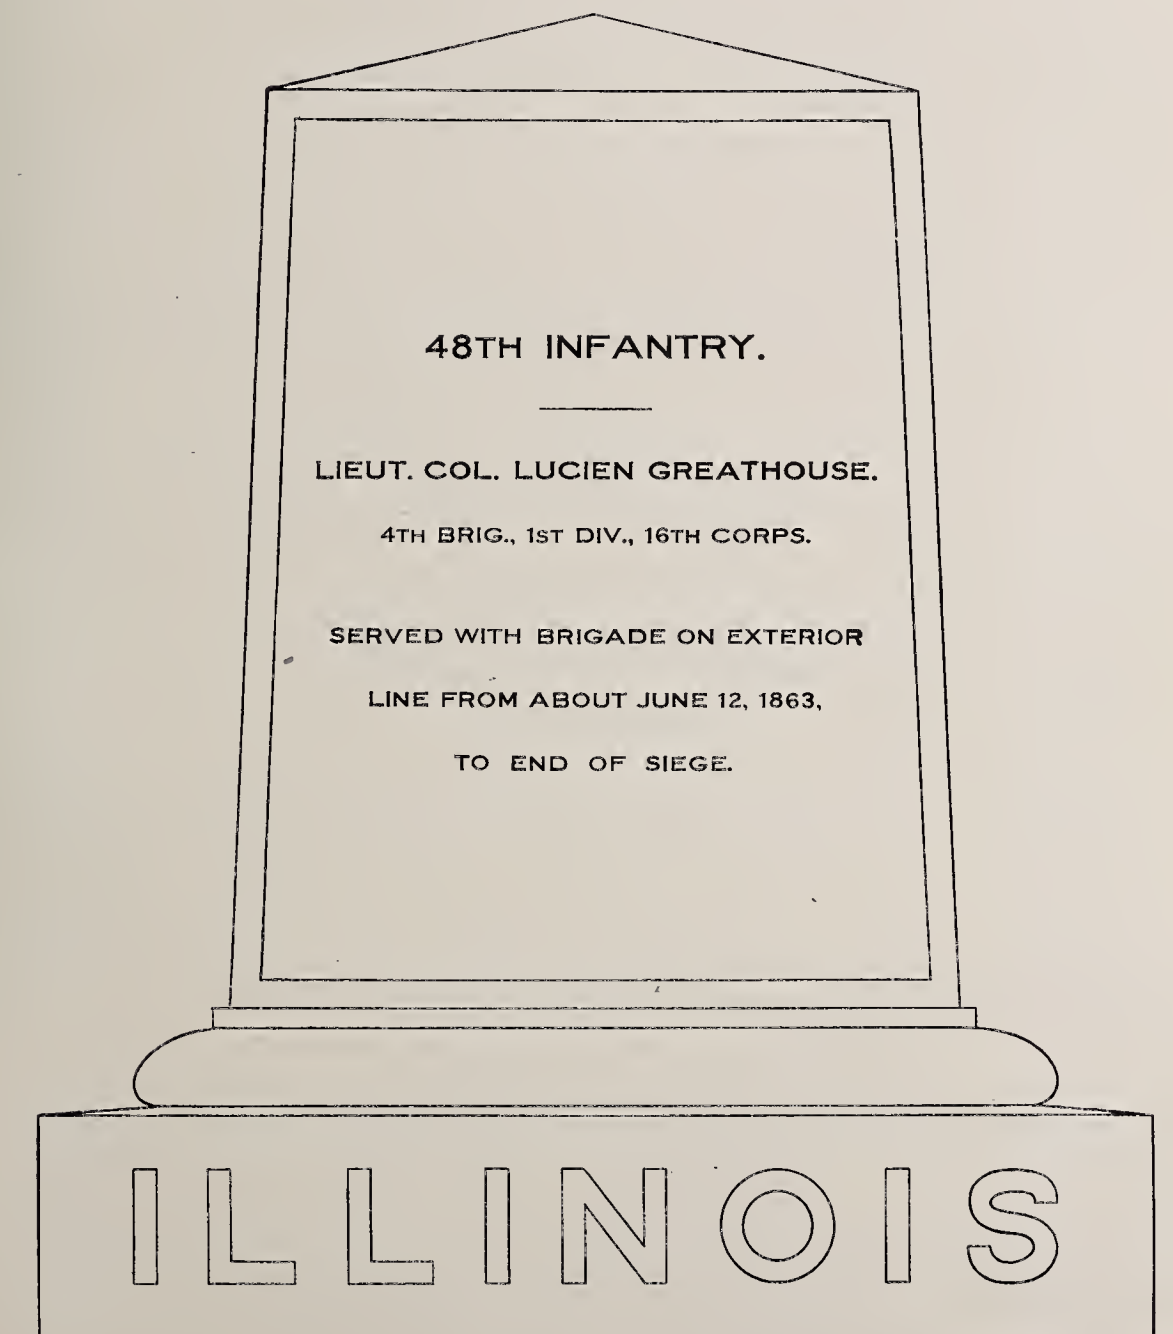

It then became part of the army sent to the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville, Tennessee. It returned from this expedition and proceeded to Bridgeport, Alabama, which it reached on December 17th, thence to Scottsboro, Alabama, on January 1st, 1864, where nearly the entire regiment reenlisted as veterans.

It reached Springfield, Illinois, on veteran furlough on January 27th and was re-assembled at Centralia, Illinois, on March 10, 1864, when it returned to Chattanooga by way of Louisville, Nashville and Scottsboro. On May 3d it left Chattanooga and proceeded to Atlanta by way of Resaca, Dallas and Kennesaw Mountain. It followed General Hood back to Marietta, Resaca and Jacksonville, Ala., and then again returned to Atlanta.

Here on November 15, 1864, it became part of the armies that marched to the sea, reaching the fortifications in front of Savannah on December 11th and Fort McAllister on the 13th.

On January 1st, 1865, it entered Savannah, Georgia, and from there proceeded to Beaufort, South Carolina, thence on January 21st it moved to Columbia by way of Pocotaligo, Branchville and Orangeburg. From there it marched to Goldsboro, North Carolina, taking in Camden, Fayetteville and Bentonville en route. Moved thence on April 10th to Raleigh, North Carolina, and from there to the City of Washington by way of Lewisburg, Petersburg and Richmond. It participated in the grand review here May 23d and 24th and on June 2d it proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky. From here it moved to Little Rock, Arkansas, on June 25th and was mustered out August 15th, 1865. It proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, for final payment and discharge, arriving here on August 21st, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 48TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

53D INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 53d Infantry was assembled at Ottawa, Illinois, in December, 1861, to January, 1862. Its Companies came from Ottawa, Earlville, Kankakee, Pontiac, Lacon and LaSalle. On the 27th of February, 1863, while it was still incomplete in its organization, it was ordered to Chicago to assist in guarding the Confederate prisoners that had been captured at Fort Donelson. On March 23d it proceeded to St. Louis and thence to Savannah, Tennessee. It was ordered to Shiloh, but did not reach there in time for the battle by reason of lack of transportation. It departed from Savannah on the afternoon of the 7th of April. The regiment participated in the siege of Corinth and marched to Grand Junction, LaGrange, Holly Springs and Memphis, reaching there on July 21st, 1862. On September 6th it marched to Bolivar, where it arrived on the 13th. On October 5th it was engaged in the battle of the Hatchie River. On November 4th the regiment changed station to LaGrange, Tennessee, and later in the month formed part of General Grant's army on his Northern Mississippi campaign, marching as far south as Yocona Creek, which it reached on December 13th. After the disaster at Holly Springs it retraced its step and on January 11th arrived at Moscow, Tennessee. On March 11th it moved to Memphis and on May 17th, 1863, it embarked for Young's Point, Louisiana. On the 20th moved to Haines' Bluff. From there it marched in rear of General Grant's investing line and took position in this line on the extreme left about May 25th. It participated in the siege operations until the surrender on July 4th, and on July 5th became part of General Sherman's army, which moved to Jackson, Mississippi, to disperse General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army. On the 12th it assaulted the Confederate works with great disaster to the regiment, including the loss of its colors and Colonel Seth C. Earl, among the killed.

The object of General Sherman's army, the driving of Johnston from the State, having been accomplished, the regiment returned to Vicksburg, and on August 18th moved to Memphis and again returned to Vicksburg on November 30th. On the 1st of February, 1864, most of the men re-enlisted as veterans, and on the 3d day of the month the regiment started on the Meridian campaign, from which it returned to Hebron, Mississippi, on February 29th.

It then proceeded by way of Vicksburg, which it left on March 13th, to Ottawa, Illinois. It arrived on the 22d. Here the men were furloughed. Before its return to the front, a new Company I was organized to complete the ten companies of the regiment, Companies I and E having been previously consolidated.

The regiment then proceeded to Cairo, moved from there up the Tennessee River to Clifton, Tennessee, and thence, by way of Huntsville and Decatur, Alabama, to join General Sherman's army at Princeton, Georgia. On June 8th it proceeded to Allatoona Pass and engaged in the building of earthworks. On July 13th it was ordered to Marietta and on June 17th rejoined the main army at the front. It became engaged in the siege and battles before Atlanta, July 19th to 22d, and was engaged as skirmishers at Jonesboro. Proceeded as far south as Lovejoy's station, thence returned to Eastpoint. On October 1st it formed part of a reconnoissance toward Sand Town, under General T. E. G. Ransom. On October 4th it returned to Eastpoint and engaged in the pursuit of General Hood's army to Galesville, Ala.

General Ransom, who was taken very ill on October 27th, died at the Farm House of James Berryhill, near Ronie, early in the morning of October 29th, and this regiment was designated as escort for his remains to Rome, Georgia. After having performed this sad duty it resumed its march toward Atlanta the next day, acting as an escort for officers and soldiers returning to their commands in the front.

On November 6th it camped at Marietta, Georgia, on November 13th moved to West Point and on the 15th joined in the "March to the sea," and reached the fortifications in front of Savannah on December 10th and on the 21st marched into the City.

On January 4th, 1865, the remnant of the 41st Illinois Infantry was consolidated with this regiment.

On the 6th it embarked for Beaufort and then for Pocotaligo. On January 29th it joined the Carolinas' campaign, participated in the battle of Bentonville March 20th and 21st, having reached there by way of a long march through Orangeburg, Columbia, Fayetteville and Cheraw. Thence marched to Goldsboro, Raleigh and Jones Station, and after the surrender of Johnston's army, marched with Sherman to Washington and in the Grand Review of May 24th, 1865. On June 6th it was ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, where it was mustered out of the service on the 22d day of July. It then proceeded to Chicago, where on July 28th, 1865, it received its final pay and discharge.

MONUMENT FOR 53D INFANTRY ON WISCONSIN AVENUE.

One marker has been placed along Wisconsin Avenue to mark the positions occupied in the investing line of the sharpshooters of this regiment from June 9th to July 4th, 1863.

54TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was enlisted and organized at Anna during the winter of 1861-2 and was mustered into the service of the United States on February 18th, 1862. The companies were mostly recruited in the vicinity of Pana, Arcola, Mattoon, Elliottstown, Newton, Paris, Casey, Shelbyville, Effingham and Charleston.

On the 24th of February, it proceeded to Cairo and on March 14th moved to Columbus, Kentucky, where it remained until June doing guard duty and working on a new system of fortifications. It also assisted in the recovery of some heavy guns which the Confederates had abandoned by dumping into the Mississippi River when they evacuated the place. These guns this regiment afterwards assisted in replacing in position within the re-constructed works.

In June, the regiment was distributed along the Mobile & Ohio Railroad and was engaged in re-constructing the road which had been rendered unserviceable by the Confederates in their retreat from Columbus. The command was stationed along this road by detachments, at Union City and Humboldt, Tennessee, at the Obion River Bridge, and at the Little Obion River Bridge. Headquarters were established at Union City, Tennessee, where five companies were stationed, where one of which, C, was mounted. On December 18th the regiment was ordered to Jackson, Tennessee. All Quartermaster's stores of the regiment and Company B were ordered back to Columbus, but were by some one in authority at Columbus ordered to proceed to Union City, Tennessee, where they were captured with all the regimental records. On December 20th, it formed part of an expedition to Lexington, then to Brittan's Lane, Tennessee, returning on December 28th. It remained in the vicinity of Jackson during January, February and March, 1863. It proceeded thence to Corinth, Mississippi, in April but again resumed its station at Jackson which it left on May 30th, 1863, and then proceeded by way of Memphis to aid in the Vicksburg campaign.

It arrived at Haines' Bluff on the Yazoo River early in June and there formed part of Sherman's army on the line extending to the Big Black River confronting the army of General Joseph E. Johnston. After the surrender of Vicksburg, it participated in the second campaign and capture of Jackson, Mississippi, under General Sherman, and having returned from this, it remained in the vicinity of Vicksburg until July 24th. On that date it moved to Helena, Arkansas, and joined in the expedition against Little Rock. It arrived at Little Rock on September 10th and on October 15th it formed part of an expedition to Benton and Rock Port, Arkansas.

In January, 1864, the greater portion of the regiment re-enlisted and was mustered in as veterans February 9; started for Illinois on a veteran furlough March 28. While some of the men that lived in Charleston and vicinity were waiting for the train to carry them to Mattoon they were attacked by a band of Confederate sympathizers (copper-heads), led by the sheriff of the county. In the fray that ensued, the regimental surgeon, Major York and four enlisted men were killed and several were severely wounded, including Colonel G. M. Mitchell. The men that had assembled at Mattoon reached Charleston within an hour and quickly restored order and captured some of the ringleaders of the attack.

On April 12th it proceeded to Cairo, thence on the 14th to Columbus, Kentucky, thence on the 16th to Paducah, Kentucky, which it left on the 22d and again returned to Little Rock, Arkansas, on April 30th. On May 18th it took part in an expedition to Brownsville and Springfield. On June 25th it moved to Duvall's Bluff and thence to Clarendon. Here it was engaged with the Confederate General Shelby on the 26th and went into camp at Duvall's Bluff on the 29th.

On August 5th it was deployed along the Memphis & Little Rock Railroad, extending a distance of sixteen miles and covering five stations guarded by two companies at each. On August 24th it sustained an attack by General Shelby who succeeded in capturing the guard at one station. Six other companies had been concentrated at another station and fought behind breastworks of bales of hay. These were set on fire by the enemy's shells and after five hours' fighting the command was captured. Only two companies of the regiment were unattacked; in this engagement 13 men were killed and 35 wounded. The prisoners were paroled at Jacksonport, Arkansas, and reached Benton Barracks, Missouri, on September 9th, 1864.

On December 5th, 1864, the regiment was exchanged and proceeded to Hickory Station on the Memphis & Little Rock Railroad, arriving there January 18, 1865. Here it remained as railroad guard until June 6, 1865. Then proceeded to Pine Bluff, Arkansas, where it arrived on June 9th, marching thence on August 18th to Fort Smith where it arrived on the 30th. On October 4th it again moved to Little Rock. On October 15th it was mustered out of service and proceeded to Camp Butler near Springfield, Illinois, where it received its final pay and discharge on October 26, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 54TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

55TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Was organized at Camp Douglas, Chicago, and mustered into the service of the United States on October 31, 1861. The companies were mostly raised in and near Canton, Dement, Durand, Mendota, Elgin, Bushnell, LaLalle, Chicago, Morris and Abingdon.

On November 9th the command moved to Alton, Illinois, and thence to St. Louis and went into camp at Benton Barracks on November 11th. Here it remained until January 12, 1862, when it took steamer to Paducah, Kentucky, which it reached on the 22d. From here it participated in the expedition to reconnoiter Columbus, Kentucky. On March 8, 1862, it embarked for the upper Tennessee River, landing on the 15th near Pittsburg Landing. It participated in the battle of Shiloh April 6th and 7th where it sustained very severe losses. It next was engaged in the advance on Corinth on May 17th and entered this stronghold on May 30th. From there it moved by various stages to Chewalla, LaGrange, Lafayette, Moscow and Holly Springs and on July 21, 1862, it reached Memphis where it remained until November 26th, participating, while stationed here, in several expeditions to the surrounding country.

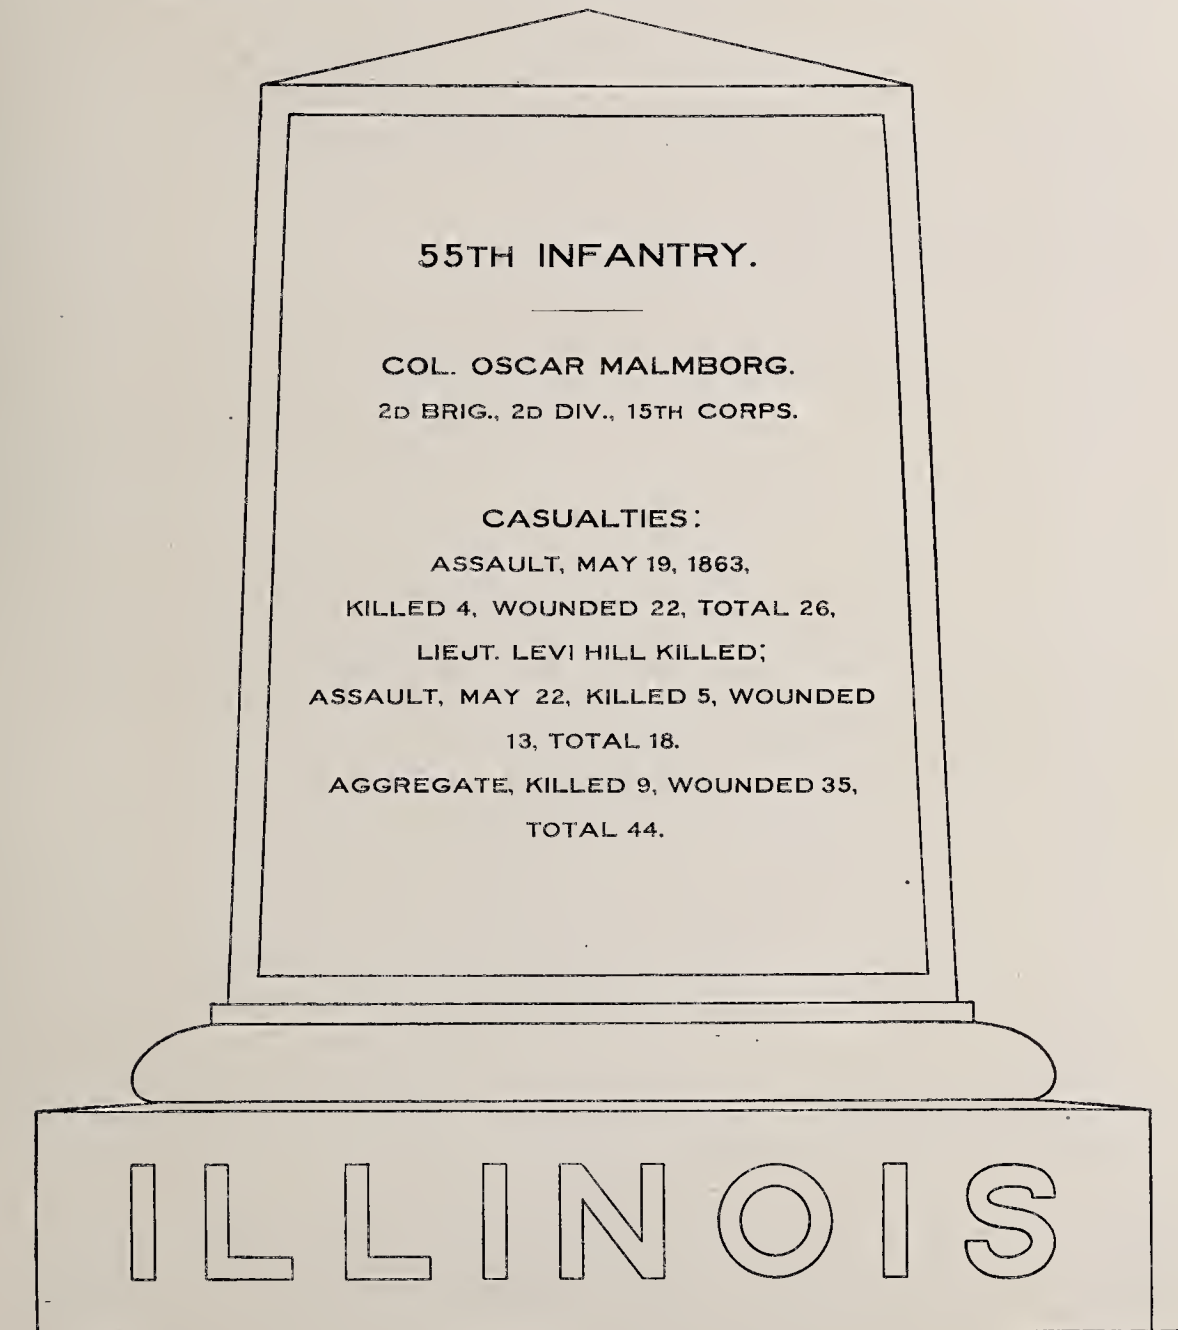

On the last named date it participated in General Sherman's march from Memphis to Oxford, Mississippi, during General Grant's northern Mississippi campaign and returned from Oxford to Memphis to take part in General Sherman's expedition to attack Vicksburg from the Yazoo River. Here it was engaged in the battle of Chickasaw Bayou and then on January 10th and 11th it participated in the battle of Arkansas Post. After this it became part of the army stationed at Young's Point and Milliken's Bend and on April 29, 1863, it was part of General Blair's Division that was sent up the Yazoo River to make a feigned attack on Haines' Bluff to the north of Vicksburg while General Grant was crossing the river at Bruinsburg and fighting the battle of Port Gibson south of that stronghold. It then retraced its steps and followed the movement of Grant's army and was in position to participate in the battle of Champions Hill on May 16th. On the 17th it crossed the Big Black River at Bridgeport and arrived near the investment line at the north-east of Vicksburg in the afternoon of May 18th. It became part of the investing army and participated in the assault of May 19th and May 22d. After the surrender of July 4th it became part of General Sherman's army in his expedition to Jackson, Mississippi, for the dispersion of General Joseph E. Johnston's army.

Returning from this expedition it went into camp near the Big Black River where it remained until September 27th when it took steamer for Memphis and thence moved to Iuka by way of Corinth. From there it participated in the arduous march to Chattanooga where it arrived on November 21, 1863. During the night of November 23d, it became part of the command that placed the pontoons in North Chickamauga Creek over which Sherman's Army crossed the Tennessee River. The regiment next participated in the battle of Mission Ridge, then became part of the army sent to the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville. Returning from this it spent the winter at Bridgeport, Alabama, Bellefonte and Larkinsville. Here it re-enlisted as veterans and took a thirty days' veteran furlough. Having returned from this it entered the Atlanta campaign. It sustained heavy losses at Kenesaw Mountain on June 27, 1864. It participated in the battles before Atlanta and particularly on July 22, when General MacPherson was killed, on July 28, at Ezra Chappel and later at Jonesboro. It then joined in the pursuit of General Hood and then returned to Atlanta.

Next it participated in the march to the sea and was again engaged at Bentonville, North Carolina. After the surrender of General Johnston's army the regiment marched to Washington by way of Richmond, Virginia, and participated in the Grand Review. After this it was ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, and thence it was ordered to Little Rock, Arkansas, where on August 14, 1865, it was mustered out of the United States service. It proceeded to Chicago and here received its final payment and discharge on August 22, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 55TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Five markers have been placed to designate positions occupied by this regiment on the investment line; one marks the spot where the regiment assaulted on May 19th; the second designates the location of the assault on May 22d; the third designates its sharpshooters' line from June 11th to July 4th; the fourth from June 23d to July 4, 1863, and the fifth its camp ground from June 11th to the end of the siege.

56TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Was organized and mustered in at Shawneetown on February 27, 1862. The men came mostly from and near Metropolis, Golconda, Carmi, Shawneetown, Galatia, McLeansboro and Fairfield, and from the rural districts in Massac, Pope, Hardin, Gallatin, Saline, White, Hamilton, Franklin, Williamson and Wayne Counties.

Its first service was at Paducah, Kentucky, and from there it moved up the Tennessee River to Hamburg Landing and marched out to join in the siege of Corinth and in the pursuit of the Confederates after their evacuation.

During the summer of 1862 it remained in the vicinity of Corinth but participated in numerous expeditions into the surrounding country. On October 3d when Generals Price and Van Dorn attacked Corinth, it was active in the line of defense. This regiment, by a bayonet charge, succeeded in recapturing Fort Powell with its battery which had previously been taken by the Confederates. This movement broke the Confederate left centre. After the successful repulse, it moved in pursuit and by direction of General Rosecrans occupied Kossuth, some twelve miles south of Corinth.

The regiment next became part of General Grant's army in its Mississippi campaign in the winter of 1862, advancing as far south as Yocona Creek; after the capture of Holly Springs by the Confederates, it was part of an escort of a large wagon train that marched to Memphis from Oxford, Mississippi, to obtain supplies for the army. It reached Memphis about December 25th; it remained in the vicinity of this city during the balance of the winter, being engaged in the protection of the railroad. In the spring of 1863 it participated in the Yazoo Pass Expedition and after the return from this expedition it joined Grant's army at Young's Point and marched down the Louisiana side to a point opposite Grand Gulf. The regiment did not cross the river with the main army but was left with orders to occupy Grand Gulf when evacuated and make it the base. This it did May 4th. The Confederates having withdrawn and blown up the fort, the regiment with steamboats conveyed by a gunboat, soon brought a large quantity of supplies to Grand Gulf from Perkins' plantation to which point supplies were brought in wagons from Milliken's Bend.

The regiment was relieved to join its brigade and division in time for the battle of Champion's Hill. From thence on it conformed to the movement of its brigade, reaching the investment line of Vicksburg nearly midway between the Jackson and Baldwin's Ferry Roads on May 19th, participated in the assault of May 22d, and marched with the division to reinforce General Mc-

Ciernand's Corps. It also took part in all the operations of the siege until the surrender on July 4th. On June 25th when General Logan exploded the mine under the Confederate fort in front of him, this regiment was sent to the aid of his division, and took part in the action of the crater of "Fort Hill," but the next day resumed its proper place in the investment line. The regiment with its brigade marched into Vicksburg July 4th.

After the surrender it remained in the vicinity of Vicksburg for a short time and was then ordered to Helena, Arkansas, to become part of General Steele's expedition against Little Rock. General Steele having captured Little Rock before the troops of which this regiment formed a part reached Helena, the division joined the march from Memphis to Chattanooga. On the 23d of November, having reached a point above and opposite Chattanooga, it crossed the Tennessee River at night in pontoon boats and participated in the battle of Mission Ridge on the 24th and 25th. From here the regiment moved to Huntsville, Alabama, and on the 1st of May, 1864, it entered the Atlanta campaign. About July 1st it was stationed at Calhoun, Georgia, guarding the railroad and in October when General Hood advanced northward to cut General Sherman's communications, it was ordered to the relief of Resaca, reaching there on the afternoon of October 12th in time to become part of the little army defending this point and successfully resisting General Hood's attack.

On November 8, 1864, as part of the 2d Brigade 3d Division 15th Army Corps, the regiment left Calhoun, Georgia, and joined the main army November 14th at Atlanta and became part of the army in the march to the sea and on December 23d entered Savannah, Georgia. On the 16th of January, it, with the brigade, crossed the Savannah River into South Carolina and marched to Pocotaligo to join the balance of the 15th Army Corps as part of the Carolina's campaign in which it participated throughout, including the battle of Bentonville, North Carolina.

Upon reaching Goldsboro, North Carolina, the members of the regiment that had not re-enlisted as veterans were ordered home to be mustered out of the service. This embraced 12 officers and 193 enlisted men who embarked on the steamship General Lyon. During a heavy storm off Cape Hatteras, the vessel caught fire and of all the men aboard of her, numbering over 500, only 28 persons were saved and only 5 of the members of the regiment.

After the surrender of General Johnston's army the regiment marched to Washington and participated in the Grand Review. It was then ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, and to Arkansas where it was finally mustered out at Little Rock on August 12, 1865, and returned to Illinois for final payment and discharge.

MONUMENT FOR 56TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Two markers have been erected to designate locations occupied by this regiment in the investment line; one marks the position of the assault on May 22d and the other its line of sharpshooters from June 5th to July 4, 1863.

61ST INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was partially organized at Carrollton on February 5, 1862. On February 21st, with three companies complete and six companies partially filled, it was ordered to Benton Barracks near St. Louis, Missouri, where on March 7th it was mustered into the United States service as a nine company regiment.

These companies came mostly from Carrollton, White Hall, Greenfield and other parts of Greene County and from Jerseyville, Petersburg, Lawrenceville and Chicago.

On March 26th it embarked for Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, arriving there on the 30th and was assigned to General B. M. Prentiss' Division. On the morning of April 6th, 1862, the division, with the 61st in line, met the terrific onslaught of Hardee's corps in their opening of the battle of Shiloh, Tennessee. For three quarters of an hour the 61st, fresh from their peaceful homes, faced the determined foe. When empty cartridge boxes confronted them, nothing remained for them but death, capture or retreat; they chose the latter and dropped slowly and in order, back to supplies of ammunition. At this time the regiment was ordered to the support of a battery in aid of W. H. L. Wallace at the sunken road, designated by the Confederates later as the hornet's nest. At about 1 p. m. the 61st was sent to support Hurlbut's Division at the Peach Orchard, a hundred yards in front or south of Bloody Pond. From this point it was returned to the support of the battery, where it remained until about 5 p. m., at which time, the Confederates, having driven our forces back to the Hamburg and Savannah road, swooped down on the right and rear of the remaining exhausted men which forced them from their position in the sunken road and those best able to travel fell back to the new lines near the river. The 61st participated in this last retreat, the wounded and exhausted were taken prisoners. On April 7th it was held in reserve. The regiment lost heavily in killed and wounded.

June 6th it moved to Bethel, Tennessee, June 16th to Jackson, and to Bolivar on the 17th, September 6th moved to Brownsville, Mississippi, and thence to Bolivar, September 25th. Colonel Fry of the 61st while in command of the Post at Trenton, Tennessee, was taken prisoner by General Forrest December 20th and paroled. December 18th Companies G, E, B and D were sent to Jackson, Tennessee, where they had a spirited engagement with Forrest.

May 31, 1863, having been assigned to the 16th Corps, the regiment proceeded to Vicksburg by way of Memphis. Ascending the Yazoo River about twenty miles, it had a brush with the enemy, after which it returned to Haines' Bluff.

After occupying various positions in the exterior line of Vicksburg, it was on July 27th ordered to Helena, Arkansas, then to Little Rock. The regiment engaged in expeditions in various directions. In the early part of 1864, enough of the men re-enlisted to enable the regiment to retain its organization as a veteran command. March 20th, 1864, Company K joined the command from Camp Butler, Illinois, making the tenth company.

August 14, 1864, the veterans started for Springfield, Illinois, on furlough, leaving Company K, the non-veterans and other recruits at Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas. On the expiration of the furlough the veterans re-assembled at Springfield, Illinois, and from there moved to St. Louis, Missouri. Companies B, D, G and E were detached and sent to Chester, Illinois, to guard the Mississippi River at that point until October 14th when they rejoined the veteran regiment at St. Louis. It was sent to Mexico, Missouri, from whence it engaged in some hard marches, after roving bands of Confederates and bushwhackers for a month or more. Then it returned to St. Louis.

On November 6, 1864, it left for Paducah, Kentucky. From this point it moved to Nashville, Tennessee and on November 28th to Murfreesboro, near which place on December 4th, it was engaged at Overall's Creek and on December 7th, had another engagement near Murfreesboro in which it lost quite heavily. December 12th, the regiment was with another small detachment sent as railroad train guard to Stevenson, Alabama, for supplies. On the return at about 2 a. m. December 16th, eight miles out from Murfreesboro, the train was attacked by about 1,500 Confederates under Forrest, who surrounded it, tore up the tracks in front and rear and began firing on the guards, who held the train until 8 a. m. When further resistance appeared fruitless, about half the command under Lieut. Colonel Grass having been killed, wounded or captured, about 200 men under Major J. B. Nulton cut their way out and reached a block house about a half mile north. Reinforcements from Murfreesboro arrived with which this detachment returned to the fight, recaptured the train that had been but little damaged and brought it safely in. This was the last severe action the 61st took part in.

February 4, 1865, the non-veterans and recruits rejoined the regiment; March 21st moved to Franklin. In June the recruits of the 83d, 98th and 103d, Illinois Infantry, were transferred to and joined the 61st which filled the ranks so that the regiment was entitled to a colonel.

September 8, 1865, it was mustered out at Nashville, Tennessee, and started for home. On September 27th at Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois, it received its final pay and was discharged and broke ranks forever.

Co K COMPANY K WAS NOT ORGANIZED UNTIL JANUARY, 1864.

MONUMENT FOR 61ST INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

63d INFANTRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 63d Infantry was recruited and organized near Anna, Illinois, and was mustered into the United States service on April 10, 1862. The men composing this regiment came mostly from the vicinity of Olney, Albion, Bloomington, Mulkeytown, Robinson, Decatur and Charleston.

On April 27th it moved to Cairo, thence to Henderson, Kentucky, on July 19th and returned to Cairo on the 26th. On August 4th it proceeded to Jackson, Tennessee, from whence it moved to LaGrange on November 10th. It became part of General Grant's army in the Northern Mississippi campaign, and after the Holly Springs disaster again took station at LaGrange and moved to Memphis, January 20, 1863. On May 10, 1863, it received orders to move to Vicksburg, Mississippi, and did picket duty at Young's Point, Louisiana, till May 21st. From here it crossed the river to Warren-ton and took position on the extreme left of the investment line.

On May 25th it was ordered to report to General Logan's Division on the investment line near Jackson road and shortly after it was ordered to Young's Point, Louisiana. On June 16th it participated in General Mower's expedition to Richmond, Louisiana, whence it returned to Young's Point. Here it remained until after the surrender of Vicksburg. On the 15th day of July it was sent into this City for post duty.

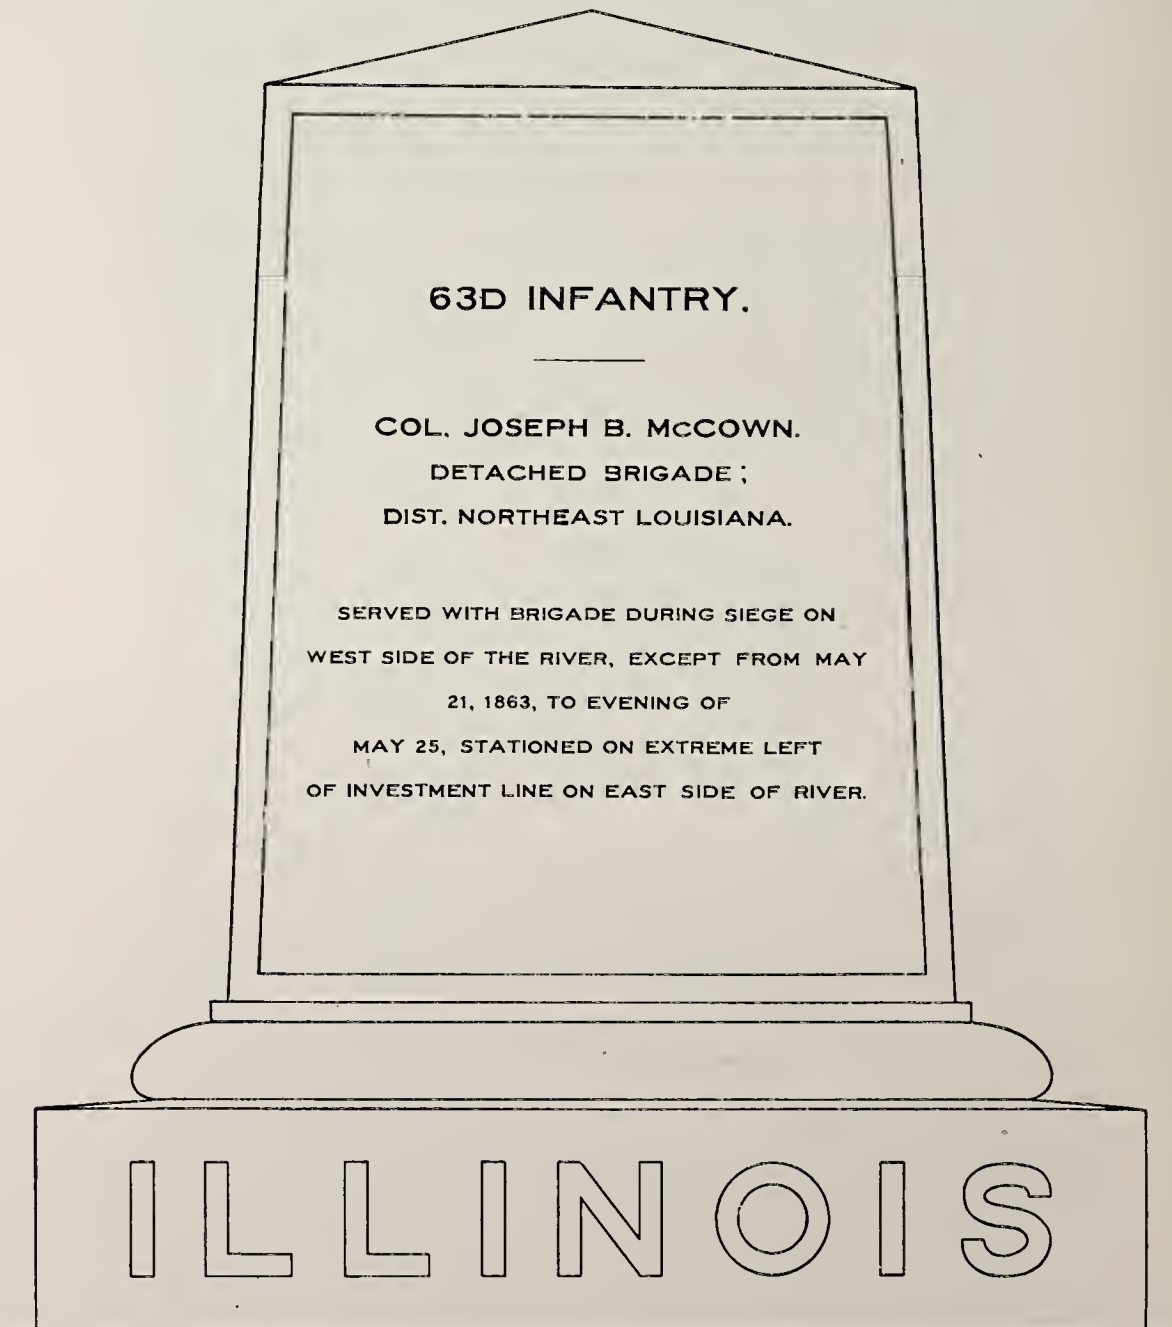

On September 12th it moved to Helena, Arkansas, on the 27th to Memphis and on October 6th it started on the march toward Chattanooga. It arrived at Bridgeport, Alabama, on November 16th and at Chattanooga on the 20th. It participated in the battle of Mission Ridge, November 23d and 24th, 1863. Was in pursuit of the retiring Confederate forces as far as Ringgold, Georgia, and then returned to Bridgeport on December 4th. It left Bridgeport for Huntsville on December 21st, where it arrived on the 26th.

On January 1, 1864, many of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans. On April 3d they proceeded to Illinois on their veteran furlough, disbanded at Centralia on the 10th of April and again concentrated there on May 13th and returned to Huntsville, Alabama, on the 22d. On the 22d of June it moved to Kingston, Georgia, and remained in the vicinity of this place guarding the railroad to November 12th, when the regiment proceeded to Atlanta. On November 15th it formed part of the army on the march to the sea; it arrived before the defenses of Savannah on December 10th and participated in the attack on the Ogeechee. It then took post near Miller's Station and on December 21st entered the City of Savannah.

On January 19, 1865, it began the campaign through the Carolinas by way of Beaufort, was at the destruction of Columbia, South Carolina, where it sustained quite a heavy loss by the explosion of the arsenal. It participated in the battle of Bentonville, North Carolina, and on March 24th went into Goldsboro. Here the non-veterans of the regiment were mustered out on April 9th and sent home. On the 10th the regiment moved to Raleigh, North Carolina, where it arrived on the 14th. From here it took up its march on April 29th by way of Richmond, which it reached on May 10th, to Alexandria, where it arrived on the 20th. It participated in the Grand Review at Washington, May 24th. On June 3d it proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, and on July 13th it was mustered out of the United States service, at this point, and then proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, where at Camp Butler, it was finally paid and discharged on July 21st, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 63D INFANTRY ON GRANT AVENUE.

72D INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Chicago under the auspices of the Board of Trade of that City and was also known as the first Board of Trade regiment of Chicago. It was mustered into the United States service on August 23, 1862. While the regiment was a Chicago regiment, quite a number of the men composing it came from Champaign, Aurora and nearby suburbs of Chicago.

The regiment left Chicago on the day of its muster for Cairo. On the 6th day of September it moved to Paducah, Kentucky, where it remained until the 17th and proceeded thence to Columbus, Kentucky, at which point it remained stationed until November 21st, participating during this period in expeditions to Clarkton and New Madrid, Missouri, and to Osceola, Arkansas. On the last-mentioned date it went by rail to Moscow, Tennessee, and there was embodied into General Grant's army of the Northern Mississippi campaign, moving as far south as the Yocona River. After the surrender at Holly Springs, which created a lack of supplies, the regiment was sent as part of the escort of the wagon train that moved to Memphis, Tennessee, to procure food and other supplies for the army. It then took station about eight miles east of the City on the line of the Memphis & Charleston Railroad and camped there until January 19, 1863, when it became provost guard of the City and quartered in the Navy Yard. While stationed here it formed part of an expedition to Horn Lake in pursuit of a noted guerrilla band commanded by Colonel Blythe.

On March 1st the regiment participated in the Yazoo Pass expedition. Returning from this it proceeded to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, where it arrived on April 23d. From there it moved to Richmond, Louisiana, and was stationed there as rear guard for the 17th army corps until relieved by other troops.

It then proceeded on its march through Louisiana, crossing the Mississippi River at Grand Gulf on May 10, 1863. From here it proceeded by way of Port Gibson to Raymond, Mississippi, arriving there on the evening of the 15th of May. About noon of the 16th it left Raymond for Champion's Hill, which it reached just as the final struggle was finished. It was ordered in pursuit of Pemberton's retreating army and halted late that night about two miles west of Edward's Station. On the morning of the 17th it reached the Big Black River just as the action at that point was over and was busily engaged all that day in the construction of a bridge across Big Black River. On the morning of the 18th it crossed the Big Black and in the late afternoon of that day reached the vicinity of the Shirley (White) House and placed a picket post in advance of this point that night, having the extreme right of McPherson's, 17th Corps. It was engaged in the assaults of the 19th and 22d of May and in the siege operations until July 4th. On this day it was one of the regiments that marched to the Court House to take possession of the City.

On July 12th it embarked for Natchez, Mississippi, and participated in the capture of a large amount of Confederate stores, including five thousand head of Texas cattle. Here the regiment remained until October 17th as provost guard. It also participated in expeditions to St. Catherine's Creek, Mississippi, and to Cross' Bayou, Louisiana, on September 23d. On October 18th it returned to Vicksburg, Mississippi, and became provost guard of that City, performing that duty until October 30, 1864. During this time it participated in an expedition to Benton, Mississippi, on May 7th and one to Grand Gulf on July 8th.

The regiment then moved to Nashville, Tennessee, where it arrived on November 13th, then it proceeded to Columbia, Tennessee, which was evacuated on November 29th. A severe action took place at Spring Hill, between Columbia and Franklin. The next day it arrived at Franklin, where the regiment was engaged and suffered severely in General Hood's attack. It reached Nashville on December 1st, entered the defensive line on the extreme right and on December 15th participated in the battle of Nashville. From that time until January 3, 1865, it took part in the pursuit of Hood's Army, going as far as Clifton. From here the regiment took steamer to Eastport down the Tennessee River, which it reached on January 13, 1865. It remained here until February 9th, participating in an expedition to Inka and Corinth, Mississippi, in the meantime.

The regiment then started for New Orleans, where it arrived on February 21st, went into camp below the City and on March 21st embarked and crossed the Gulf to Dauphin Island, Alabama, and thence proceeded to the western shore of Mobile Bay. On March 26th it moved to Spanish Fort and was engaged in the siege of this point until April 8th, when it participated in the assault and capture of the Fort. It then proceeded to Blakeley, and after the fall of Mobile, to Montgomery, Alabama. It remained in camp here until May 23d, when it proceeded to Union Springs, Alabama, and remained to July 19th, when it started for Vicksburg on its homeward journey.

It was mustered out at Vicksburg on August 6th and proceeded to Chicago, Illinois, for final payment and discharge. Going home by steamer after the war was actually over, the steamer was attacked by shots from Yerger's Landing, Mississippi, when two men of the regiment gave up their lives.

MONUMENT FOR 72D INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Five markers have been placed to designate positions occupied by this regiment during the investment; the first marks the position of this regiment on the evening of May 18th, where it was on outpost duty; the second marks its position during the assault of May 19th; the third the place occupied by it on May 22d; the fourth its sharpshooting line from May 23d to July 4th, and the fifth its sharpshooting line from June 18th to July 4th.

76TH INFANTRY.

This regiment was organized at Kankakee and mustered into service on August 22, 1862. The Companies came mostly from the vicinity of Middleport, Urbana, Morris, Kankakee, Concord, Aurora, Champaign, Momence, Rockville, Loda and Paxton. The regiment arrived at Columbus, Kentucky, on August 29th and remained here until October 4th, when it proceeded to Bolivar, Tennessee. It was stationed here until November 3d, then removed to LaGrange, Tennessee, where it was stationed until November 28th, at which date it became a part of General Grant's army of the Northern Mississippi campaign. It reached Holly Springs on the 29th and Waterford on the 30th of the month and proceeded as far south as Springdale, where, on the 22d of December, the news of General Van Dorn's capture of Holly Springs and the destruction of all the army's supplies was received.

On the 5th of January, 1863, the regiment again entered Holly Springs. It remained there until the 10th and arrived at Moscow on the 11th, remaining there until February 5th. From there it moved to Lafayette, Tennessee, and on the 10th of March it took up its route for Memphis. Here it remained until May 13th, when it embarked to join the Vicksburg army, landing at Young's Point on May 17th. It crossed the Peninsula on the 18th and embarked for Grand Gulf, but again returned to Young's Point and on the 19th was moved to Chickasaw Bayou, where it debarked and then marched in the rear of Grant's investing army to its place on the investment line, on the extreme left. On arrival of Herron's Division was moved to the right, finally taking position near the Hall's Ferry Road. It participated in all the siege operations from May 25th until the surrender on July 4th.

On the 5th of July the regiment became part of General Sherman's army in its movement against General Joseph E. Johnston and participated in the second battle, siege and capture of Jackson, Mississippi. It left this City on the 21st and arrived at Vicksburg on the 23d, where it remained until August 11th, when it proceeded by river to Natchez, remaining here until late in November; it again returned to Vicksburg and went into camp in this City.

On January 31, 1864, it changed station to Camp Hebron, near the Big Black, and on February 3d formed part of General Sherman's Meridian expedition, from which it returned on March 4th. It remained in this vicinity until April 27th, when it went into camp in Vicksburg. On May 4th it formed part of an expedition to Yazoo City and participated in the actions at Benton, Vaughn's Station and Desonville, returning to Vicksburg on May 21st. On July 1st it participated in an expedition to Jackson, and was engaged on its return on the 6th and 7th between Jackson and Clinton. It returned to Vicksburg on July 9th and on July 29th it proceeded to Morganza, Louisiana, thence to Port Hudson, thence to Clinton, Louisiana, and back to Morganza.

From there it proceeded on September 3d to the mouth of the White River and was stationed on the Arkansas shore until October 18th, when it proceeded to Memphis, but again returned October 28th. On November 7th it moved to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, and on the 28th again proceeded to Memphis, Tennessee. Here it remained until December 31, 1864, when it embarked for New Orleans, arriving there January 4, 1865. On February 12th it embarked for Mobile Point, the steamers carrying the regiment encountered a severe gale, which necessitated the throwing overboard of horses, mules and wagons. The boat being gotten back to the Mississippi River the regiment then returned to New Orleans, crossed over to Lake Pontchartrain and then embarked by way of the lakes to Fort Barrancas, near Pensacola, Florida, where it went into camp on February 18th and remained until March 11th, when it moved to Pensacola. From there it proceeded to Fort Blakeley, arriving there on April 1st. On April 9th, the regiment was in the assault and capture of Fort Blakeley, upon whose works its colors were first planted. It remained inside of the works until April 20th, when it proceeded to Mobile, and on the 22d of April it was part of an expedition that proceeded up the Alabama River to Selma, which it reached on the 28th. Here it served until May 11th and then returned to Mobile, where it remained until the latter part of June, when it moved to Galveston, Texas, where, on July 22d, it was mustered out of the United States service and ordered to Chicago for final payment and disbandment, which took place on August 4, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 76TH INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

This regiment has two markers to designate the positions occupied by it on the investment line during the siege; the first designates the position of its sharpshooters' line from June 25th until July 4th, and the second its camp ground from June 24th to the end of the siege.

77TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This command was organized and mustered into the United States service at Peoria on September 3, 1862. This regiment had been enlisted in and near Knoxville, Galesburg, Magnolia, Cazenovia, Lacon, Elmwood, Metamora, Peoria, Brimfield, Minonk and Rosefield. On October 4th it changed station to Covington, Kentucky, and from there moved on October 17th to Lexington, which it reached on the 29th and from there moved to Richmond on November 2d. From that point it marched on November 11th and arrived at Louisville on the 17th of that month. On November 20th it proceeded by steamer to Memphis, Tennessee, where it arrived a week later.

It proceeded with General Sherman's army to Vicksburg on December 20th, 1862, and participated in the attack from the Yazoo River on Chickasaw Bluffs on the 27th, serving on the extreme right of the army. The regiment then became part of the army that proceeded to Arkansas Post and participated in the assault and capture of that place on January 11, 1863. It then proceeded to Young's Point, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 22d of January and remained until the 9th of March, engaged mostly in the attempt to dig a canal across the Peninsula opposite Vicksburg. In March it changed station to Milliken's Bend and at the end of that month it moved with the 13th Corps through the lowlands of Louisiana to a point below Grand Gulf. Here it crossed the river on April 30th and was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson. It participated in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, being in the actions at Champion's Hill on May 16th and Big Black River Bridge on May 17th. In the assault of May 22d on the Railroad Redoubt, this regiment planted its colors upon the ramparts of this fort. It participated in all of the siege operations to July 4th.

The day after the surrender, July 5th, the regiment moved with Sherman to Jackson, Mississippi, to destroy General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army. It took part in the investment and capture of this place from July 9th to the 16th and then returned to Vicksburg, where it remained until August 25th.

From here it proceeded to New Orleans, where it was stationed until October 3d. On this date it left for western Louisiana. It marched to New Iberia, Louisiana, where it remained until December 6, 1863, then marched back to New Orleans. On December 17th it sailed for Port Cavallo, Texas, where it arrived on the 20th. From here it embarked to Berwick Bay, Louisiana, near the end of February and then joined General Bank's army in the Red River campaign, marching as far as Alexandria, Louisiana, thence to Sabine Cross Roads, where it was engaged in the action of April 8, 1864. The regiment also participated in the engagement of Pleasant Hill the next day and remained with General Banks' army until he again reached the Mississippi after his disastrous campaign. It then went into camp at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where it remained until the beginning of August.

From there it proceeded by boat to Dauphin Island, Alabama, assisted in the reduction of Fort Gaines and Morgan and then returned to Morganza Bend on the Mississippi River. Thence in October proceeded to New Orleans and acted as provost guard.

On January 14, 1865, this regiment and the 130th Illinois Infantry were consolidated at New Orleans, Louisiana, retaining the designation of the 77th Illinois Volunteers.

Early in March, 1865, it moved to Mobile Point and became part of the army under General Canby that captured Mobile. It participated in the siege and capture of Spanish Fort, Blakeley and Mobile. After the fall of this City it proceeded up the Tombigbee River, but before having proceeded very far was recalled to Mobile, as the Confederate armies had surrendered.

It remained in camp here until July 10, 1865, when it was mustered out of the United States service and ordered to Springfield, Illinois, where it was finally discharged and paid off on July 22, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 77TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Two markers have been erected to mark positions occupied by this command during the siege; one designates its position on the assault of May and the other its sharpshooters' line from June 15th to July 4th.

81ST INFANTRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 81st Infantry was recruited and mustered in at Anna on August 26, 1862. The companies came mostly from the vicinity of DuQuoin, Murphysboro, Pinckneyville, Jonesboro, Carbondale, Fredonia, Marion, Villa Ridge, Cobden and Tamaroa.

It moved to Cairo and on the 8th of October to the army in the field in Tennessee and on November 1st it went to Humboldt, Tennessee. From here it joined the Northern Mississippi campaign, proceeding as far south as Abbeville and after the fall of Holly Springs it marched to Memphis, where it arrived on January 19, 1863.

From here it proceeded to the army near Vicksburg and arrived at Lake Providence, Louisiana, on February 23d. Here it remained until April 17th, when it changed station to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana. When volunteers were called for to man the transports to run past the Vicksburg batteries, the men of this regiment responded promptly. Captain George W. Sisney commanded the transport Horizon and Privates George W. Winfield, Edward Hoxsey, Uriah Butler, William T. Green, Eli J. Lewis and Frank Mayo were of the crew that was accepted.

The regiment crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg, Mississippi, on May 1st and was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson. It also fought in the battle of Raymond on May 12th and participated in the capture of Jackson on May 14th and the battle of Champion's Hill on May 16th. On the 19th of May it reached the investing line against the defenses of Vicksburg and went into its position a short distance to the south and west of the Jackson Road, where it operated throughout the siege. It participated in the assault of the 22d of May, losing quite heavily on that day, its Colonel, J. J. Dollins, was killed in this assault. On July 4th it became one of the regiments that were ordered to the Court House to take possession of the City. On August 21st it took part in an expedition to the Ouachita River, Louisiana. On October 16th it was engaged at Brownsville, Mississippi and on January 10, 1864, in an expedition to Greenville, Mississippi.

On March 9, 1864, the regiment left Vicksburg to take part in the Red River campaign under General Banks. It was present at the capture of Fort De Russey and Alexandria on April 2d and joined the advance on Shreveport, Louisiana. This regiment, with others of the 17th corps, was detached from Banks' army at Grand Ecore and under General Thomas Kilby Smith took charge of the fleet of transports which proceeded under convoy of the gunboats up the river to Loggy Bayou where the fleet was overtaken by couriers with the news that General Banks had been defeated and ordered to return to Grand Ecore at once. At this point, the regiment rejoined the army and marched back with it to the confluence of the Red River with the Mississippi where it arrived on May 21st. On this march it participated on April 23d in the battle of Cloutersville and on the 24th in the action at Cane River, reaching Alexandria on the 26th of April. On May 21st, it embarked at the mouth of the Red River for Vicksburg which it reached on the 24th.

The regiment was next ordered to Memphis, Tennessee, and participated in the unfortunate battle of Gun Town, June 10, 1864. Here the regiment did splendid service but lost 126 men taken prisoners who were sent to Andersonville prison. On August 3, 1864, it moved to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, where it remained until September 17th, being engaged in various expeditions in the interim, and then moved in pursuit of General Price's invading force of Missouri, marching to Cape Girardeau, Missouri, thence by boat to St. Louis and Jefferson City and from there to Warrensburg, Missouri, which point it reached on October 25th. Here it remained until November 8th. General Price having retired into Arkansas, the regiment returned to St. Louis and thence proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee, in time to take part in the battle of December 15th and 16, 1864.

It next joined in the pursuit of Hood's army to Eastport, Tennessee, and to Corinth, Mississippi. The regiment then was ordered to Mobile, Alabama, and was engaged in the investment of Spanish Fort on March 27, 1865. It participated in the entire campaign and siege and, on the 8th of April, in the assault.

After the fall of Mobile it proceeded to Montgomery, Alabama, from which point it was ordered home via Meridian and Vicksburg, Mississippi, leaving Vicksburg on July 31, 1865. It received its final pay and discharge at Chicago on August 5, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 81ST INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

This regiment has three markers placed along the investing line; one to designate its position in the assault of May 22, 1863; another to mark the spot where its Colonel, James J. Dollins, was killed on that day and the third to designate its sharpshooting line from June 5th to July 4th, 1863.

87TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was recruited in Hamilton, Wayne, Edwards and White Counties and was organized and mustered into the service of the United States at Shawneetown on September 22, 1862. On January 31, 1863, it embarked for Memphis where it arrived on February 4th. From here it joined in an expedition to Hernando, Mississippi, in the attempt to stop Blythe's predatory incursions with his partisan rangers. On May 19, 1863, the regiment moved to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, as part of General Lauman's Division (4th) of 16th Corps, where it was engaged in road building and picket duty until the 21st instant, when it crossed the Mississippi River at Warrenton and was assigned to General McArthur's Division of 17th Corps, on the left of the investing line around Vicksburg. On the 23d five companies were ordered to report to General Logan and held in reserve and returned to their place in the investing line and doing garrison duty at Warrenton, the other five companies having been detained to garrison Warrenton. On June 3d, the entire regiment was at this point and was then ordered to form part of Colonel Slack's 2d Brigade of Hovey's Division of the 13th Corps, and June 23d took position in the investing line with the 13th Corps, to the right of General Lauman's 4th Division of 16th Corps. The regiment worked in the trenches and as sharpshooters, and performed night picket duty close to the Confederate line.

On the night of July 4th, it became part of General Sherman's army that went to destroy or disperse General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army and participated in the second capture of Jackson, Mississippi.

On July 20th, the regiment returned to Vicksburg and embarked for Natchez on the 25th. From here, it took part in an expedition to Kingston and on August 10th, it embarked for New Orleans joining the 19th Corps, Department of the Gulf, under command of Maj. Gen. N. P. Banks. On September 13th, it was at Brashear City, Louisiana.

During September and October, it was engaged in expeditions along the Atchafalaya and Teche Bayous and at Grand Coteau and Vermillionville, Louisiana. In November of this year, the regiment was mounted and spent most of its time in scouting around Franklin and New Iberia, Louisiana, returning to Franklin, the 1st of January, 1864, it spent most of the winter there doing scouting duty as part of the Cavalry Division, Department of the Gulf, with General Franklin in command of the forces in the field. On March 14, 1864, this regiment was in advance of the cavalry movement from Franklin, Louisiana, during the Red River campaign, and was constantly engaged with the advanced troops of General E. Kirby Smith, whose forces retreated until Wilson's Hill was reached, April 7th, when Companies D and F, having the extreme advance, suffered quite severely, as did the regiment, in the battle of Sabine Crossroads, April 8th, and at the action on the 9th at Pleasant Hill where General A. J. Smith with his division interposed and checked the defeated forces under Maj. Gen. Franklin. On the retreat from Sabine Crossroads to Alexandria, the regiment was almost continuously engaged.

From the 13th of May to the 15th in the movement from Alexandria to Simmesport, it was constantly harrassed and did good service in the action at Marksville.

On May 21st, it returned to Morganza Bend, Louisiana, and during part of the summer and fall, while stationed here, it manned the Steamer Baltic, being one of the Mississippi Marine Brigade boats, and was engaged in scouting and other minor war maneuvers. It also covered thoroughly the territory between the Mississippi River and the Atchafalaya and the Red River and the Bayou Plaquemine. On the 1st of August, 1864, Captain Thomas Sheridan and fifty men of the regiment were surrounded and captured near Williamsport, Louisiana.

On September 4, 1864, the regiment embarked for White River, Arkansas, and remained at the mouth of the river doing scouting duty through Arkansas and that portion of Mississippi lying directly across the Mississippi river, until January, 1865, part of the regiment being stationed at St Charles.

On January, 1865, the regiment moved to Helena, Arkansas, where it remained until mustered out on June 15, 1865. It was ordered to Springfield, Illinois, where it arrived on June 24th and finally disbanded on July 2, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 87TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

One marker has been erected on the investing line to mark the sharpshooters' position of this regiment from June 25th to July 4, 1863.

90TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 90th Infantry was recruited, organized and mustered in at Chicago during July, August and September, 1862, and mustered in on September 7th. The men came mostly from Rockford, Galva, Lockport, La Salle, Joliet, Chicago, Springfield, Belvidere and Ottawa.

The regiment remained at Camp Douglas, near Chicago until November 27th when it moved to Cairo, from thence to Columbus, Kentucky, and to LaGrange, Tennessee, where it went into camp on December 2d. On the 5th it took up its first march toward Holly Springs, Mississippi. It was then established as guard along the railroad at Coldwater. After General Van Dorn's successful raid on Holly Springs on December 20th he likewise attempted to capture this regiment and its position but was unsuccessful. The regiment then returned to LaGrange, Tennessee, and then proceeded to Lafayette where it remained until May 16, 1863, when it was ordered to proceed to Memphis and thence to Vicksburg. Here it landed early in June on the Yazoo River and became part of the army facing toward the east and General Joseph E. Johnston's gathering army, that threatened to raise the siege, and served throughout the siege operations along the exterior line.

After the fall of Vicksburg it went with General Sherman on his second campaign and capture of Jackson and in pursuit of Johnston's retreating army, crossing Pearl River on July 17, 1863. From here it returned to Big Black River where the regiment remained in camp until September 27th. It returned to Memphis and then took up the march from there to Chattanooga, Tennessee.

On the 24th of November it crossed the Tennessee River and participated in the battle of Mission Ridge on the 25th. Here it lost among other officers, Colonel O'Meara, and a number of men killed. It joined in the pursuit of Bragg's army as far as Graysville, Georgia, and from there joined the column sent to the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville, Tennessee, but on the 5th of December while at Morgantown it was learned that General Burnside was no longer menaced and the regiment then returned to Chattanooga.

At this time nearly every corps in the army had a distinctive badge which its men wore and by which they were recognized. While the 20th corps was passing the 15th corps to which the 90th regiment belonged, one of its stragglers asked of a member of the 90th regiment what corps he belonged to, his answer was the 15th. "What is your badge?" "Badge," said the man of the 90th and he touched his cartridge box with a rap of his hand and answered, "We have no badge but forty rounds." General Logan heard the story and the cartridge box, with a legend of forty rounds upon it, has ever since that day been the badge of the 15th corps.

From Chattanooga the regiment moved to Scottsboro, Alabama, and then to Fackler, a station on the railroad between Stevenson and Scotsboro, Alabama. Early in May, 1864, it entered the Atlanta campaign, marching by way of Ship's gap through Snake Creek Gap upon Resaca where it participated in the action of that name, thence it moved on Dallas and then to New Hope Church, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Marietta, Nickajack Creek, Rosswell and across the Chattahoochie River on July 9th. On the 22d of July it was engaged in the battle before Atlanta. On the 27th and 28th of July it was again engaged in a hard fought battle and on the 25th of August it reached Jonesboro where on the 30th it had an encounter just before the occupation of Atlanta. From here the regiment returned to East Point and when Hood threatened General Sherman's rear and line of communication to Chattanooga, the 90th moved with the force that was sent to oppose him and on the 16th of November, it returned and became part of the army that marched to the sea.

On the 13th of December the regiment was in the assault upon Fort McAllister and its colors first floated over this stronghold after the capture. On December 20th it entered Savannah and on January 15, 1865, it proceeded to Beaufort, South Carolina, and on the 24th to Pocotaligo.

On the 1st of February the Carolinas' campaign began with a march toward Columbia. On the 17th of February it reached Columbia and saw the destruction of that city. On the 20th it left Columbia and reached Bentonville, North Carolina on the 20th of March; at this point the last hostile shot upon this theater was fired. From there the regiment marched by way of Goldsboro and Raleigh, North Carolina, Petersburg and Richmond, Virginia, to Washington, where it participated in the Grand Review on May 24, 1865.

On June 7th it departed for Chicago, where it arrived at midnight of the 9th and was finally paid and discharged.

MONUMENT FOR 90TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

93D INFANTRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The members of this regiment, with few exceptions, enlisted between July 12th and August 21, 1862. The companies were organized within a period of nine days, as follows: "A" at Camden, August 14th; "B" at Dover, August 11th; "C" at Wyandot, August 15th; "D" at Freeport, August 12th; "E" at Tiskilwa, August 13th; "F" at Albany, August 9th; "G" at Cedarville, August 15th; "H" at Neponset, August 14th; "I" at Princeton, August 13th, and "K" at Princeton, August 19th, all in 1862. Company A was from Rock-Island County, D and G from Stephenson County, F from Whiteside County, and all the others from Bureau County. On September 2, 1862, all except Company A assembled at Princeton. The regiment was organized September 8th at Princeton, by the election of the field, staff and non-commissioned staff officers, by the officers of the several companies. On September 17th, these nine companies moved by rail to Chicago, and took quarters in Camp Douglas. Company A joined the other companies there. On October 13, 1862, the regiment was mustered into the service of the United States "for three years or during the war." From first to last there were 1,050 officers and men in the regiment.

On November 9th, the regiment left Chicago, and reached Memphis, Tennessee, on the 14th. Starting from Memphis, on November 26th, the regiment participated in the campaign in Northern Mississippi, marching by the way of Byhalia, Wyatt and Oxford, to Yocona Creek about six miles southeast of Oxford. December 21st, it "about faced," and marching by the way of Oxford, Abbeville, Lumpkins Mill and Byhalia, reached Memphis again on the 29th. December 31st, marched to Germantown, and January 1, 1863, to Lafayette, Tennessee, and January 2d, back to Germantown, and the next day to Brook's plantation, called Ridgeway. March 2d, moved down the Mississippi river to near Grand Lake, Arkansas*. March 7th, moved up the river again to a point five miles below Helena, Arkansas, opposite Yazoo Pass.

March 22d, started on the Yazoo Pass expedition, on the steamer "Jesse K. Bell." April 3d, reached a point near Greenwood, Mississippi. April 5th, started on return, and reached the point near Helena, Arkansas, on the 9th.

April 13, 1863, again moved down the Mississippi River, reaching Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, on the 15th. April 25th, entered on the Vicksburg campaign, marching by the way of Richmond, Smith's Plantation, Fisk's Plantation, Perkin's Landing and Hard Times Landing, all in Louisiana, to Bruinsburg, Mississippi, where, on May 1st, the Mississippi River was crossed, on the steam ram "La Fayette." From thence, marched by the way of Port Gibson, Rocky Springs, Raymond and Clinton to Jackson, Mississippi, where the regiment participated in the battle on May 14th. May 15, marched through Clinton on the way to Vicksburg. May 16, was engaged in the battle of Champion's Hill. Moved on toward Vicksburg the next day, and reached the lines in the rear of that place on the 19th. May 22d, participated in the assault there, and making a charge in the forenoon as a part of the left wing of General McPherson's 17th Corps, and making another charge about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, just north of the railroad leading into Vicksburg from Jackson, on the position of General McClernand's 13th Corps, having been sent down there, from the center, to the support of the 13th Corps. May 26th, the regiment took its position in the investment line of the 17th Corps, and served there until June 22d, when, with its brigade, it moved to a position near McCall's Plantation, in the line which was opposing General Joseph E. Johnston's Confederate army along the Big Black River, and remained there until Vicksburg was surrendered.

It then moved with General Sherman's army in its second attack on Jackson, Mississippi, by the way of Champion's Hill and Clinton, reaching the lines at Jackson on the 15th. The next day, started on return to Vicksburg, and marched by way of Clinton, Bolton, Champion's Hill and Edward's Station, reaching Vicksburg on the 25th, where the regiment encamped until September 12th. This regiment suffered a greater total loss during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg than any other regiment engaged therein. There were 44 killed, 44 mortally wounded, 4 missing who died or never were heard from, 127 wounded not mortally, and 8 missing who returned; total 227. During the campaign and siege this regiment formed a part of the 3d Brigade, 7th Division, 17th Army Corps. The division was first commanded by General M. M. Crocker, then by General Quimby, and later by General John E. Smith. The brigade was commanded by Colonel George B. Boomer, of the 26th Missouri, until he was killed in the afternoon charge of the brigade on May 22d, then by Colonel Holden Putnam of this regiment, and later by General Charles L. Matthies of Iowa.

September 12th, again moved up the Mississippi River, reaching Helena, Arkansas, on the 15th. September 30th, moved to Memphis, Tennessee. October 4th, moved by rail to Glendale, Mississippi. Marched thence by way of Burnsville and Iuka, Mississippi, and Bear Creek and Dixon's Station, Alabama, to Waterloo, Alabama, crossing the Tennessee River there on a gunboat on the 30th. November 1st, marched by the way of Florence, Alabama, and Gilbertsboro, Fayetteville and Winchester, Tennessee, to Bridgeport, Alabama, reaching there on the 15th, and from there by the way of Shellmound and near Lookout Mountain to a point on the north side of the Tennessee River northeast of Chattanooga, Tennessee, reaching there at 3 o'clock a. m. on the 20th. Crossed the Tennessee River in pontoon boats, landing on the south side just before daylight on the morning of the 24th, and moved to within about a half mile of Mission Ridge. November 25th, was engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge, near the northern extremity of the Ridge. The casualties were 20 killed, 8 mortally wounded, 19 missing and died or never heard from, 41 wounded not mortally, and 8 missing who returned; total 96. The division was known as the 3d division after October 24th.

February 23d, participated in the reconnaissance to Dalton, Georgia, returning to Chattanooga, Tennessee on March 2. Thereafter, marched to Huntsville, and from there to Decatur, and thence to Stevenson, all in Alabama. June 7th, moved by rail to Chattanooga, Tennessee, and on the next day to Kingston, Georgia. In a collision of trains, a mile north of Dalton, one officer and 30 men were injured, one fatally. July 2d to 12th, guarded Gillem's Bridge, Island Ford and Caldwell Ford on the Etowah River. Then moved back to Kingston. August 2d and 3d, marched to Allatoona, Georgia, where, on October 5, 1864, this regiment was a part of the force that so heroically defended that place, and "held the fort" against more than three times its number of the enemy. The casualties were 21 killed, 7 mortally wounded, 3 missing and died or never heard from, 51 wounded not mortally, and 7 missing who returned; total 89. November 12th, 13th and 14th, marched to Atlanta, Georgia.

November 15, 1864, moved with Sherman's army on the march to the sea, reaching the Confederate lines at Savannah, Georgia, on December 10th. Took part in the fighting around Savannah at various times, near the Ogeechee Canal, until the place was taken on the 21st. That day, marched to near the city, and January 3, 1865, into the city.

January 23, 1865, moved by ocean steamer, reaching Beaufort, South Carolina, on the 24th. January 29th, marched from there, on the campaign of the Carolinas, reaching Columbia, South Carolina, February 17th, and Goldsboro, North Carolina, March 24th.

April 10th to 14th, marched to Raleigh, North Carolina. April 26th, General Joseph E. Johnston's army was surrendered.

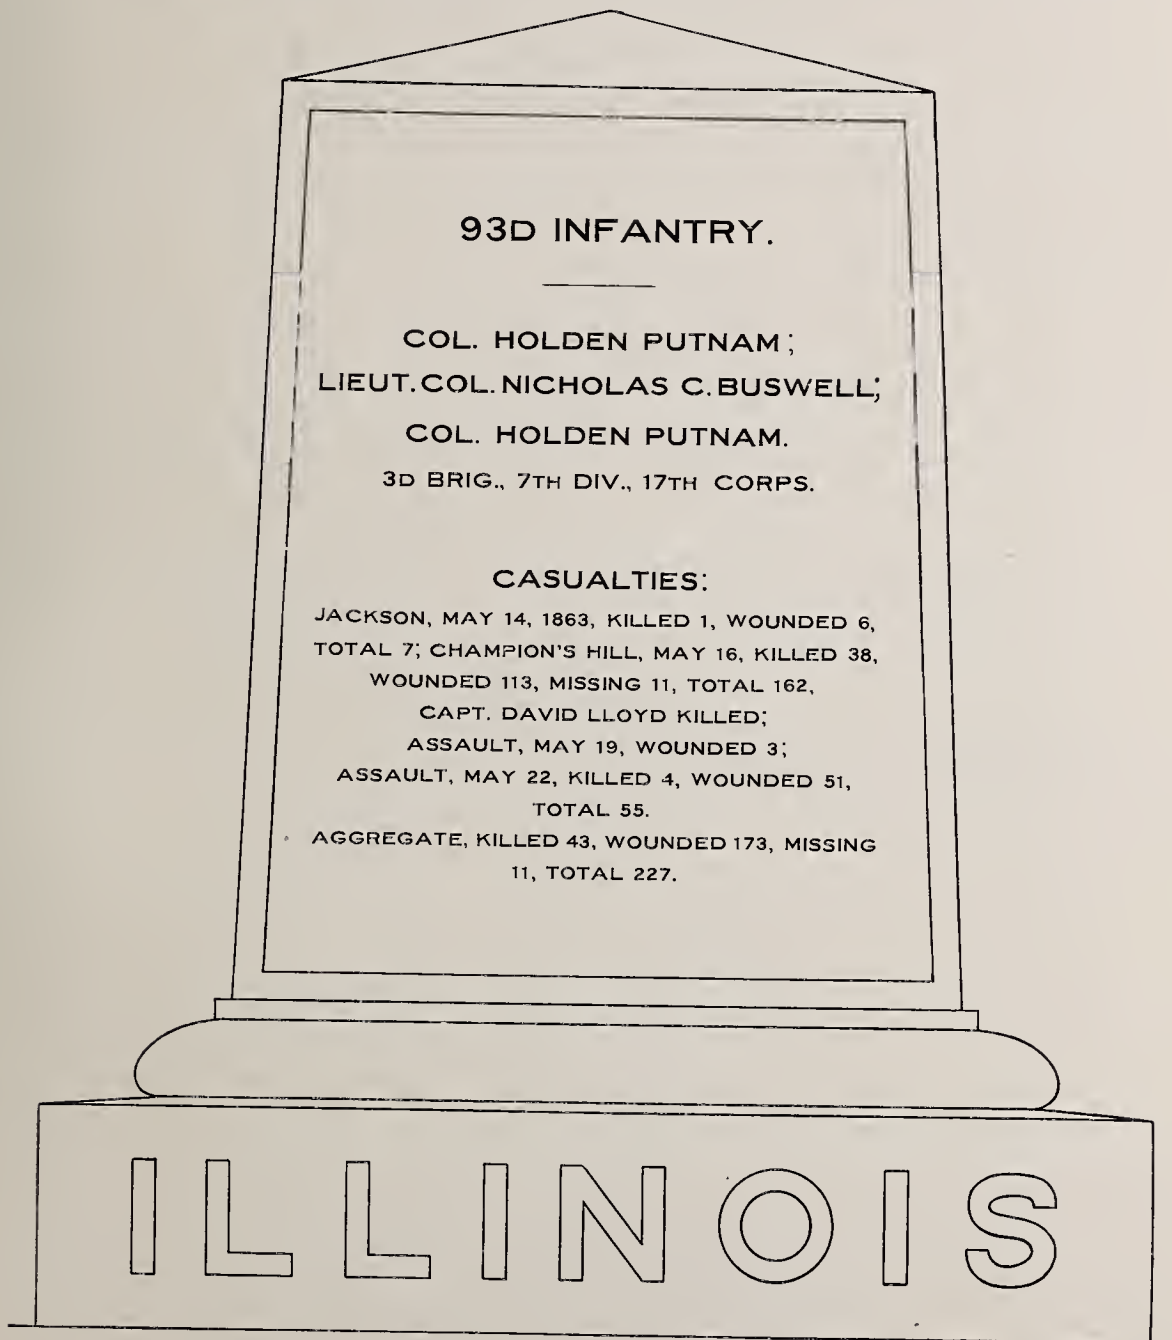

April 29th, this regiment started on its homeward march. It moved by the way of Warrenton, North Carolina, and White Plains, Petersburg, Richmond, Fredericksburg, Mount Vernon and Arlington Heights, Virginia, to Washington, the capital of the nation, reaching there on May 23d. Participated in the Grand Review there on May 24, 1865. May 31st, proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, where the regiment was mustered out of the service on June 23, 1865. Reached Chicago, Illinois, at 12:30 o'clock a. m. on June 25th. There the regiment was paid in full, and finally discharged July 6, 1865.

The casualties of the regiment in battle were 417. In addition thereto, 1 officer and 95 men died of disease, 1 man was drowned, 1 man was killed on a railroad while at home on furlough, 1 man was mortally injured by collision on railroad, 1 man mortally wounded by explosion of shells, 1 under Cook of A. D. killed by guerrillas, 1 officer and 29 men were injured in a railroad collision, and 21 men were captured, not in battle, who returned, making the total casualties, of all kinds, 569.

MONUMENT FOR 93D INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

This regiment has three markers in the Park along the investing line marking its positions; one designates the place where it assaulted on May 22, 1863, in the forenoon in its own division and brigade front; another designates the place where it assaulted in the afternoon of the same day in support of General Carr's Division of the 13th Corps and the third marks the position of its picket and sharpshooters' line from May 26th to June 22d, 1863.

94TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 94th Infantry was enlisted in August, 1862, its entire membership coming from McLean County. It was mustered into the United States service on August 20th and on the 26th it arrived at Benton Barracks near St. Louis, Missouri, where it remained until September 10th when it moved to Rolla, Missouri, and thence to Springfield as part of the army of the frontier. From there it moved to the relief of General Blunt in northwestern Arkansas, and on 7th of December it participated in the battle of Prairie Grove. It next participated in an expedition to Van Buren on the Arkansas River and then returned through Arkansas and Missouri to near Rolla where it remained until June, 1863.

It moved to Vicksburg, Mississippi, where it arrived about the 13th and took position on the left of the investment line on the 15th of June. Here it assisted in all the siege operations to the surrender of July 4th. On July 11th it participated in an expedition to Yazoo City and up the Yazoo River and to the Big Black River. On July 24th it moved by river to Port Hudson, Louisiana, and remained there until August 13th, then proceeded to New Orleans, going into camp at Carrollton. In September it participated in an expedition to Morganza and the Atchafalaya River and on October 25th it embarked for the Rio Grande where the regiment was stationed at Brownsville, Texas, for nearly nine months, being at one time called over to the Mexican side of the river, to Matamoras, to protect the American consul there.

In July, 1864, the regiment left Texas and proceeded to Fort Morgan, Alabama, where it took an active part in the siege until the 21st, when the fort surrendered. It remained in this vicinity, making occasional expeditions, until the 17th of March, 1865, when it moved up the east side of Mobile Bay and participated in the siege of Spanish Fort and the assault upon it on April 8th.

After the fall of Mobile it was sent to Ship Island in charge of prisoners. Returning to Spanish Fort April 17th, was ordered to dismantle the guns and clean up the forts, which duty it performed until May 7th and then returned to Mobile. Remained on the shell road below Mobile, until June 18th when it moved to Galveston, Texas. Here it did guard duty until the 17th of July when it was mustered out of the United States service. The regiment then returned to Camp Butler, near Springfield, for its final payment and discharge which occurred on the 9th of August, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 94TH INFANTRY ON ILLINOIS AVENUE.

One marker has been erected along Illinois avenue to commemorate the sharpshooters line of this regiment from June 24th to July 4, 1863.

95TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized near Rockford and was mustered into the United States service September 4, 1862. Three companies of the regiment came from Boone and the other seven from McHenry County. Most of the men came from the vicinity of the towns of Marengo, Belvidere, Chemung, Richmond, Nunda, Coral, McHenry, Hebron, Algonquin, Boone and Leroy.

The regiment on November 4th moved via Chicago, Cairo, Columbus, Kentucky, to Jackson, Tennessee, and then to Grand Junction. Here it became part of General Grant's army of the Northern Mississippi campaign and proceeded with it to the vicinity of Oxford, Mississippi. After the Holly Springs disaster, the 95th returned to Moscow where it arrived on December 30th. From thence it moved on January 1st and 2d to Colliersville on its way to Memphis and on the 13th of January it arrived in the suburbs of Memphis. On the 19th of January it embarked for down the river and arrived at Millikens Bend, Louisiana, on the 26th of January. Early in February it was sent to Lake Providence. Here it remained until the movement of the 17th corps, to which it was attached, on its march south on the Louisiana side of the river to a point opposite Grand Gulf, Mississippi. It reached Raymond on the evening of the 15th of May and the battle-field of Champion's Hill at the time when Pemberton's retreat for Vicksburg began. It was ordered to move in pursuit and on the night of the 16th of May it slept on its arms, about two miles west of Edwards' Station; on the 17th it assisted in building a bridge across the Big Black River which it crossed early on the morning of the 18th with Ransom's Brigade and reached the vicinity of the Shirley or "White" House toward dusk on the 18th of May. It participated in the assaults of the 19th and of the 22d of May and in all of the siege operations and on the 4th day of July it was one of the regiments sent to the court house to take possession of the captured city.

On July 12th it proceeded to Natchez and shared in the capture of that post, including five thousand head of Texas cattle belonging to the commissary department of the Confederate army. During the middle of October it returned to Vicksburg where it remained for a long time engaged in the construction of a new line of fortifications, the performance of garrison duty and participating in several expeditions including the one to Meridian, Mississippi.

On the 9th day of March, 1864, it left Vicksburg, to become part of General Banks' Red River campaign. It was engaged at the capture of Fort De Russey and in the affairs at Old River, Yellow Bayou and others, in both the movement of advance and retreat. Having returned to the mouth of the Red River, the regiment re-embarked for Vicksburg, where it arrived on April 23d.

It was then sent to Memphis. Here it formed part of the disastrous expedition under General Sturgis and participated in the fateful battle of Guntown, or Brices Cross Road. In this action it lost its colonel and three captains who successively commanded it, returning to Memphis greatly depleted and demoralized under the command of a captain, its fifth commanding officer during this brief expedition.

It moved next up White River to Brownsville, Arkansas, and thence marched in pursuit of General Price into Missouri, arriving at Cape Girardeau. There it was put on boat for St. Louis, then to Jefferson City and Sedalia, Missouri. On its return it arrived at Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, November 1, 1864..

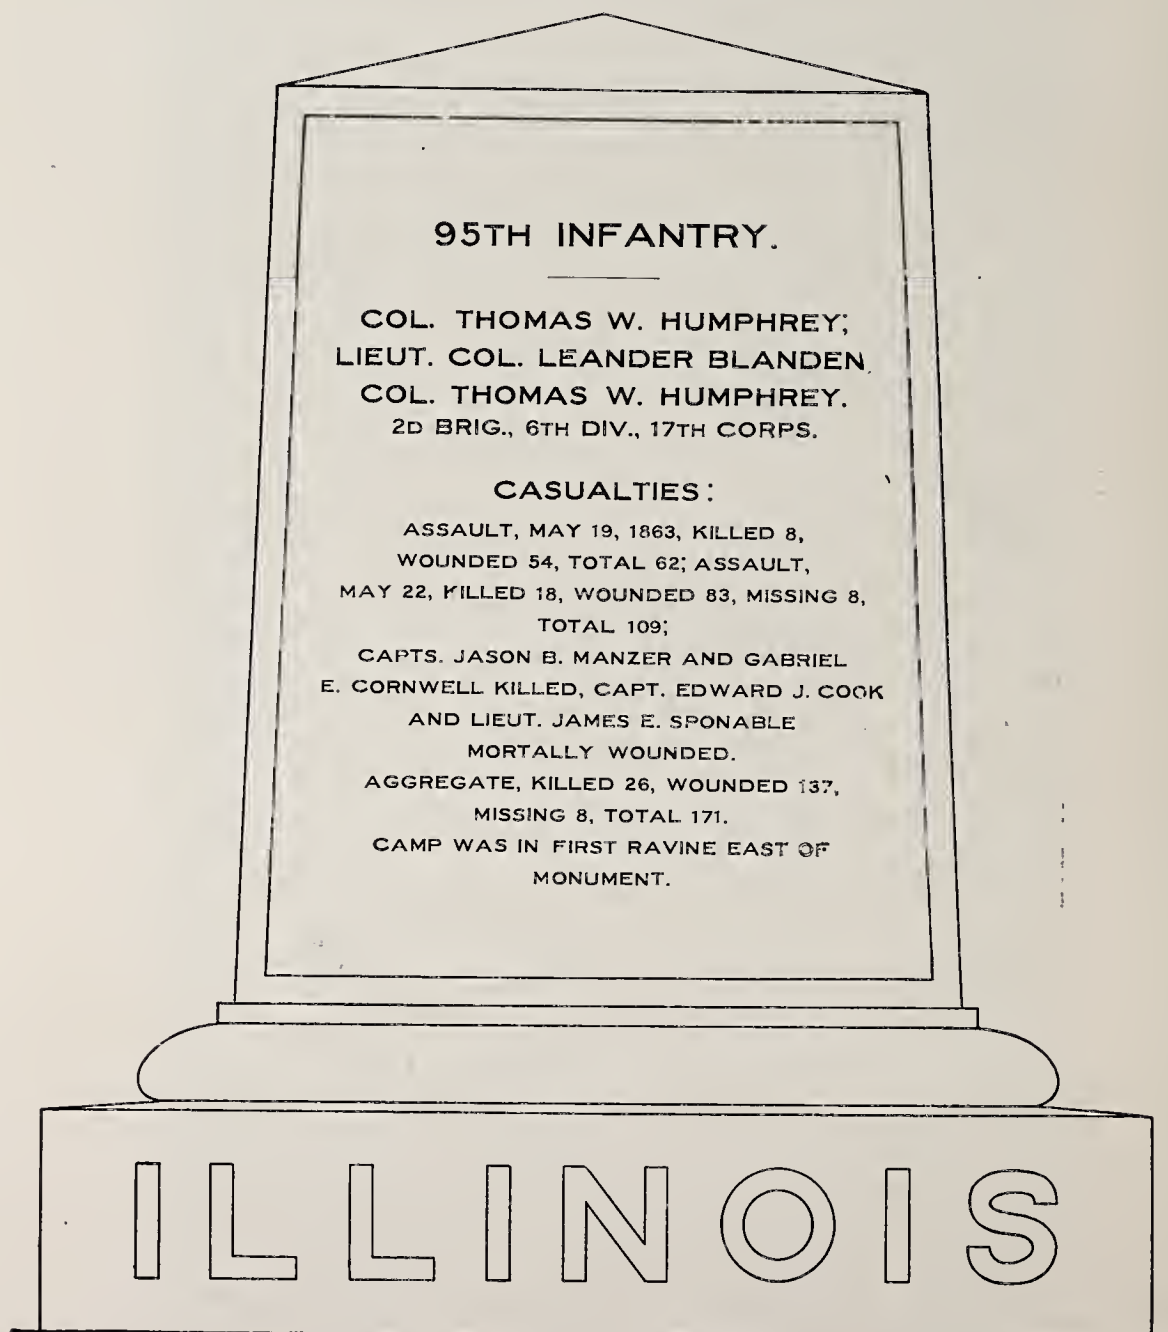

On November 30th it moved to Nashville, Tennessee, participated here in the battle on December 15th and 16th, then moved in pursuit of Hood's defeated army as far as Pulaski, Tennessee. On December 18th it rested on the battle-ground of Franklin and moved thence to Columbia, Pulaski and Lawrenceburg and from there on January 2, 1864, to Eastport, Mississippi.

On the 6th of February it embarked for New Orleans, proceeding down the Tennessee, Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Next it moved to Dauphin Island by way of Lake Pontchartrain on March 11th. On the 18th it moved to Cedar Point in the campaign on Mobile. From here it moved into the investing line and participated in the siege of Fort Blakeley and Spanish Fort and in the capture of Mobile on April 8th. The regiment then moved to Montgomery and then Opelika, Alabama, whence it prepared for muster out, moving to Vicksburg by way of Selma, Alabama, and Meridian and Jackson, Mississippi, on the 28th day of July, 1865. It reached Vicksburg on the 3d of August and was then ordered to proceed to St. Louis, Missouri, for muster out, which place it reached on the 10th of August, and was then ordered to Springfield, Illinois, which it reached on August 11th and on the 21st the men received their final pay and discharge papers..

MONUMENT FOR 95TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

To mark specific positions of this regiment within the line of investment four markers have been erected; the first upon the site occupied by it in its assault on May 19th; the second the place where it assaulted on May 22d; the third to designate its sharpshooters line from June 18th to July 4, 1863 and the fourth the position the sharpshooters occupied from May 23d to July 4, 1863.

97TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized near Springfield and mustered into the United States service on September 16, 1862, the companies coming mostly from the vicinity of Gillespie, Hidalgo, Vandalia, Alton, Jerseyville, Grafton and Bowling Green and from Cumberland and Jasper Counties.

About October 1st it moved to Covington, Kentucky and toward Cumberland Gap, but was recalled after reaching Nicholasville, whence it proceeded to Louisville and there embarked for Memphis. On the 20th of December it embarked here for the expedition under General Sherman that resulted in the attack on Vicksburg from Chickasaw Bayou. On January 1, 1863, it landed at Young's Point and then moved to Milliken's Bend. It next proceeded to Arkansas Post on the Arkansas River where it arrived on January 10, 1863, and on the 11th participated in the capture of this stronghold.

It then proceeded to Young's Point, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 22d. Here it was engaged in digging the canal on the peninsula opposite Vicksburg. The condition of health being almost unendurable, on account of the inundated condition of the land there, the regiment was, on March 6th, moved to Milliken's Bend. On April 15th it left the Bend in the advance of Grant's army for Hard Times Landing nearly opposite Grand Gulf, Mississippi. On April 30th the regiment crossed the river at Bruinsburg and was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson on May 1st. On the 8th of May it was sent forward to Baldwin's Ferry, on the Big Black River, to hold the ford there, from which duty it was relieved on the 10th and then joined the onward move of the 13th corps. It next participated in the battle of Champion's Hill on May 16th and of Big Black River Bridge on the 17th, and reached the investment line of Vicksburg on the 19th of May. On the 22d of May it was in the assault on the Railroad redoubt and from that time until the surrender on July 4th it performed its full share in the operations of the investing army.

On the 5th of July it formed part of General Sherman's army that moved to Jackson, Mississippi, to destroy or disperse General Johnston's army that had gathered to raise the siege. From this expedition it returned to Vicksburg and on August 25th moved to New Orleans, Louisiana. On the 3d of October it moved to Algiers and thence to Berwick City, and thence it took its march to the Valley of the Teche in the Western Louisiana campaign, as far as New Iberia. On November 1st it was ordered back to New Orleans as Provost Guard. On November 3d during this journey, the regiment sustained a severe loss in a railroad accident about forty miles west of Algiers. On March 4, 1864, Governor Michael Hahn of Louisiana was inaugurated as the first governor of that State, after the war, and the regiment took part in the inauguration ceremonies. On the 23d of the month it was reviewed by Governor Richard Yates, who was then visiting the Illinois soldiers in the Division of the Gulf.

In May, 1864, it participated in an expedition to Morganza Bend and marched to the Atchafalaya River. In September it proceeded by boats to Dauphin Island, Alabama, and then entered the Mobile campaign, remaining at Pascagoula until February 1, 1865, from whence it removed to Barrancas. Here it remained until March 20th and was engaged at Escambia on the 25th and on April 2d reached Blakeley. It took part in the siege and capture of this fort and entered Mobile on the 15th. It then moved to Selma, Alabama, and then to Cahawba, from there it made a surprise expedition to Marion where it had hoped to capture Jefferson Davis. After a lively skirmish there it burned the Junction depot and returned to Cahawba, then to Selma.

On the 12th of May the regiment was sent to Mobile and from there to Galveston, Texas, where it was mustered out of the service on July 29, 1865. It proceeded homeward via New Orleans and the Mississippi River to East St. Louis where it landed on the 19th of August. It moved to Springfield and was there finally discharged and disbanded a few days later.

MONUMENT FOR 97TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

This regiment has two markers placed to designate its positions during the siege; the first indicates the location of its assault on May 22d and the second designates its sharpshooters line from June 15th to July 4, 1863.

99TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Was organized and mustered in at Florence, Pike County, Illinois, August 23, 1862, with companies from Pittsfield, Perry, Pleasant Hill, Barry, Time, Chambersburg, Kinderhook, New Canton, Milton and New Salem. It left its organization rendezvous on the same day and went by river steamer to Benton Barracks, St. Louis, the next day, to receive its equipments. From thence it was sent on September 8th to Rolla, Missouri; September 17th to Salem, and on November 20th to Houston, Texas County, Missouri; had its first skirmish and loss at Bear Creek. At Hartsville, January 11, 1863, it was in a general engagement, with other Union forces, and fought the Confederate forces, under command of Marmaduke, which were falling back from Springfield, where they had been besieging that city for some days. The loss in the Hartsville fight was one officer killed and one wounded, and thirty-one enlisted men wounded and two missing.

On January 27, 1863, the regiment moved to West Plains; on March 3d. to Pilot Knob, thence to St. Genevieve, where it embarked for Millikens Bend; reached that point March 15th, soon becoming a part of Gen. Benton's Brigade of Gen. Carr's Division of Gen. McClelland's 13th Army Corps, with which it served through the Vicksburg campaign. It left Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, on April 11th; reached New Carthage, where it remained several days, and crossed the river on April 30th, being the second regiment of Grant's army to land upon Mississippi soil. It was engaged at Magnolia Hills, near Port Gibson, on May 1st. In this engagement Gen. Carr said in his report:

"The 99th Illinois was in the charge that routed the enemy, capturing two 12-pound Howitzers, and the battle flag."

It was present with Carr's division held in reserve, at the battle of Champion's Hill from early in the morning of May 16, when the battle commenced, until four o'clock in the evening, when the Confederates retreated. It participated in the battle of Black River Bridge on May 17th, and reached the defenses at Vicksburg on May 19th. On the 22d it assaulted the Confederate Lunette in the Baldwin's Ferry Road, to the right of the Jackson railroad, and held the position against the same until four or five o'clock in the afternoon. The regimental and state colors were both placed upon the Confederate works; Sergeant Thomas J. Higgins was captured with the national flag by the 2d Texas Infantry, a little after ten o'clock in the morning, and was taken to the court house in the city of Vicksburg, paroled and returned to the command, the next day; Sergeant William B. Sitton, while carrying the regimental colors was shot through the side, and not realizing how badly he was injured insisted upon carrying the colors forward. He gave the colors to the major of the regiment, who was also wounded; both were carried from the field and the colors were left. The regiment, after the 22d of May, participated in the siege operations until the surrender.

It was ordered to form part of the column under Gen. Sherman, to disperse or destroy Gen. Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army, and marched to Jackson, Mississippi. It returned to Vicksburg in the latter part of July, thence moved by river on August 17th, to New Orleans, where it remained near Carrollton for some two weeks, when it was sent to Brashear City, Louisiana. From October to November the regiment was engaged in the Bayou Teche campaign, and was engaged in the battle of Grand Coteau.

On November 16th it embarked for Texas, landing at Mustang Island on the 25th; marched up St. Joseph Island, across Cedar Bayou to Matagorda Island, where it was engaged in the attack on Fort Esperanza. It remained at Decro's Point, Indianola, and Fort Esperanza, until the 17th of June, 1864, when it blew up the fort, evacuated Matagorda Island, and proceeded to Algiers, Louisiana. The intention was to join the Army of the Potomac in the Shenandoah Valley. The news, however, of the advance of a heavy force on the mouth of Red River caused a part of the troops, and with them the 99th regiment, to embark for that point; it remained at the mouth of Red River until sometime in July, when it was sent up the White River as far as Duvall's Bluff, where it remained until November; part of the time at St. Charles, and quite a while at the mouth of the river. It embarked for Memphis, which point it reached in the latter part of December. Here the regiment was consolidated into a battalion of five companies, and placed under command of Lieut. Colonel A. C. Matthews. It supported Grierson's second raid out as far as Germantown, and after that it embarked for New Orleans, which place it reached in the early part of January, where it remained until the 1st of February, 1865, then embarking for Dauphin Island by gulf steamer, where it remained until the commencement of the campaign against Mobile.

On March 17th, it proceeded to Fort Morgan, took part in the siege of Spanish Fort until the 30th, and went into position on April 1st, at Fort Blakeley, Alabama, in the investment and capture of which it participated, and on the 12th of April it entered Mobile. In June, 1865, it proceeded with its division up the Red River, to receive the surrender of the Trans-Mississippi Confederate Armies, under Gen. E. Kirby Smith at Shreveport, Louisiana.

Shortly after arriving at Shreveport, Col. Matthews was detailed as a commissioner by Major General Francis Herron, acting for the United States, and Lieut. General B. S. Buckner, acting for the Confederate Army, and sent to the Indian Territory to form a treaty with the civilized Indians. He was accompanied by an escort of the Sixth Missouri Cavalry; had a conference with the Indian tribes controlling the movements of the Confederate troops in the Indian Territory, arranged a temporary treaty for a meeting in September, which was afterwards held, and returned to his command about the 10th of July.

On the 19th the regiment proceeded to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where, on the 31st of July, it was mustered out of the service. It proceeded to Springfield, Illinois, where it arrived August 6, 1865, and received its final payment, and discharge. The men reached Pike County, where the entire regiment had been raised, on the 17th day of August, 1865.

As a little scrap of history, showing conditions in the West, about the time the war closed, the following document is reprinted:

Jones Plantation, C. N., June 23, 1865.

Hon. Winchester Colbert,*

General and Principal Chief, Chickasaw Nation.

Sir: I have the honor to state to you that the war between the United States and the Confederate States is at an end; that the armies of the Confederacy have all been captured or surrendered to the United States authorities, and have turned over their arms and public property to the United States Government. It was my intention to have attended, and, if possible, taken a part in the deliberations of the grand council at Armstrong Academy, but the insufficient notice we had rendered this impossible. If I could have reached there I do not hesitate to say that I would have been able to have submitted to that honorable body propositions looking to a cessation of hostilities that would have been perfectly satisfactory to the delegates of all the tribes represented. When this was found impossible, I deemed it prudent to hold a conference with the principal chiefs and men, as my limited time and circumstances would allow. I have met governor and principal chief of the Choctaw Nation, Colonel Pitchlynn, and Brig. General Stand Watie of the Cherokee Nation, and with them have agreed upon a cessation of hostilities, and also for a meeting of the grand council at Armstrong Academy on the 1st day of September, 1865; and further, that they will use their influence with the tribes of the plains to cultivate friendly feelings with the Government of the United States and their people, and that we will protect the Indians of all tribes against insurrection and foreign invasion, as stipulated in former treaties. I have the honor also to state and respectfully request that you will represent to your people that the Government of the United States wish to cultivate friendly relations toward the Indians of all tribes, and have no desire to oppress or humiliate in any way any of their people, but to make at the earliest possible date an honorable and lasting treaty of peace with all of them. We desire to meet all of them at the grand council on the 1st day of September, where we can have a full and cordial interchange of opinion, and when all questions can be discussed and disposed of. In the meantime we want peace, with all its blessings, to be and remain throughout the length and breadth of your beautiful territory. Through you I wish to convey to your people the assurance of the high regard entertained by our Government for them, and their prosperity and happiness.

Hoping that peace may soon be the blessing of all, and that our difficulties may soon be amicably settled, I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. C. MATTHEWS,

Lieutenant-Colonel, U. S. Volunteers, Commissioner.

MONUMENT FOR 99TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

Five markers have been erected to mark specific places occupied by this regiment during the siege; the first designates its position on May 22d during the assault; the second its position on the evening of the same day; the third marks the place where Sergeant Thomas J. Higgins carried the national colors of the regiment over the Confederate parapet; the fourth marks the ground it occupied during the siege for its camp and the fifth designates its sharpshooters line from June 18th to July 4, 1863.

101ST INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment assembled and was organized and mustered into the United States service near Jacksonville, Illinois, on September 2, 1862, and on the 6th of October was moved to Cairo. Its companies were recruited in Meredosia, Concord, Jacksonville, Bethel, Murraysville, Waverly, and in Franklin and Morgan Counties generally.

On November 26th it moved to Columbus, Kentucky and thence to Davis' Mills, Mississippi, becoming part of the army that had already begun the Northern Mississippi campaign. On the 30th it reached Lumpkin's Mill from whence it was ordered to return six miles northward and proceed to Holly Springs, Mississippi, for garrison and provost guard duty. On December 13th company A was sent north with prisoners. On December 20th during the attack of General Van Dorn and capture of Holly Springs, Companies B, C, F and I and the sick of Company A who had been left behind were taken prisoners and paroled. These were sent to Memphis and thence to Benton Barracks. Companies D, G, H and K which were not of the garrison but were doing guard duty along the railroad fell back upon Coldwater where they joined the 90th Illinois and assisted in repelling Van Dorn's attack there.

The five companies not captured at Holly Springs were the only representatives of this regiment in the Vicksburg campaign. They were first organized into a battalion and temporarily attached to the 14th Illinois in February, 1863. Early in March, Company K was assigned to General Grant's headquarters as provost guard and the other four companies were assigned to gun-boats and rams for duty upon them. Company G, on the ram Switzerland and Company H, on the gun-boat Lafayette, ran the blockade at Vicksburg.

On the 7th of June the other five companies were exchanged and proceeded to New Madrid, Missouri, and on June 11th they were sent to Columbus, Kentucky. From this point they operated on various expeditions and scouts, which landed them finally about the 25th of August at Union City, Tennessee. While stationed here the other five companies joined them and from this time on all its companies have the same history.

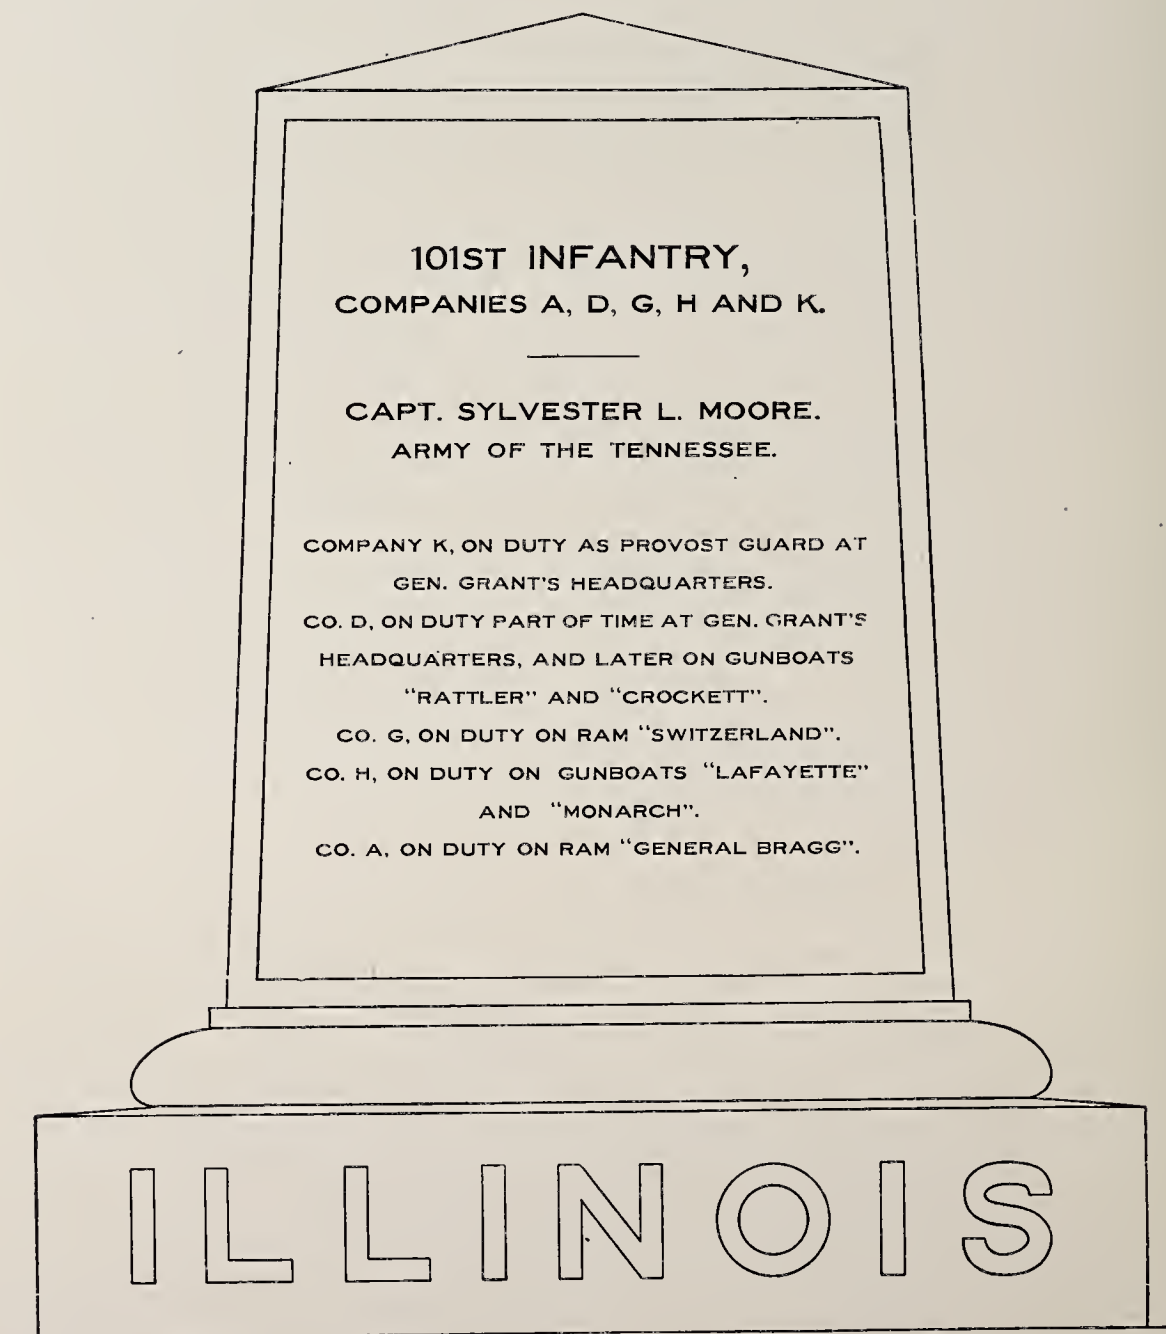

On September 24, 1863, the regiment moved to Louisville, Kentucky, via Cairo and Sandoval, Illinois, and New Albany, Indiana, arriving in Louisville September 27th, and from there it proceeded to Bridgeport, Alabama, where it arrived on October 2d. On the 27th of this month it started for Lookout Valley where it arrived in time to participate in the battle of the Wauhatchie. It remained encamped in Lookout Valley for nearly a month and on November 22d it marched to Chattanooga where it participated in the battle of Mission Ridge and immediately marched in the relieving column toward Knoxville, but returned to Lookout Valley December 17th. From there, on January 1st, it moved to Kelley's Ferry and then on the last of January, it moved to Bridgeport, Alabama, where it remained until the 2d of May. On the 6th it reached Taylor's Ridge and on May 10th marched to Snake Creek Gap, being ready for action at Resaca where it was engaged on the 14th. It was also engaged at Cassville, Georgia, on the 19th and on the 25th, at New Hope Church.

It then proceeded to Kenesaw Mountain and the battle of Culp's Farm on June 22d. On June 27th it had a skirmish and after the evacuation of Kenesaw, went in pursuit of the Confederate forces and on the 6th of July took post on Chattahoochie Heights. On July 17th it crossed the river and on the 20th was engaged at Peach Tree Creek. On the 22d was engaged in front of Atlanta supporting Battery I of New York. It remained here until the 25th of August when it returned to Chattahoochie Bridge and on September 2d it claims the honor of first having entered Atlanta, Georgia. On November 15th it began the march to the sea and reached Savannah on December 22, 1864.

On January 17th it became part of the campaign of the Carolinas and took part in the battles of Averysboro and Bentonville. On March 24th it entered Goldsboro and on April 13th Raleigh. Here the regiment remained until the surrender of Johnston's army and then it marched, by way of Richmond, to Alexandria, Virginia, on April 30, which it reached on the 19th of May. On the 24th it participated in the grand review at Washington and went into camp at Bladensburg where it was mustered out of the United States service on June 7th. It reached Springfield, Illinois, on the 21st of June, 1865, where it was paid off and finally disbanded.

103D INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was recruited almost entirely from Fulton County, in August, 1862, under President Lincoln's call for 300,000 men.

Nine companies were organized in different parts of the county, elected their officers, took the oath to enter the United States service and began to drill at their respective places of rendezvous, until early in September, when they were ordered to Peoria to a camp of instruction, arriving there on the 6th of September, 884 enlisted men and officers.

On October 2d the tenth company was organized and the regiment was mustered into the United States service and left Peoria, October 30th, arriving at Cairo the 31st. Arrived at Columbus, Kentucky, November 1st and Bolivar, Tennessee, November 3d. Marched to LaGrange, Tennessee. On November 6th went on scout and heard the first hostile shot. On the 28th moved southward in the Northern Mississippi campaign. The regiment went into camp at Waterford, Mississippi. Companies B, H, I, G, E and K were placed on duty guarding the railroad in this vicinity where they remained until December 31st, when the regiment proceeded to Jackson, Tennessee, and on the 11th of March it returned to LaGrange. On the 17th of April it escorted the Grierson Raid column as far as Holly Springs and Waterford, returning thence by Collierville, to LaGrange, having been absent nine days.

On the 5th of June it proceeded to Memphis and on the 8th started down the river to Vicksburg and arrived at Snyder's Bluff on the 11th. On the 21st of June it was assigned to the 15th Army Corps. Throughout the siege of Vicksburg it served on the line along the Yazoo and Big Black Rivers, moving on the 22d to Oak Ridge. After the surrender on July 4th the regiment proceeded to Big Black River and on the 11th arrived in front of Jackson. It participated in the second campaign and capture of Jackson and then returned to Big Black River, crossing the same and establishing what was known as Camp Sherman.

On September 28th the regiment moved to Memphis. October 20th arrived at Iuka, Mississippi. On the 27th crossed the Tennessee River at Eastport. Was at Florence, Alabama, on the 29th. On the 12th of November it arrived at Cowan. On the 18th at Bridgeport, Alabama. On the 19th marched up Lookout Valley to McNare's Cove and returned, arriving at Wauhatchie on the 22d. On the 24th crossed the river and joined the attack on Mission Ridge where it lost heavily.

It then followed Bragg's retreat and then formed part of the column of relief for Knoxville and returned from this to Chattanooga, on the 16th and Bridgeport, on the 19th of December. On the 24th marched to Stevenson, Alabama, and thence to Scottsboro which it reached on the 28th.

On the 8th of February, 1864, moved to Cleveland, Tennessee, which it left on the 23d for Catoosa Springs. On the 24th it was in the valley west of Tunnel Hill, then moved to Cleveland and back to Scottsboro, reaching there on March 10th.

It proceeded on May 1st to Chattanooga, joining the Army of the Tennessee in the Atlanta campaign. On the 14th was engaged at Resaca, reaching Kingston on the 20th and Dallas on the 26th of May. Was engaged on the 27th and 28th, sustaining a heavy loss. On June 1st occupied Allatoona Pass and on the 7th of June advanced with the army to Big Shanty. On June 27th it made an assault on Little Kenesaw Mountain, in which it was repulsed with extensive loss.

July 4th it occupied Marietta, then moved to Nickajack Creek, thence moved south to Decatur, Georgia, and to Atlanta. Was within one mile of Atlanta on the 22d of July. In this engagement the regiment changed front seven times, resisting as many assaults of the enemy who had gotten in its rear. It engaged, on the 28th on the right of Atlanta, and held its lines against repeated assaults.. Remained here until the 25th of August when it passed the Confederate left and encountered the enemy September 1st at Jonesboro. On September 5th it went into camp at East Point near Atlanta, after the fall.

On September 27th the regiment went in pursuit of Hood, following him as far as Galesville, Alabama. Later returned to Atlanta, and on the 16th of November joined in the "march to the sea." The brigade to which it was attached was engaged near Griswoldville, on November 22d and successfully encountered a superior force. On December 9th it crossed the Ogeechee River, and entered Savannah on the 23d.

About the middle of January, 1865, the regiment joined the campaign of the Carolinas, arriving at Goldsboro, North Carolina, on the 22d of March and at Raleigh on April 14th. Took up the march here on April 30th for Washington via Richmond and Alexandria, Virginia, which latter point was reached on the 20th of May. It participated in the Grand Review at Washington on the 24th. From there it proceeded, on the 31st, to Louisville, Kentucky, where it arrived on the 4th of June.

On the 21st the regiment was mustered out of the United States service and proceeded to Chicago where it arrived on the 24th of June and received its final payment. It disbanded on the 9th day of July, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 103D INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

106TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This organization was recruited almost entirely in Logan County with one company from Sangamon and one from Menard. The vicinity of the towns of Berlin, Mt. Pulaski, Lincoln, Atlanta, Elkhart, Petersburg and Sweetwater furnished most of the men. It was mustered into service at Lincoln, Illinois, on September 18, 1862.

On November 7th it moved to Columbus, Kentucky, via St. Louis and from there moved on the 10th to Jackson, Tennessee. Here it was deployed into small detachments and distributed as guard along the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. On December 17th General Forrest attacked Jackson and captured Company C and G which were stationed at Carroll Station north of Jackson on December 20th. The captured companies were paroled by General Forrest and sent to Benton Barracks, Missouri, where they were exchanged later. The remainder of the regiment was then ordered to Bolivar and on May 31st the regiment moved to Vicksburg by way of Memphis, being fired upon while proceeding down the river and losing several men in killed and wounded on board the transport. It arrived on the Yazoo River near Haines' Bluff about June 4th and proceeded to the line of defenses along the Big Black and Yazoo Rivers opposing the advance of General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army. It was then sent up the Yazoo River on an expedition and again returned to the defensive line where it remained till after the surrender of Vicksburg. From there it was ordered to Helena, Arkansas, and participated in the advance on Little Rock and its capture. From that time on it remained on duty in Arkansas, being stationed at Duvall's Bluff, Pine Bluff, Benton, Hot Springs, Lewisburg, St. Charles Dardanelle and Brownsville and participating in occasional expeditions, skirmishes and affairs.

It was mustered out of service on July 12, 1865, at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and arrived at Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois, on July 24, 1865, where it disbanded and received its final pay.

MONUMENT FOR 106TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

108TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Peoria and there mustered into the United States service on August 28, 1862. The companies were recruited in the vicinity of Tremont, Hopedale, Pekin, Peoria, Panola, Eureka, Metamora, Bath, San Jose and Delavan. It left Peoria on October 6th for Covington, Kentucky, and on the 17th marched from there to Nicholasville. On November 14th broke camp here and marched to Louisville, where on the 21st it embarked for Memphis, going into camp near this city on November 26th.

On the 20th of December it became part of General Sherman's army that moved to Vicksburg by way of the Yazoo River, arriving at Johnston's Landing near the mouth of the Yazoo River in time to disembark and participate in some skirmishing on the afternoon of the 29th and 30th. On January 1, 1863, with a section of the Chicago Mercantile Battery it covered the retreat of the army and on the 2d re-embarked and then participated in the battle of Arkansas Post on January 10th and 11th, 1863. On the 17th it proceeded to Young's Point, Louisiana, and remained here from January 24th to the 10th of March and moved to Milliken's Bend, having been mostly engaged during its stay in digging the canal in front of Vicksburg. It remained at Milliken's Bend until April 15th when it marched with McClernand's corps, to Hard Times Landing and to Bruinsburg, where it arrived on the 29th of April. The next day it crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg and on May 1st was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson. It proceeded with the army as far as Champion's Hill where it participated in the battle of the 16th of May. After this action it was placed in charge of prisoners of war whom it escorted by way of Haines' Bluff to Young's Point, Louisiana, and thence to Memphis, Tennessee. Having delivered its prisoners there it returned to Young's Point, Louisiana, and was retained there during the entire siege of Vicksburg, defending the approaches to Vicksburg and guarding the Confederate escape from Vicksburg until the surrender of July 4th. On July 18th it went into camp at Vicksburg and on July 29th returned to Memphis. On August 5th it changed station to LaGrange, Tennessee, and on October 28th marched to Pocahontas where it remained until the 9th of November when it moved to Corinth, Mississippi. Here it remained until the 25th of January, 1864, and then returned to Memphis.

On June 2, 1864, a portion of the regiment participated in General Sturgis' disastrous expedition to Guntown. It returned to Memphis where it was stationed on August 21, 1864, when Forrest's command entered the city and assisted in his repulse.

It embarked for New Orleans on February 28, 1865, and on March 12th from there for Dauphin Island. On March 21st it moved up Mobile Bay and Fish River to Danley's Mills and on the 25th moved in the direction of Mobile. On the 27th was in front of Spanish Fort and entered the siege of Mobile, participating in all the operations until the surrender on April 8, 1865.

On April 9th took up the march to Montgomery, Alabama, which was reached on the 25th. Did provost guard duty here until July 18th, when it embarked for Selma, Alabama. From here it moved by rail to Demopolis, then up Tombigbee River to McDowell's Landing and thence by rail to Jackson, Mississippi, and marched from Jackson to the Big Black River and from there went by rail to Vicksburg. On the 5th of August it was mustered out here and the regiment embarked for Cairo, then it proceeded to Chicago, where on August 11, 1865, it received its final pay and dismissal, from the service of the United States.

MONUMENT FOR 108TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

113TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment, which was also known as the Third Chicago Board of Trade regiment, was organized in Chicago and mustered into the United States service November 6, 1862. Four companies were raised in Cook County, and three came from Kankakee and three from Iroquois.

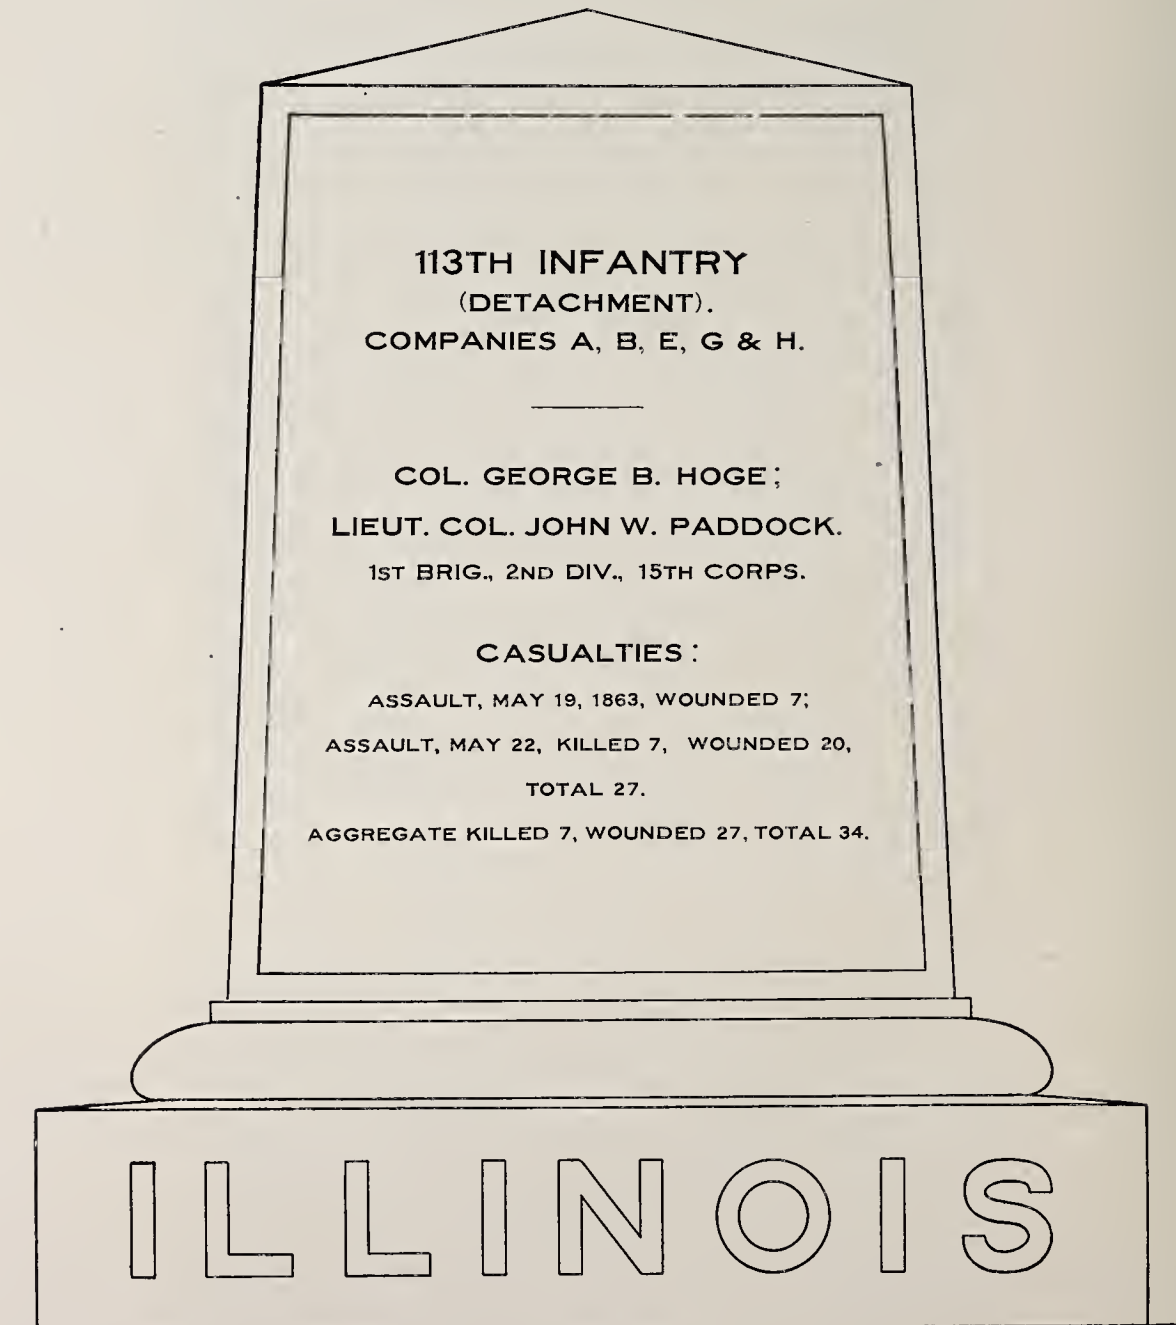

It moved to Memphis, Tennessee, and from there with General Sherman to Oxford, Mississippi, to participate in General Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign. It was part of the command that returned with General Sherman from Oxford to Memphis, on December 8, 1862, and proceeded with him down the Mississippi to Vicksburg, in his movement upon that place by way of the Yazoo River later in December. Here it participated in the battle of Chickasaw Bayou and from there it went with the army to Arkansas Post and took part in the capture of it on January 11, 1863. Companies C, D, F, I and K were, after this action, sent north with prisoners of war and these companies remained at Springfield and did not rejoin the command until late in 1864. The other five companies proceeded to Young's Point, Louisiana, and acted as provost guard of the 15th Army Corps.

It participated in General Sherman's expedition of Steele's Bayou, Black Bayou and Deer Creek and assisted in extricating Admiral Porter's gun-boats from a precarious position near Rolling Fork, Mississippi. After this expedition it returned to Milliken's Bend and when General Sherman started on his march in the Vicksburg campaign, it moved with him. It participated in the entire Vicksburg campaign, reaching the defenses of that city on the afternoon of May 18th and took part in the assaults of May 19th and May 22d. After the siege operations had been fairly well begun the battalion of this regiment was ordered to provost guard duty, at Chickasaw Bayou until after the surrender, on July 4th, when it moved to Memphis, Tennessee and later to Corinth, Mississippi. Here it remained from October 1, 1863, to January 5, 1864.

Then it again returned to Memphis where it was stationed at the time of General Forrest's raid into that city. In June, 1864, it formed part of the column under General Sturgis that moved to operate against and destroy General Forrest's forces. It participated in the disastrous battle of Guntown, Mississippi, where it sustained very heavy losses in killed, wounded and missing. In March, 1865, it formed part of an expedition to Eastport, Mississippi, on the Tennessee River, which also was repulsed by General Forrest's command.

On June 20, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of the United States service at Memphis, Tennessee. It proceeded to Chicago, where it arrived for its final discharge and disbandment on June 25, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 113TH INFANTRY DETACHMENT ON UNION AVENUE.

This regiment has had four markers placed in different locations occupied by it along the investment line; the first designates its position in the assault of May 19th; the second the position occupied by it in the assault of May 22d; the third marks its camp ground during the siege, and the fourth the place it occupied as sharpshooters from May 23d to July 4, 1863.

114TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The men of this regiment came mostly from Sangamon, Cass and Menard Counties. Companies B, C, G, E, H and I came from Sangamon; F and K from Menard and A and D from Cass County. It was organized and mustered into the United States service near Springfield on September 18, 1862.

On November 8th, the regiment left for Memphis, Tennessee, and remained there until November 26th. It marched with Sherman's army to Oxford, Mississippi, to join General Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign, where it arrived on December 4th and remained until December 23d, when, after the disaster of Holly Springs it marched to Jackson, Tennessee, arriving there on January 8, 1863. After remaining here until February 9th, it returned to Memphis.

On March 17th, it proceeded down the river to Young's Point, Louisiana, and went into camp at Duckport on April 2d. It broke camp here on May 2d, on its march to the rear of Vicksburg and on May 14th, was engaged in the battle of Jackson, Mississippi. It arrived in front of the defences of the City of Vicksburg on the afternoon of May 18th and participated in the assaults of May 19th and May 22d, and in all the siege operations until the surrender of July 4th.

It then joined General Sherman's army and proceeded to Jackson, Mississippi, to disperse the army of General Joseph E. Johnston and again shared in the siege and capture of that city, pursuing Johnston's army to Brandon, twenty miles south of Jackson, thence returned to Camp Sherman near Vicksburg, and remained until September 3d, when it moved to Oak Ridge, Mississippi, and on November 20th, having returned to Vicksburg, it embarked for Memphis. Here it remained until February 5, 1864, when it went on an expedition to Wyatt, Mississippi, in co-operation of a movement under General Wm. Sooy Smith along the Tallahatchie, in support of General Sherman's Meridian expedition from Vicksburg. Having returned to Memphis it resumed its provost guard duty and on April 30th went on an expedition under General Sturgis.

On June 1st it again went on an expedition under General Sturgis, which resulted in the fateful battle of Guntown, on June 10, 1864. Having returned from this disastrous expedition it participated in General A. J. Smith's movement on Tupelo, Mississippi, and was severely engaged at Harrisville, Mississippi. In August it participated in another expedition under General A. J. Smith and having returned from this, it moved to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, and participated in the pursuit of General Price on his famous raid into Missouri.

The regiment marched to Cape Girardeau where it arrived on October 6th. It then proceeded to Jefferson City, Missouri, and next to Otterville. Continuing the pursuit to Kansas City and from there was ordered to St. Louis where it arrived on November 15th. From here it moved to Nashville, Tennessee, and participated in the battle of the 15th and 16th of December, 1864.

The regiment was next engaged in the pursuit of Hood's army as far as Pulaski, Tennessee, then it moved by transport from Clifton, Tennessee, to Eastport, Mississippi, where it became detached and placed in charge of the pontoon of the 16th corps.

On February 9, 1865, it embarked at Eastport, Mississippi, and proceeded down the Tennessee, the Ohio and the Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 22d. On March 23d it proceeded by way of Lake Pontchartrain for Spanish Fort, Alabama, and entered the siege there. It was engaged in the attacks on Fort Tracey and Huguee.

Mobile having surrendered, the regiment marched to Montgomery, Alabama, where it arrived on April 24th and bridged the Alabama River with its pontoon. It remained on duty here until July 17th, when it was ordered to proceed to Vicksburg, Mississippi, for muster-out. On August 3, 1865, it was mustered out and then proceeded to Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois, where it arrived on August 7th and on the 15th it was finally disbanded.

To mark the positions of this regiment in the line of investment three markers have been erected; one designates its assault on May 19th; another marks its sharpshooters' line from May 23d to June 4, 1863, and the third from June 5th to June 9, 1863.

116TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was recruited almost entirely in Macon and McLean Counties and was mustered into the service at Fairview Park, Decatur, September 30, 1862.

November 8th it moved via Cairo to Memphis, Tennessee. December 1st it marched with the army under the command of General Sherman to the Tallahatchie River to form a junction with a column under General Grant at College Hill, near Oxford, Mississippi. December 20th General Sherman returned with one division of his army to Memphis, this regiment included, and embarked for Milliken's Bend and the Yazoo River. It participated in the engagements around Chickasaw Bayou and Chickasaw Bluffs. January 1, 1863, it moved with the army down the Yazoo and up the Mississippi Rivers to Arkansas Post and January 10th and 11th, 1863, took part in the attack and capture of that place.

January 22d, it arrived at Young's Point, Louisiana, and for the next two months it was engaged in digging on the canal across the peninsula. In March it engaged in the Deer Creek and Black Bayou expeditions and served in extricating Admiral Porter's fleet from its precarious position near Rolling Fork.

Early in May, after having participated in the feigned attack on Vicksburg from Haines' Bluff, on April 29th, it took up its route of march down the Louisiana side of the Mississippi River and crossed that river at Grand Gulf and was in time to assist in the battle of Champion's Hill May 16th. It reached the line of defenses around Vicksburg May 18th and participated in the assaults on the 19th and 22d of May and also took part in the siege operations until the surrender, July 4th.

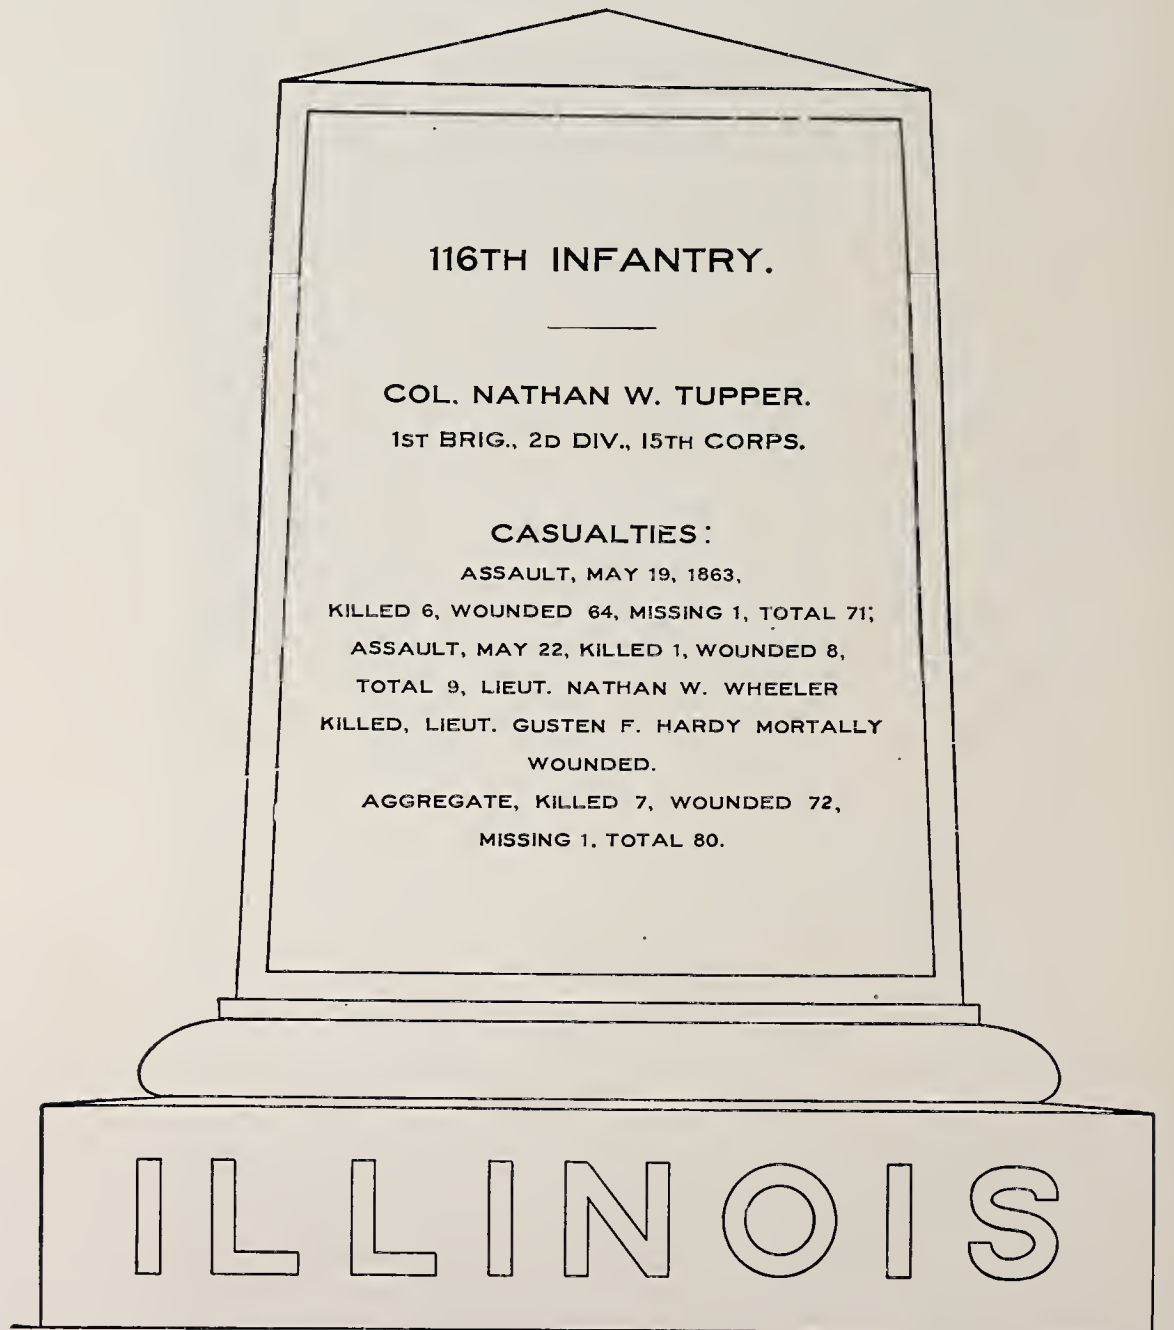

The next day it started under General Sherman, in pursuit of General Joseph E. Johnston's Confederate relieving army and after the evacuation of Jackson, followed him across Pearl River to Brandon, Mississippi. It returned to Camp Sherman, near Big Black River Bridge, July 25th and remained there until October, when it embarked for Memphis and thence marched via Corinth, Mississippi, to Chattanooga, where it arrived on the 21st of November and went into a concealed camp. At midnight on the 23d it floated down the Tennessee River in pontoon boats to the mouth of Chickamauga Creek, landed and held this position during the laying of the pontoon bridge and the crossing of Sherman's army. The next day it advanced and was engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge and then became part of the army that went to the relief of General Burnside in the siege of Knoxville, Tennessee. After its return from Knoxville, it went into winter quarters, January 19, 1864, at Larkinsville, Alabama.

In May, 1864, the regiment moved through Snake Creek Gap and on the 14th was hotly engaged at Resaca, Georgia. It then participated in the battles of Dallas, Big Shanty and Kenesaw Mountain from May 26th to June 27, 1864. It crossed the Chattahoochie River, was engaged at Stone Mountain, fought in the battle before Atlanta July 22d, at Ezra Chapel July 28th, served through the whole Atlanta campaign, and in the engagements at Jonesboro, August 31st and September 1st.

After the fall of Atlanta it went north in pursuit of Hood's army and then returned to Atlanta. November 15th, it became part of the army that marched to the sea and arrived near Fort McAllister, Georgia, December 12th. It was in the column of attack and capture of that fort the next day, and soon after that it entered the city of Savannah. After this it participated in the campaign of the Carolinas, was at the burning of Columbia and engaged in the battle of Bentonville.

It moved thence by way of Goldsboro, Raleigh, Richmond and Alexandria to Washington, where on May 24th, it took part in the Grand Review. It was then mustered out of the United States service near Washington, D. C., June 7, 1865, and returned to Springfield, Illinois, for final disbandment.

MONUMENT FOR 116TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

This regiment has had four markers erected to locate its positions during the siege. The first marks the position occupied by it in the assault of May 19th; the second that of the assault of May 22d; the third marks its camp ground during the siege and the fourth its sharpshooters' line from May 23d to July 4, 1863.

118TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The men of this regiment came by companies from Fountain Green, Carthage, Hamilton, Warsaw, Basco, Quincy, Richfield, Mendon, Terre Haute and from Hancock, Adams, Henderson and Gallatin Counties. They were organized and mustered into the United States service on November 7, 1862, at Camp Butler, near Springfield.

On December 1st it went by way of Alton to St. Louis and thence to Memphis. On December 20th it embarked for the first attack on Vicksburg and participated in the action on Chickasaw Bluffs up the Yazoo River and returned to the Mississippi River on January 2, 1863. It then proceeded to Arkansas Post and participated in the fight and capture of the place January 10th and 11th. On January 23d it moved to Young's Point, Louisiana, and there it helped dig the canal across the peninsula until March 9th when it went into camp at Milliken's Bend.

On April 2d it moved with General Osterhaus who had the advance of the final campaign's beginning, through the Louisiana swamps southward and crossed the river at Bruinsburg on April 30, 1863. It was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson May 1st, at Champion's Hill May 16th and Big Black River Bridge on May 17th. It took part in establishing the investing line around Vicksburg on May 19th, participated in skirmishes on the 20th and 21st and in the assault on May 22d.

On May 24th, it was withdrawn from the line of investment and with the division to which it was attached, moved to Big Black River bridge, where it remained throughout the siege, defending the line toward the rear against General Johnston's relieving army. While serving here, part of the regiment was mounted and acted as cavalry.

On July 6th it moved with General Sherman's command for the second attack on Jackson, Mississippi, and participated in the battles and siege from the 10th to the 17th. The mounted battalion from July 17th until the 20th made a raid extending to Brook Haven, Mississippi, destroying the railroad property as they went. On July 22d the regiment started for Vicksburg where it arrived on the 25th. It was here again dismounted.

On August 8th it changed station to Port Hudson, Louisiana, and on the 15th moved to Carrollton. On September 5th it moved to Algiers thence to Bayou Boeuf. On September 16th it marched to Brashear City and on the 26th to Berwick City and on October 3d became part of an expedition up Bayou Teche, but was recalled from this expedition and returned to Brashear and Algiers, which it reached on October 7th. Here it was again mounted and returned to Brashear on October 11th and took up the march to Franklin and New Iberia, Louisiana, where it overtook the main force of the army. Was engaged in skirmishes from the 15th to the 20th, reaching Opelousas on the 21st. It continued skirmishing and scouting throughout the balance of the month and to November 3d when it was hotly engaged at Grand Coteau.

On the 5th of November it reached Vermillion Bayou and on the 11th fought a battle near Vermillionville. On the 15th moved to New Iberia, on the 22d and 23d had an affair at Vermillion Bayou. December 2d and 3d a skirmish near St. Martinsville. It remained in the vicinity of New Iberia till December 18th, when it marched to Donaldsonville, Louisiana.

On January 7, 1864, it moved to Port Hudson, remained here until July 3d, being engaged in the interim in scouts and expeditions to Jackson, Louisiana, Bayou Sara, Mississippi, and Baton Rouge on the east side of the river; and to the Red River and Bayou Gros Tete on the west side of the river.

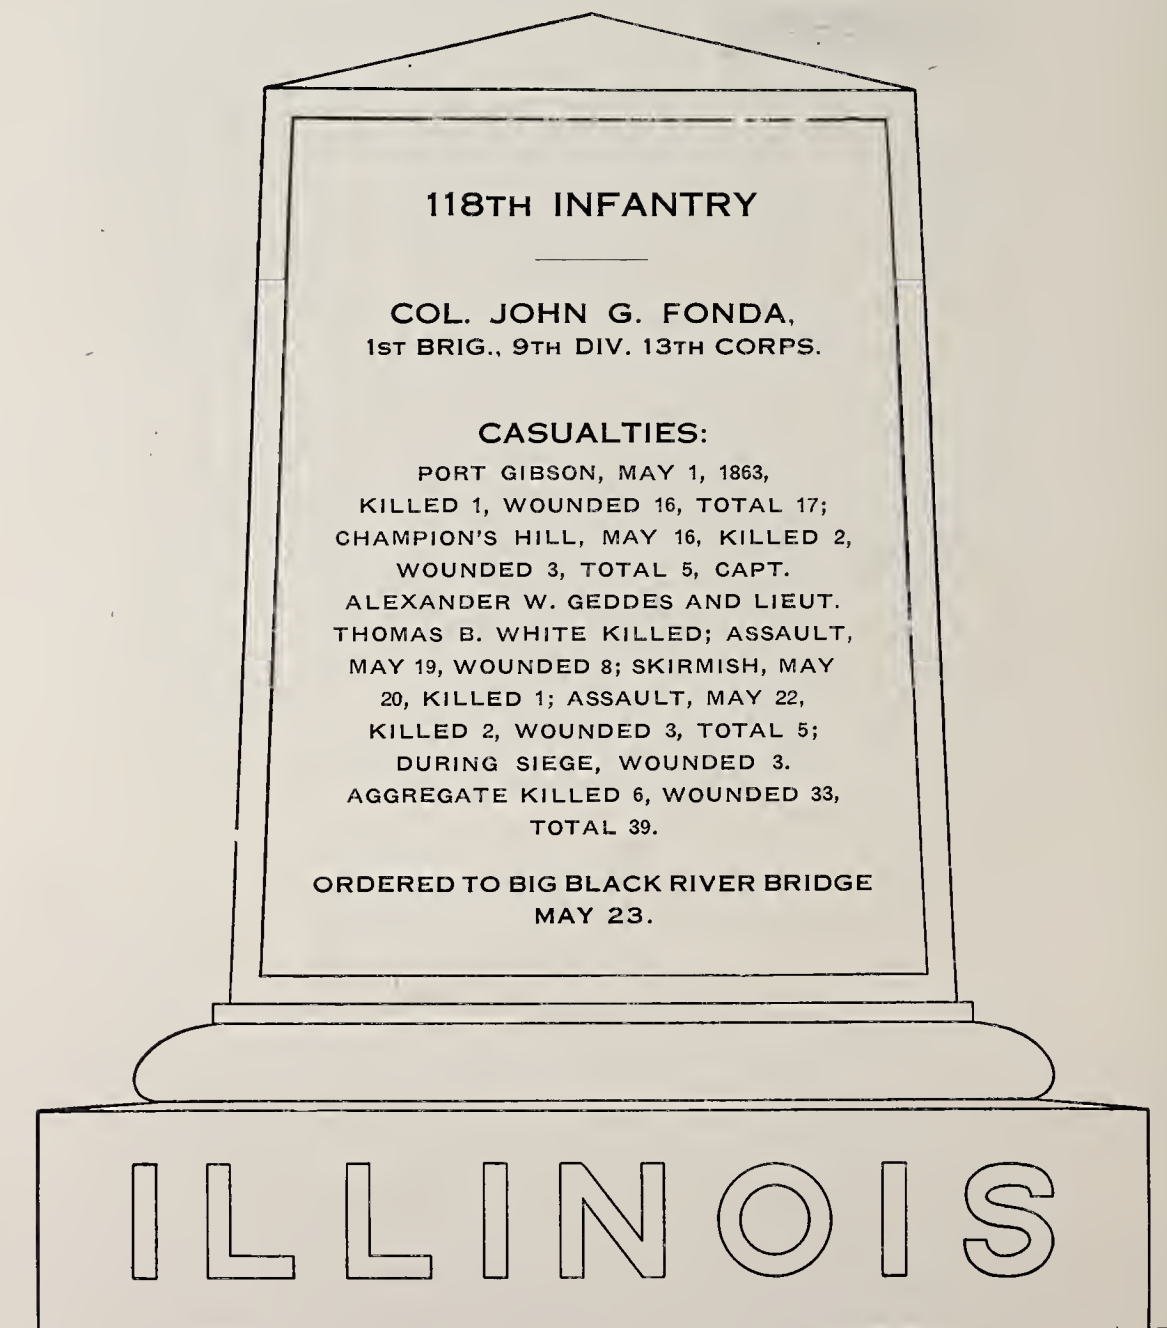

On July 3d, it moved to Baton Rouge and from there to Clinton, Louisiana, being engaged in a hot contest on the 26th of August at the Comite River. On September 4th and 7th it moved to the relief of the 11th New York Cavalry opposite Donaldsonville and from this time until October 24th was almost continuously engaged in skirmishes and scouting. In November, it participated in raids to Liberty, Mississippi, and to Summit and Brookhaven, returning on the 19th to Baton Rouge.

On November 27th, it started on an expedition through Louisiana and Mississippi to West Pascagoula on Mississippi Sound, which it reached December 12th. Returned by water to New Orleans and Baton Rouge on December 27, 1864. Here it remained until May 22d doing outpost and scouting duty. On this date, the regiment was again dismounted and transformed into infantry. It remained on provost duty at Baton Rouge till October 1st when it was mustered out of the United States service. On its homeward journey it reached Cairo on October 8th, St. Louis on the 9th and Springfield on the 10th of October. Here the regiment was finally paid off and disbanded on October 13, 1865.

CONFEDERATE FORT GARROTT.

MONUMENT FOR 118TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

One marker has been erected on the investment line for this regiment; it marks the position it occupied in the assault of May 22.

120th INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was the result of a consolidation ordered by Governor Yates of the 120th and the 132d regiments, the first being recruited at Vienna and the second at Shawneetown. The men recruited for these regiments were brought to Camp Butler, near Springfield in September, seven companies being recruited for the former and three for the latter. On October 28th, they were mustered into the United States service as the 120th. The men came mostly from Golconda, Vienna, Shawneetown, Harrisburg and Gallatin and from Johnson, Pope, Williamson and White Counties.

On November 9th, the regiment moved by way of Alton and St. Louis to Memphis. Here it remained until January 13, 1863, when it participated in an expedition to Hopedale and Marion, Arkansas. After its return, it performed various kinds of duty until early in May, when the regiment proceeded down the river to Vicksburg. While descending the river it was fired into, near Gainesville, and sustained quite a severe loss. It arrived at Young's Point, Louisiana, and then marched to Hard Times Landing, crossed the river to Warrenton and moved up to the investing line at Vicksburg on the extreme left of the Union position, but immediately returned to Young's Point. Here it served throughout the siege, excepting that on July 2d it embarked to move to the relief of the forces at Lake Providence that were threatened by General Taylor's command. On July 28th the regiment moved to LaGrange, Tennessee, and on October 10th it participated in an expedition into Mississippi to Coldwater and Davis' Mills and then returned to Memphis on the 21st. From there it moved to Corinth, Mississippi, on the 30th of October and again returned to Memphis on the 4th of November. It was sent back to Corinth and there remained until January 25, 1864, when it became provost guard at Memphis. On May 30th, it formed part of General Sturgis' column that suffered so dreadfully by General Forrest's hand near Guntown, Mississippi.

After returning from this disastrous expedition the 113th was consolidated with this regiment and embarked on September 30th for Cairo, Illinois. Thence it proceeded to Paducah and up the Tennessee River. On the 6th of October reached Clifton and marched in the direction of Nashville, Tennessee, but returned to Clifton on the 8th of October and moved up the Tennessee River to intercept General Forrest; debarked at Florence, Alabama, and was here attacked. Re-embarked at once and reached Pittsburg Landing on the 10th.

It moved from there to Johnsonville and thence to Memphis where it arrived on October 23d and resumed provost guard duty. The regiment remained at Memphis till September 7, 1865, when it proceeded to Camp Butler, near Springfield, Illinois, and received its final payment and discharge on the 10th.

MONUMENT FOR 120TH INFANTRY ON GRANT AVENUE.

124TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized near Springfield and mustered into service on September 10, 1862. The companies came mostly from the vicinities of Kewanee, Batavia, Springfield, Aurora, New Boston, Macomb, Colchester, Fairfield and Chicago.

On October 6th it left for Jackson, Tennessee, and on November 2d it became part of General Grant's army of the Northern Mississippi campaign and moved as far south as Oxford, Mississippi, and the Yocona River. After the disaster at Holly Springs it moved to Memphis, where it arrived on January 21st. From here it moved to Lake Providence, Louisiana, a month or so later where it assisted in the futile effort of forcing a waterway to the rear of Vicksburg by way of Bayou Macon, Tensas and Ouachita Rivers to the rear of Vicksburg. It then moved to Milliken's Bend, and on April 25th broke camp here, marched to De Shroons' Plantation, Louisiana, whence it crossed the Mississippi River to Bruinsburg, on the gun-boat Mound City, on April 30th.

On May 1st it was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson; on May 12th in the battle of Raymond; on May 14th in the battle of capture of Jackson, Mississippi, and on May 16th in the battle of Champion's Hill.

On the morning of May 19th it crossed the Big Black River and reached the investment line of Vicksburg in the vicinity of the "White House" on the afternoon of that day. It participated in the assault of May 22d and in all the siege operations to July 4th, the day of the surrender. It was ordered into the crater to the relief of the 45th Infantry, June 26th, after the explosion of the mine under the 3d Louisiana redan on June 25th, and on July 4th it was one of the regiments sent into the captured city to the court house, to take possession.

From August 21st to September 2d, it formed part of an expedition to Monroe, Louisiana, and from October 14th to 20th it participated in an expedition to Brownsville and Bogue Chitto Creek, Mississippi. On November 7th it moved to Big Black River. Here it remained stationed until it became part of General Sherman's Meridian expedition, from February 3d to March 4, 1864. On the 5th of April it again moved to Vicksburg, where it remained until February 25, 1865, doing provost guard duty and participating in expeditions; in May, 1864, to Benton and Yazoo City, and in July, to Jackson. In October it was part of an expeditionary force that proceeded up the river as far as Memphis.

On February 25, 1865, the regiment moved to New Orleans and on March 11th, embarked for Dauphin Island, Alabama, which it reached on the 16th.

On the 22d, it debarked on Fish River and moved on Spanish Fort. Shared in the investment and siege of the fort and in its attack on April 8th and its capture. After the fall of Mobile, it moved on April 13th to Montgomery, Alabama, which it reached on the 25th.

On the 16th of July, it left for home by way of the Alabama River and by rail through Meridian and Jackson to Vicksburg. On the 28th of July, having been mustered out of the United States service, it left Vicksburg and reached Chicago on August 3d and was here finally discharged, paid off and disbanded on the 16th of August.

MONUMENT FOR 124TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

To designate positions occupied by this regiment during the siege, three markers have been erected; one designates the position it held in the assault of May 22d; another designates the position of its sharpshooters' line from June 6th to July 4th and the third the position of Company A of this regiment on a detached sharpshooters' line from May 23d to July 4, 1863.

126TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 126th Infantry was organized and mustered into the United States service at Alton on September 4, 1862. The companies came from Sullivan, Buffalo Prairie, Lovington, Hillsboro, Port Byron, Nokomis, Cordova, Cold Valley and Rock Island.

On November 20th it moved to Columbus, Kentucky, and thence to Bolivar, Tennessee. On the 28th it marched to LaGrange and on December 19th when Forrest and Van Dorn were threatening Grant's line of communication and his base of supplies at Holly Springs during his Northern Mississippi campaign, six companies of this regiment marched to Jackson, Tennessee, to reinforce the garrison there and thence to Humboldt, where the other four companies of the regiment joined them on January 20, 1863. Here they remained doing guard duty along the railroad until March 25th, when it changed station to Jackson Tennessee. It then became part of General Kimball's Provisional Division of the 16th corps, which moved by rail to Memphis, May 30, and thence embarked for Vicksburg, where it landed at Haines' Bluff up the Yazoo River about June 2, 1863.

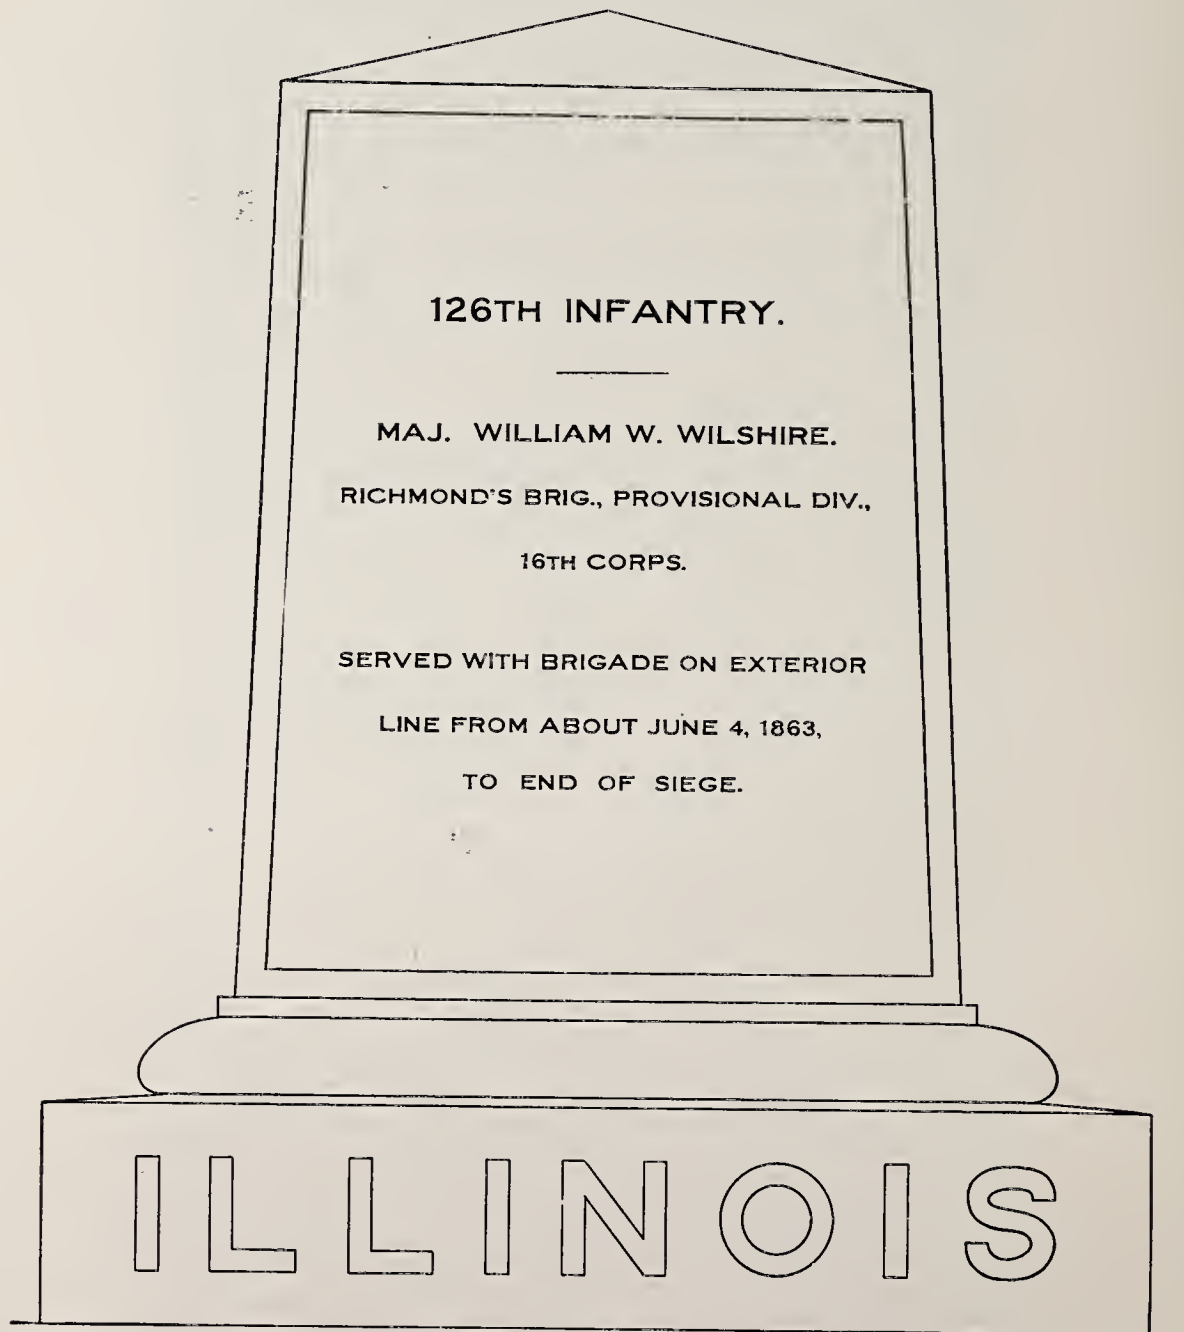

Here it took position in the line faced to the east, extending from the Yazoo to the Big Black River, opposing General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army and served throughout the siege. On July 24th, the regiment embarked for Helena, Arkansas, and became part of General Steele's forces in his Arkansas campaign that culminated in the capture of Little Rock, where the regiment arrived on September 10th. From here it marched to Duval's Bluff on October 24, 1863, remained here until August 19, 1864, when it marched by way of Little Rock to Pine Bluff, Arkansas. From there it moved on February 12, 1865, to the mouth of White River, where it was stationed until the great flood of 1865 drove it out of its camp and the regiment proceeded by boat to St. Charles, forty miles up White River. From there it returned to Pine Bluff, June 4th, where it was mustered out of the United States service on July 12, 1865.

It proceeded to Illinois and was finally disbanded August 1, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 126TH INFANTRY ON SHERMAN AVENUE.

127TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Chicago with Companies recruited at Oswego, Chicago, Elgin, Highland, St. Charles, Little Rock, Somonauk, Lyons and Kendall. It was mustered into the United States service on September 6, 1862.

It remained on duty in Camp Douglas, guarding prisoners, until November 9th, when it moved to Memphis, Tennessee, where it arrived on the 13th. On the 26th it joined General Sherman's command on his march to Oxford, Mississippi, in conjunction with General Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign. It returned with General Sherman from Oxford, on December 13th, to Memphis and embarked there on the 20th, for the vicinity of Vicksburg. Reached the Yazoo River on the 25th and was engaged in the operations along Chickasaw Bayou from the 26th of December, 1862, to the 1st of January, 1863.

It then joined the expedition to Arkansas Post, Arkansas, and on the 11th of January participated in the battle and capture of that place.

It then moved down the river to Young's Point, where it was engaged in various kinds of work, including digging on the canal across the peninsula. While stationed here it participated, in March, in the Steele's and Black Bayou expedition and the release of Admiral Porter's fleet from its very precarious position near Rolling Fork, Mississippi.

It was part of General Blair's command that made the feigned attack to the north of Vicksburg on April 29th, while Admiral Porter's fleet was attacking Grand Gulf and General Grant's army was moving to get a position, on Mississippi soil, south of Vicksburg. It crossed the Mississippi River with Blair's division in time to be in supporting distance at the battle of Champion's Hill, on May 16th, and it reached the line of defenses around Vicksburg on the afternoon of May 18th, not very far distant from the position it occupied in the Chickasaw Bayou fight in December, 1862. It participated in the assaults of May 19th and 22d and then for a period was sent on detached duty along Chickasaw Bayou, but returned to the trenches some days before the surrender on July 4, 1863.

On the 5th of July, it joined Sherman's army on its March to Jackson, Mississippi, in pursuit of General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army. After the second capture of Jackson, the regiment returned to the Big Black River, where it remained until September. On the 22d of this month it marched to Vicksburg, thence moved to Memphis and marched from there to Chattanooga, Tennessee, and participated in the battle of Mission Ridge and the operations leading to it, November 22d to 25th. It then formed part of the expedition sent to the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville and returned from this to Bridgeport, Alabama, on December 18th.

In January, 1864, it was stationed at Larkinsville. Broke camp here on May 1, 1864, and participated in the battles in the vicinity of Resaca on May 14th. In the forward movement toward Atlanta, from May 26th to June 1st, the regiment was frequently engaged in small skirmishes. It was engaged at Kenesaw Mountain on June 27th and participated in the movements toward Atlanta, throughout that campaign and particularly on July 22d in the battle before Atlanta, and again on the 28th of July, and all through August, including the battle of Jonesboro and until the evacuation of Atlanta.

It next participated in the pursuit of General Hood, in his effort to break up General Sherman's line of communication northward, and then returned to Atlanta and joined the army on the march to the sea. In this famous march the regiment was attached to the headquarters of the Army of the Tennessee until Columbia, South Carolina, was reached, in the capture of which it participated. It was at Fayetteville, North Carolina, and in the last battle of that campaign at Bentonville, reached Goldsboro in time to take part in the pursuit of General Johnston. It reached Raleigh on the 14th of April and camped here for some time; on the 29th of April, after the surrender of Johnston's Confederate army, the regiment took up its march to Washington by way of Petersburg and Richmond and participated in the Grand Review on May 24, 1865.

On the 4th of June it was mustered out of the United States service and left Washington for Chicago, where it received its final pay and was disbanded on the 17th day of June, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 127TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

One marker has been erected along the investment line to designate the position of this regiment held in the assault of May 19, 1863.

130TH INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 130th Infantry was organized at Camp Butler and was mustered into the service on the 25th of October, 1862. The companies comprising this regiment were organized in the counties of Alexander, Bond, Clark, Christian, Coles, Edgar, Monroe, Sangamon, Richland and Lawrence.

The regiment left Camp Butler November 11th for Memphis, Tennessee, where it arrived on the 17th. It remained at Fort Pickering, near the city, until March 27, 1863, during which time it did provost duty in the city, and was only relieved at the urgent request of Colonel Niles for active service in the field. Owing to the prevalence of measles and smallpox, the regiment sustained a great loss by death while serving near Memphis.

On the 27th of March it embarked for Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 31st. It remained at this point while the army was organizing for the Vicksburg campaign, and moved with that army on the 15th of April, 1863, and crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg on the morning of May 1st, and marched immediately for Port Gibson, where the advance of the 13th corps had early engaged the enemy. Here it became engaged for the first time.

The regiment continued with the army through Mississippi, and was again engaged at Champion's Hill on the 16th of May, and on the 17th at Black River Bridge. On the 18th it marched on toward Vicksburg and at night encamped within three miles of the city.

On the morning of the 19th the regiment participated in the assault. It was also in the assaulting column of May 22d. It served in the line of investment during the entire siege until July 4th.

On the morning of the 5th of July the regiment again took up its line of March, for Jackson, Mississippi, where the Confederates were found entrenched behind very formidable works. A vigorous siege of ten days compelled them to withdraw, burning and sacking the town as they left. The regiment was then ordered to return to Vicksburg, and encamped on the bank of the river, where the 13th Army Corps were permitted to rest and reorganize, after which it was transferred to the Gulf Department, under the command of General Banks.

The 130th remained near New Orleans until the middle of October, 1863, when it was ordered, with the remainder of the army, to Berwick Bay, thence up Bayou Teche, at which time a Texas expedition was under way. After proceeding up the Bayou about eighty miles, the regiment was brought to a halt at New Iberia, and with the 99th Illinois, remained on duty at this place, while a large portion of the army moved on twenty-five miles farther up to Vermillionville. It remained at New Iberia until about the first of December.

The regiment was then ordered to the coast of Texas, where it spent the winter of 1863-4 at Decrow's Point, on Matagorda Peninsula. In February, 1864, it returned to Berwick Bay, and then started on the ill-fated Red River expedition. At the battle of Mansfield it lost severely in killed and wounded, and nearly its entire number were captured and taken to Tyler, Texas, where they remained thirteen months, as prisoners of war, and were only paroled a few days before the surrender of the entire Confederate army. At the battle of Mansfield, Lieutenant-Colonel John B. Reid, in command of the regiment, and the only field officer present, was severely wounded, a rifle ball passing through the upper lobe of his right lung and the entire body. He was taken to a Confederate hospital, where he so far recovered as to be paroled in ten weeks from the date of his capture. He returned to the Union lines, and by the time he was exchanged, was able to again take command of the regiment. Captain F. D. Phillips was also severely wounded, in the knee, and afterwards died from the effects of the wound. Captain C. T. Mullen was also wounded and died while in the hands of his captors. The remainder of the regiment, but a handful of men, who succeeded in escaping, returned with the army to the Mississippi River, and was afterwards ordered to New Orleans, where it was put on duty during the winter of 1864-5.

In January, 1865, it was temporarily consolidated with the 77th Illinois, with which it was connected during the Mobile campaign, and participated in the attack and siege of Spanish Fort and Fort Blakeley. This was the second regiment that landed on the Mobile shore of the bay, and upon landing found the enemy had evacuated the city, and following him, had a slight skirmish with his cavalry—one of the last skirmishes of the war. It went up the Tombigbee River as far as McIntosh Bluffs, where the Confederacy once had a navy yard. Here it remained until the surrender of Taylor's command and the return of the Confederate fleet down the river, when it embarked on that fleet and returned to Mobile.

On the 11th day of July, 1865, the old 77th was mustered out, and the old 130th reorganized into a battalion of six companies, by the untiring energy of Lieutenant-Colonel John B. Reid, who was anxious that it should be mustered out as the 130th regiment. In the first week of August, 1865, it was ordered to New Orleans for muster-out, which was accomplished on the 15th, and it at once embarked for Springfield, Illinois, where on the 31st of that month it was paid off and finally discharged. For gallant services several officers were here promoted, among the number Lieutenant-Colonel John B. Reid to Colonel and Captain Jacob W. Wilkin to Major.

MONUMENT FOR 130TH INFANTRY ON UNION AVENUE.

To mark the positions of this regiment during the siege two markers have been erected; one designates its position in the assault of May 22d; the other marks its sharpshooters' line from June 15 to July 4th, 1863.

131ST INFANTRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was mustered in at Fort Massac on November 13, 1862, having been recruited in Hamilton, Gallatin, Hardin, Pope and Massac Counties.

On December 2d, it moved to Memphis, Tennessee, and on December 20th it embarked as part of General Sherman's army that moved for the attack on Vicksburg by way of the Yazoo River. It reached the vicinity of Haines' Bluff on the Yazoo River on December 27th. Here it remained until January 1st, when it was withdrawn. It proceeded to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, and then joined the expedition to and participated in the battle and capture of Arkansas Post, on January 11th. It remained here until January 15th and then proceeded to Young's Point, where it went into camp on January 23d. Here the regiment suffered terribly from disease while working on the canal, there being very little dry ground for it to occupy. Measles, smallpox and pneumonia so depleted its ranks that on March 2d, it was ordered to Memphis for recuperation. It remained here until May 9th, when it again was ordered to Vicksburg.

It arrived at Sherman's Landing on May 12th, moved thence to Milliken's Bend on the 17th and returned again to Sherman's Landing on the 24th. It remained on duty on the Louisiana side of the river throughout the siege of Vicksburg, some of its men doing picket and guard duty, while others were manning the mortar boats.

On June 7th, this regiment, with several others, was ordered to embark for the relief of the garrison at Milliken's Bend, which was composed almost entirely of colored troops, who were hard pressed by McCullough, but when they arrived at the Bend they found the battle was over and the Confederates had retreated. It returned to its station and remained there till the day after the surrender of Vicksburg, when it moved there and in a few days was sent to Big Black River, remaining there until July 20th, when it proceeded to Paducah, Kentucky, where it remained until October 15th, having been on September 16th consolidated into four companies. On October 15th this battalion was ordered to Murry, Kentucky, on an expedition, with other troops.

On the 20th of October it proceeded to Calloway Landing on the Tennessee River and there embarked for Vicksburg, which it reached on the 29th. While here it received an order consolidating this battalion with the 29th Illinois Infantry Regiment, which was then stationed at Natchez.

The further history of the men of this command and the command itself is embraced in that of the 29th Infantry.

MONUMENT FOR 131ST INFANTRY ON GRANT AVENUE.

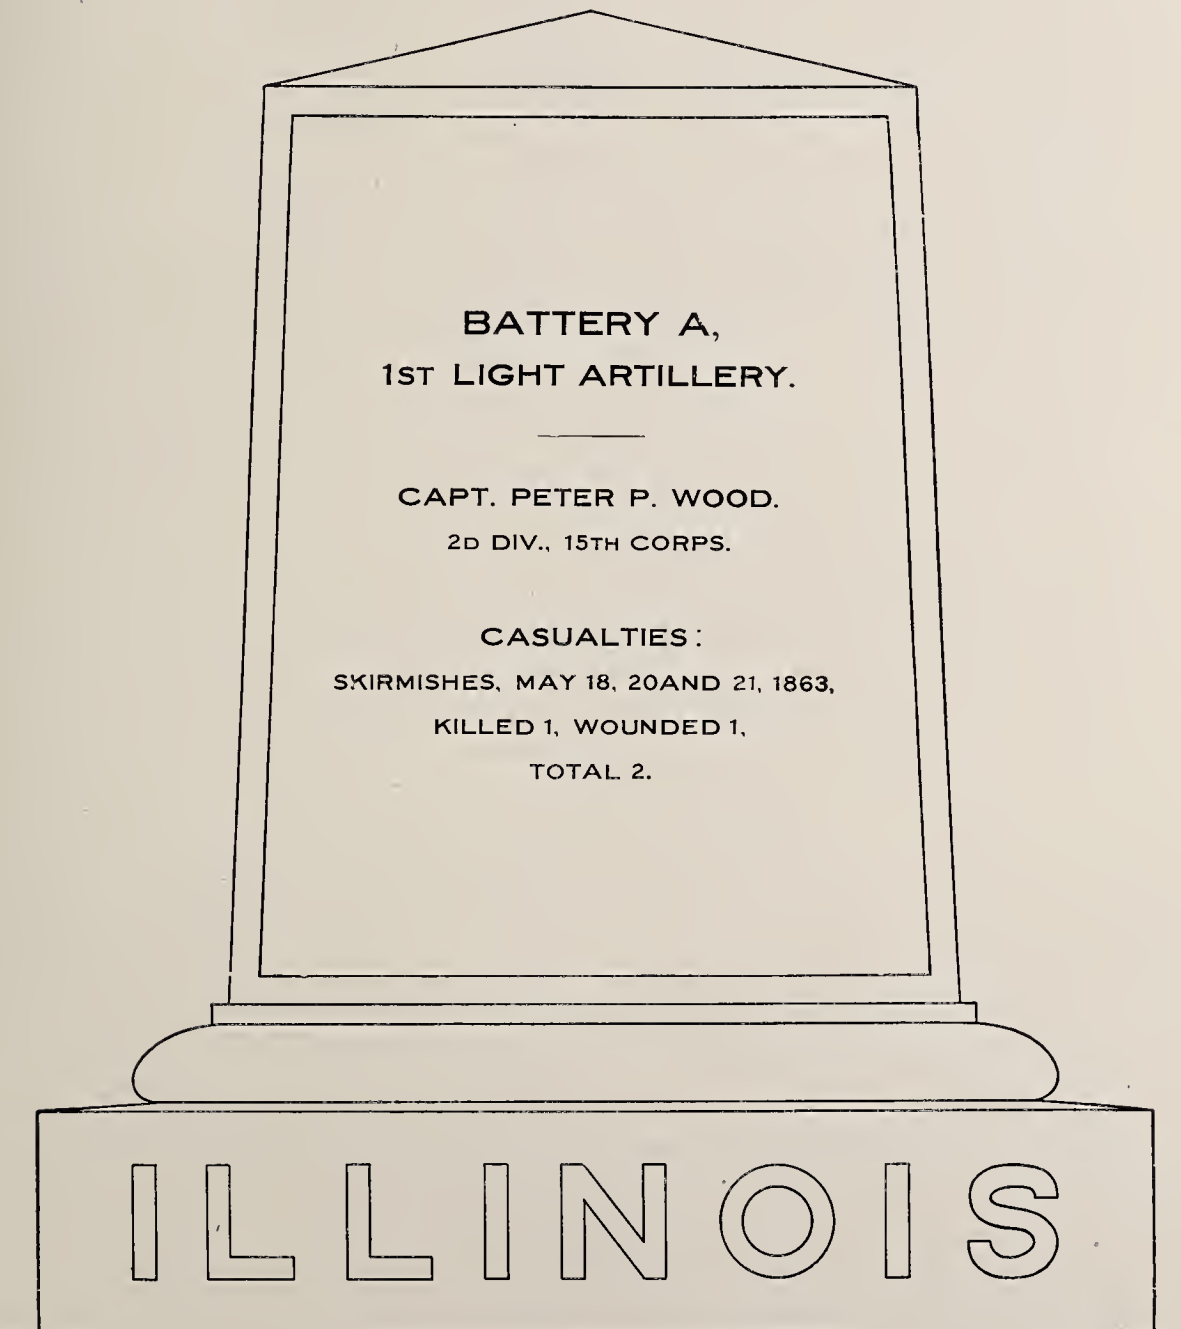

BATTERY A, 1ST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was organized in Chicago and left on its three months' service on Sunday evening, April 21, 1861, for Cairo. It did not muster into the United States service, but served in the vicinity of Cairo until July 16, 1861, when it was mustered into the United States service for three years.

On September 6th it moved to Paducah and was stationed there until February, 1862, participating in various expeditions during this period, among others a feint on Columbus from the east, while General Grant's attack on Belmont took place from the west of Columbus. In February, the battery moved to Donelson and was engaged in the attack on that fort. It marched from there to Fort Heiman on the Tennessee River and on March 27th to Pittsburg Landing. It participated in the battle of Shiloh April 6th and 7th and in the movement on Corinth that followed and thence took station at Bolivar, Tennessee, and later on June 17th reached Memphis, where it remained until November 26th. From here it participated in General Sherman's movement in Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign and returned to Memphis and on the 20th of December, moved to the vicinity of Vicksburg and participated in the battle of Chickasaw Bayou. It next was engaged at Arkansas Post on January 10th and 11th in 1863, and then took station at Young's Point, Louisiana, where it remained throughout the winter, excepting that in March, one section of the battery participated in the expedition up Steele's Bayou that released Admiral Porter's fleet from a tight place near Rolling Forks.

On April 29th it was part of General Blair's column in his feigned attack on Haines' Bluff to the north of Vicksburg. After this it moved with General Blair's division down the Louisiana side of the river, crossed over to Grand Gulf, Mississippi, and was in time for the action in the battle of Champion's Hill. On the 18th of May, in the afternoon, the battery reached the advance works of the line of defense around Vicksburg, near the Graveyard Road, and participated in the assaults of the 19th and 22d of May and in the siege operations until the day of the surrender, July 4th. The next day it moved to Jackson, Mississippi, and participated in the second siege and capture of that place and on July 17th took up the return march and went into camp along the Big Black River. Here it remained until September 27th, when it broke camp to move by way of Vicksburg and Memphis to Chattanooga. Was in position on November 24th in front of Mission Ridge and was engaged on the next day. It then joined the column in pursuit of Bragg to pretty close to Dalton, Georgia. Then returned to Chattanooga and finally went into winter quarters at Larkinsville.

On May 4, 1864, the battery started on the Atlanta campaign, it reached Snake Creek Gap on the 9th. It then participated in the operation which resulted in the battle of Resaca. It was next engaged at Dallas and at Kenesaw Mountain and then participated in the Atlanta campaign, taking part in the engagements of July 19th, 21st and 22d. It also took part in the move to the rear of Atlanta and in the battle of Jonesboro, which followed on the 28th of July. After the fall of Atlanta it encamped in the suburbs and then took part in the pursuit of Hood's army, which had gone northward to break up General Sherman's line of communication. The battery was then ordered to Nashville, Tennessee, where it arrived about November 1st and served in the reserve line during the battle. From here it moved to Chattanooga, where it remained until the latter part of June, 1865, when it was ordered home to be mustered out. On July 3, 1865, the men of this organization received their final payment at Chicago and were disbanded.

BATTERY "B," 1ST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Company "B" 1st Illinois Light Artillery was enrolled on the 23d day of April, 1861, and on the 3d of May elected its officers and became known as "Taylor's Battery" Company "B" Chicago Light Artillery. On the 16th day of May it entered the state service under the 30-day bill, and left Chicago June 3d for Cairo, Illinois. Was mustered into the service of the United States July 16th for "The War."

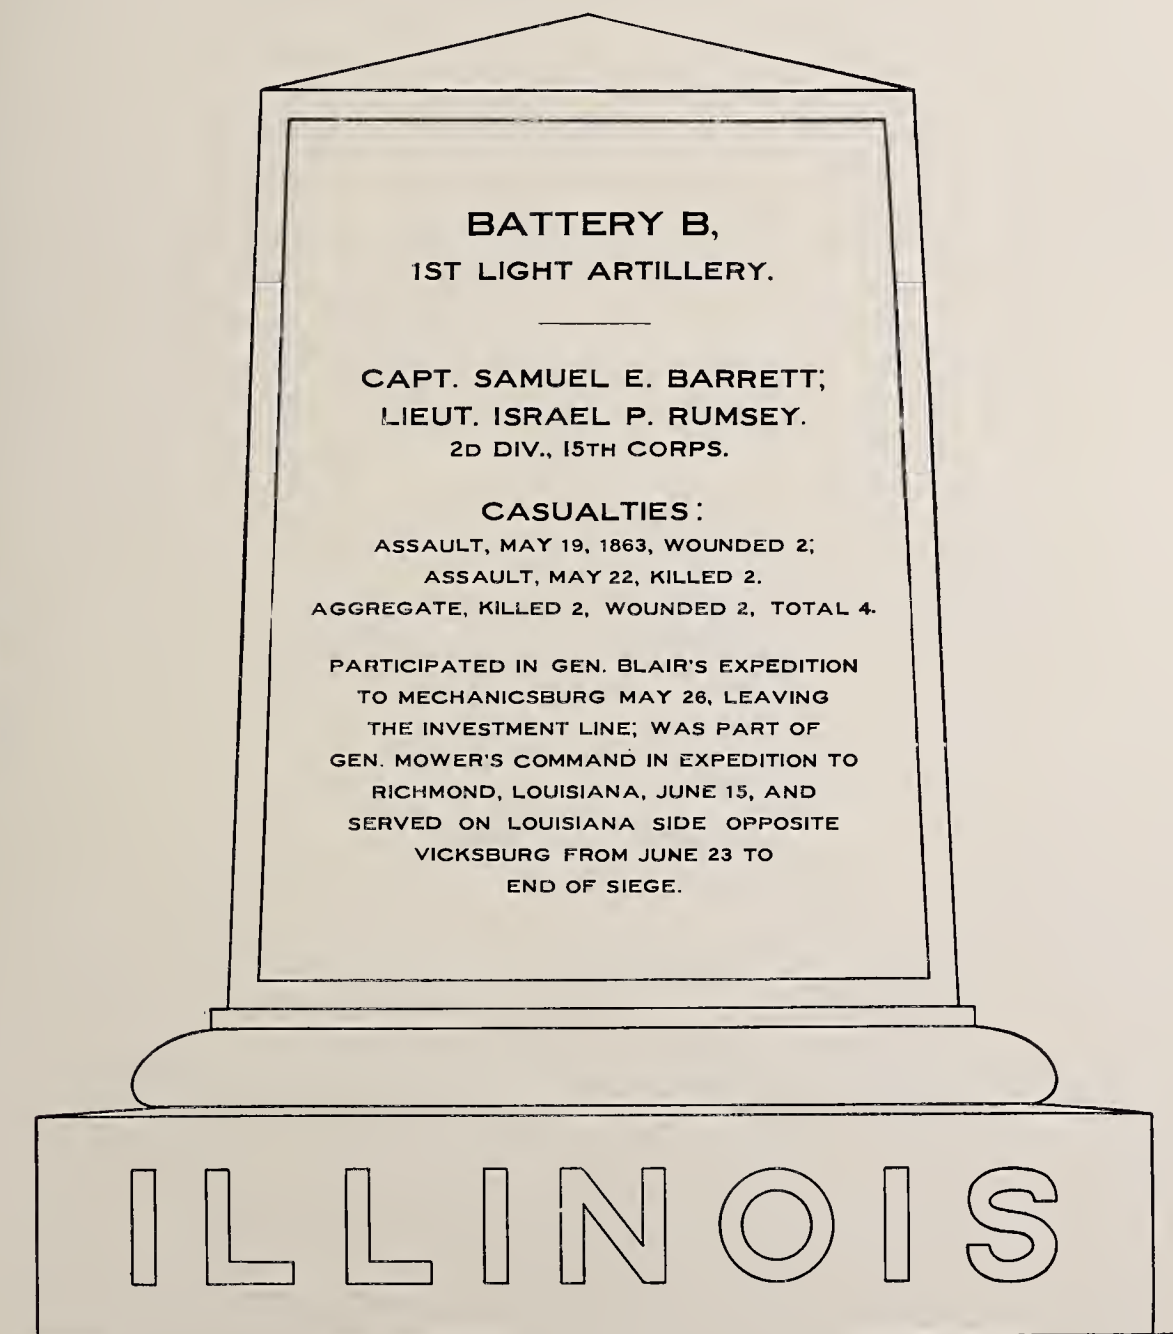

One section took part in the battle of Fredericktown, Missouri, on October 21st, 1861. On the 7th day of November it was engaged in the battle of Belmont, Missouri, being the only battery on the Union side, going into action with six guns and coming out with eight, two of which were Confederate guns.

It was next engaged in the battle of Fort Donelson, February 13, 14 and 15, 1862, and served its guns almost constantly for three days.

From here it crossed over to and up, the Tennessee River, to Pittsburg Landing and took a very active and important part in the battle of Shiloh on April 6 and 7, 1862. It was in the siege of Corinth and afterwards served along the line of railroad between Corinth, Memphis and Holly Springs with General Sherman's troops and reached Memphis July 22, 1862.

It formed part of the army that moved to Oxford, Mississippi, in General Grant's Northern Mississippi Campaign and returned to Memphis in time to embark with Sherman's army in the first attack on Vicksburg, Mississippi, known as the battle of Chickasaw Bayou. The battery then took an active part in the short campaign that resulted in the capture of Arkansas Post, with five thousand prisoners.

The winter was spent at Young's Point, Louisiana, where the battery remained until April 29, 1863, when it took part in the feint on Haines' Bluff, and joined Grant's main army in time to take part in the battle of Champion's Hill.

It reached the defenses of Vicksburg, on the Graveyard Road, on the afternoon of May 18, 1863, and opened the siege by firing the first Artillery shot. It took part in the assaults of May 19 and 22, and on May 25th it was taken from the investment line and marched with 6 brigades under General Blair to Mechanicsburg. On its return, after one day's rest, it again visited Mechanicsburg, with General Mower's brigade proceeding by boat to Satartia and thence across country. On the 9th of June it was ordered to Milliken's Bend and on the 15th fought in the battle of Richmond, Louisiana. Then it returned to Young's Point; one section being stationed at De Soto Point, directly opposite Vicksburg, to prevent the Confederates from evacuating by that route.

Some time after the siege and surrender of Vicksburg the battery moved to Memphis and thence to Chattanooga, Tennessee. It participated in the battle of Mission Ridge and in the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville, and finally wintered at Larkinsville, Alabama. Early in May, 1864, it formed part of General Sherman's column in his Atlanta Campaign, and was engaged at Resaca, Dallas and Kenesaw Mountain and participated in many minor engagements.

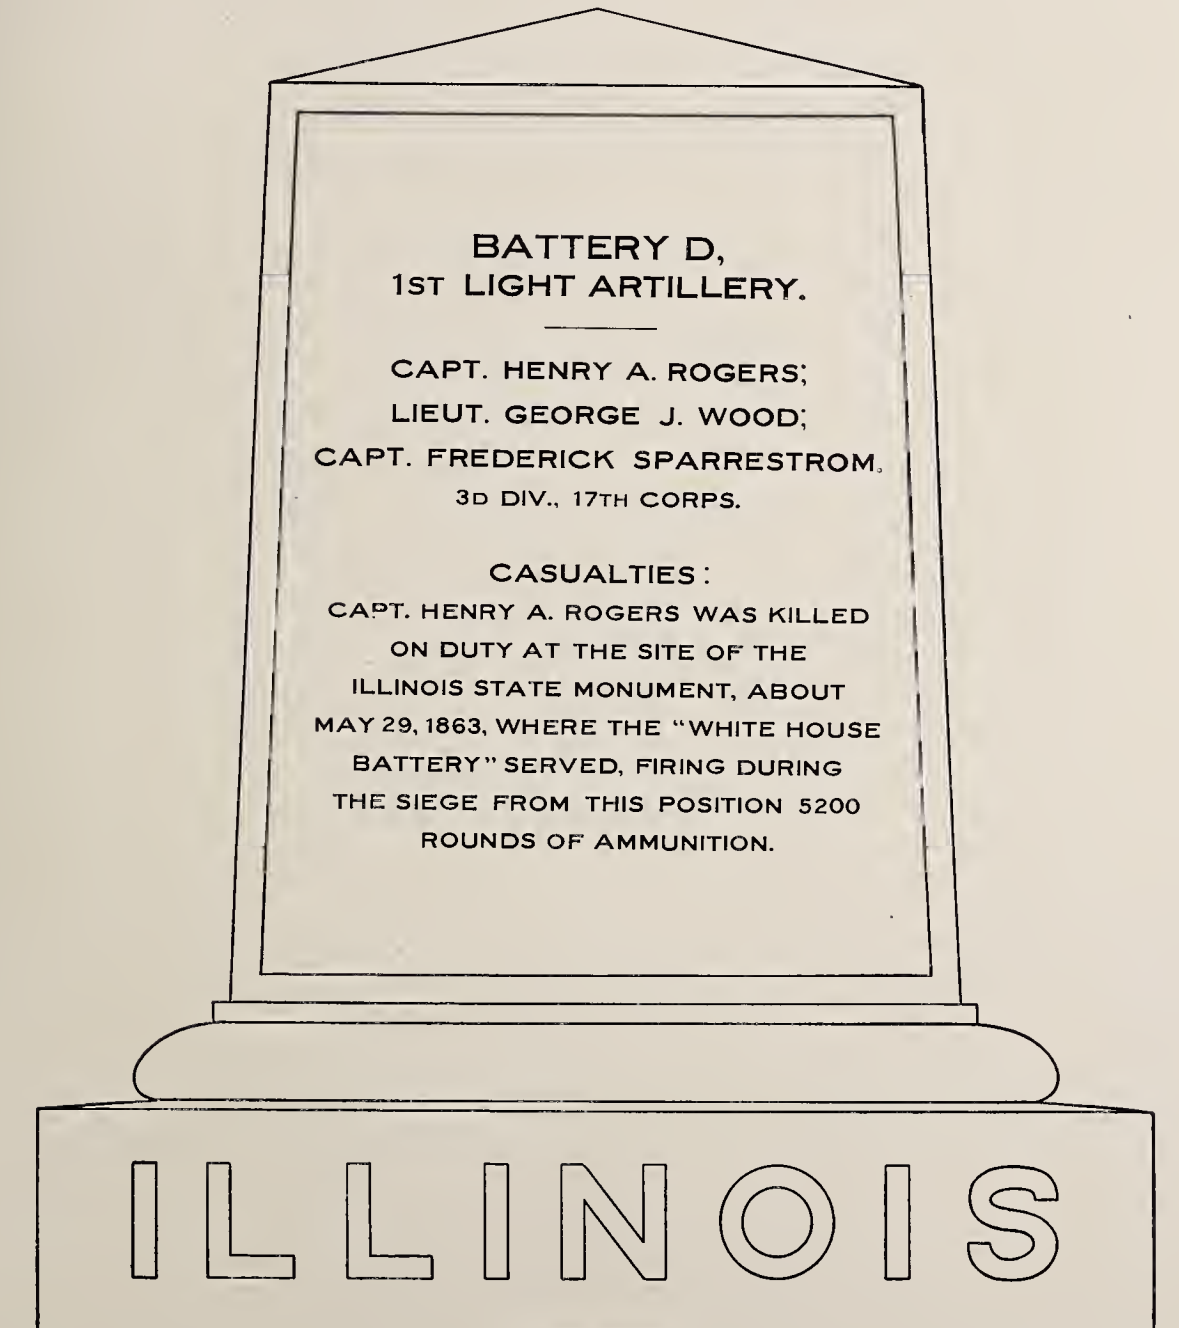

On the 12th of July those members of the battery whose time was about to expire were ordered to Springfield, Illinois, and were mustered out on July 24, 1864, having faithfully served their country for three years and three months. The other members were consolidated with, and became part of, Battery "A" 1st Illinois Light Artillery, and later, Bridges Independent Battery, which again became Company "B" 1st Illinois Light Artillery.

BATTERY D, FIRST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was organized and mustered into the United States service at Cairo, Illinois, on July 30, 1861. It was sent to Fort Holt, Kentucky, on September 18th and on February 3d moved to Fort Henry, Tennessee, with three iron howitzers. It then proceeded to Fort Donelson, where it participated in the siege and capture, having two of its guns disabled. On March 6th it moved to Paducah, Kentucky, and on the 14th up the Tennessee River to Savannah and thence to the battle of Shiloh on April 6th and 7th, in which it handled 4 24-pound bronze howitzers.

On June 6th, it moved to Bethel, Tennessee, and on the 18th to Bolivar. Early in November it joined Grant's army during the Northern Mississippi campaign, going as far south as the Yocona River and after the surrender at Holly Springs it returned to the Tallahatchie River, where it remained for some time.

It later moved into Memphis and then participated in the movements of General Logan's division in the Vicksburg campaign, crossing the river to Bruinsburg on May 1, 1863, then participating in the battles of Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson and Champion's Hill. It reached the line of defenses of Vicksburg on May 19 and participated in the assault on May 22d and in all the siege operations until July 4th.

After the explosion of the mine under the 3d Louisiana redan on June 25th, a detachment of this battery entered the crater and, using its ammunition, lighted the fuses of the shells by hand and then threw them over the parapet. In this hazardous duty several of its men were killed.

The battery remained in Vicksburg till some time in April, 1864, when it was ordered with the division to which it was attached to join General Sherman's army in Georgia. It participated in the Atlanta campaign, being in action at Big Shanty, Chattahoochie River and the battle of Atlanta on July 22d, where it occupied a position on Leggett's Hill.

After the surrender of Atlanta, the battery was ordered to Nashville, Tennessee, and placed in the fortifications as reserve. Here it remained until ordered to be mustered out. It proceeded to Chicago, Illinois, where on July 28, 1865, it received its final discharge and was disbanded.

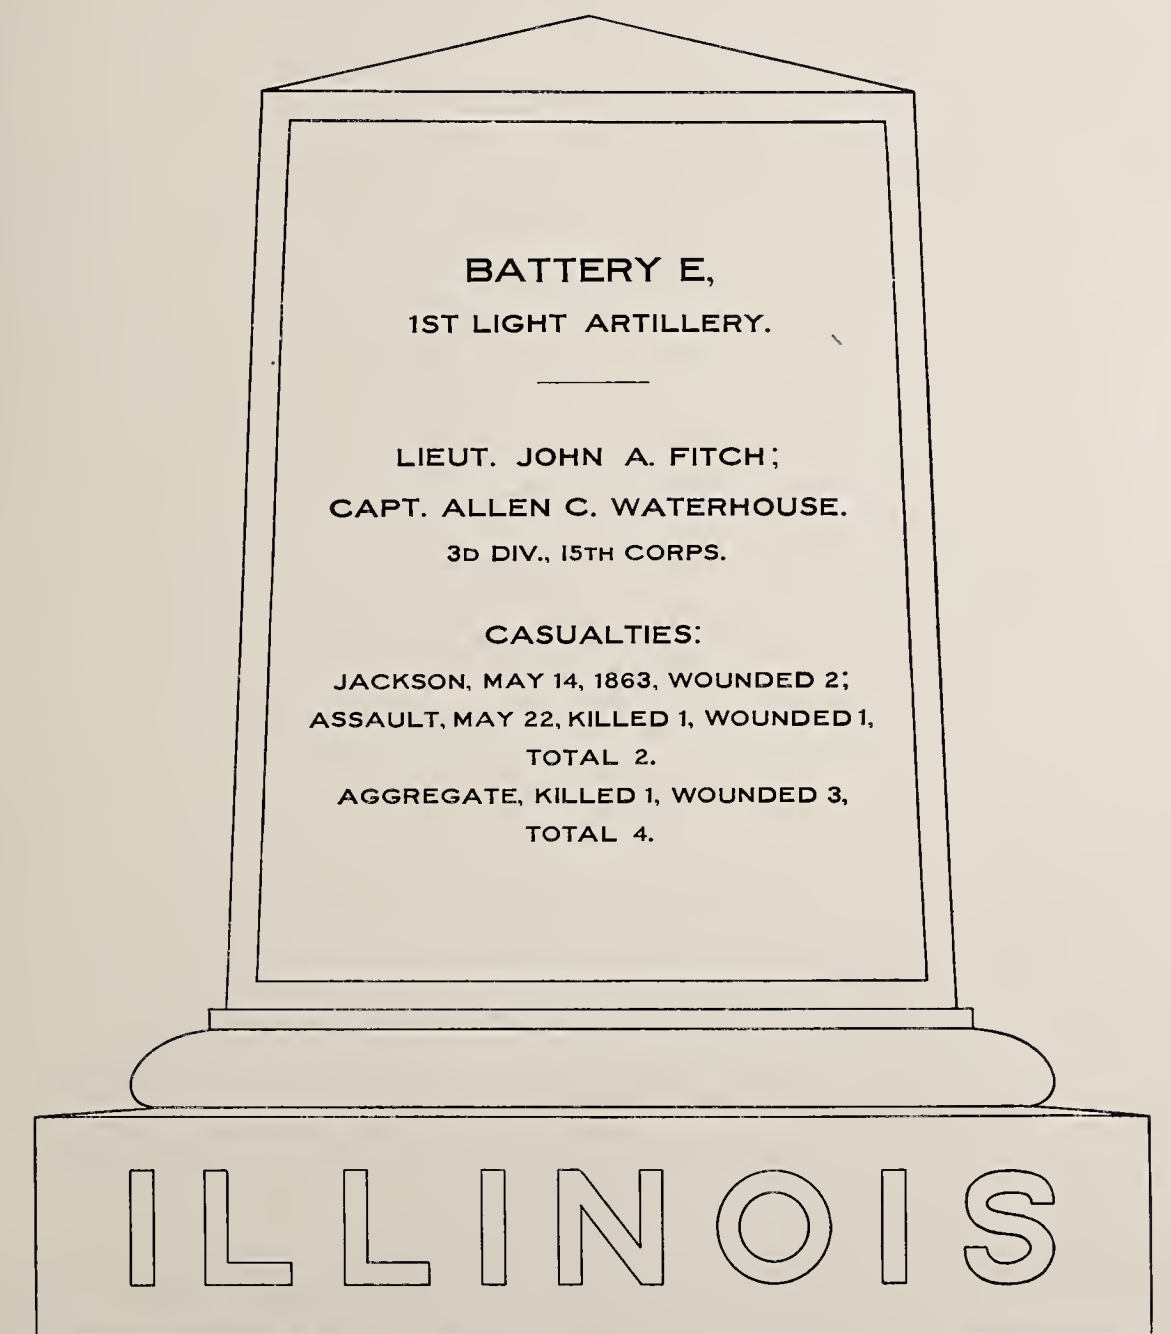

Note: The inscription on the battery monument placed by the State of Illinois in the National Military Park at Vicksburg credits this battery as having lost only its Captain during the siege. As a matter of fact, it also lost four of the men killed who served with the battery at that time, but as their deaths had not been officially reported in proper form and made a record of in the published Rebellion Record of the War Department, this Department ruled that only such casualties could be officially noted in monumental inscriptions as had been properly accounted for in official reports.

BATTERY E, FIRST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was organized, recruited and mustered into the United States service at Chicago, December 19, 1861. On February 13, 1862, it moved to Cairo, where it received its equipment. On March 27th it proceeded by steamer to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, and on April 6th and 7th participated in the battle of Shiloh.

It next took part in the movements on Corinth, until its evacuation May 29th, and then marched along the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, skirmishing on the way till it reached Memphis. On November 22d it joined General Sherman's column to Oxford, Mississippi, during Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign, and after the fall of Holly Springs, moved to Corinth, Mississippi, and thence to White's Station on January 31, 1863. It again reached Memphis, on the 14th of March, and moved down the river to Duekport, Louisiana, where it rejoined General Sherman's corps. It moved from here on May 2d in the final Vicksburg campaign and crossed the river at Grand Gulf, Mississippi, on the 7th and was engaged in the battle of Jackson on May 14th.

From there it moved by way of Bridgeport to the defensive line of Vicksburg, which it reached near the Graveyard Road on the afternoon of the 18th. It participated in the assaults of May 19th and 22d and in all the siege operations until the surrender on July 4th.

The next day it took up its march for the second siege and battle of Jackson and participated in this, until Johnston's evacuation, on the 16th. On the 23d of July it went into camp on Bear Creek, some distance to the rear of Vicksburg, from which place it joined in expeditions to Mechanicsburg and Canton.

On November 5th it moved into Vicksburg and thence to Memphis. From here it proceeded to LaGrange, Tennessee, to Corinth, Mississippi, and back to LaGrange and Memphis, participating in an encounter at Wyatt, Tennessee, on the 10th of February, 1864. In April it went on an expedition to Bolivar, Tennessee, and Ripley, Mississippi, in pursuit of General Forrest.

On June 1st it marched to Guntown, Mississippi, and participated in the disastrous battle fought near this place and returned to Memphis greatly demoralized. On June 21st it again moved to LaGrange and thence marched to Tupelo, on July 5, and was engaged in the action at Pontotoc, July 12th and on July 14th, fought Forrest at Tupelo. It then returned on July 15th to Memphis. On September 3, 1864, it proceeded to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, marched thence through Arkansas swamps to Cape Girardeau, Missouri, where it took steamer for Jefferson City, Missouri, and from there pursued General Price and then returned to St. Louis, where the battery arrived on November 14, 1864.

Here it refitted and then took steamer for Nashville, Tennessee, where it formed part of General Thomas' army during the siege and defense.

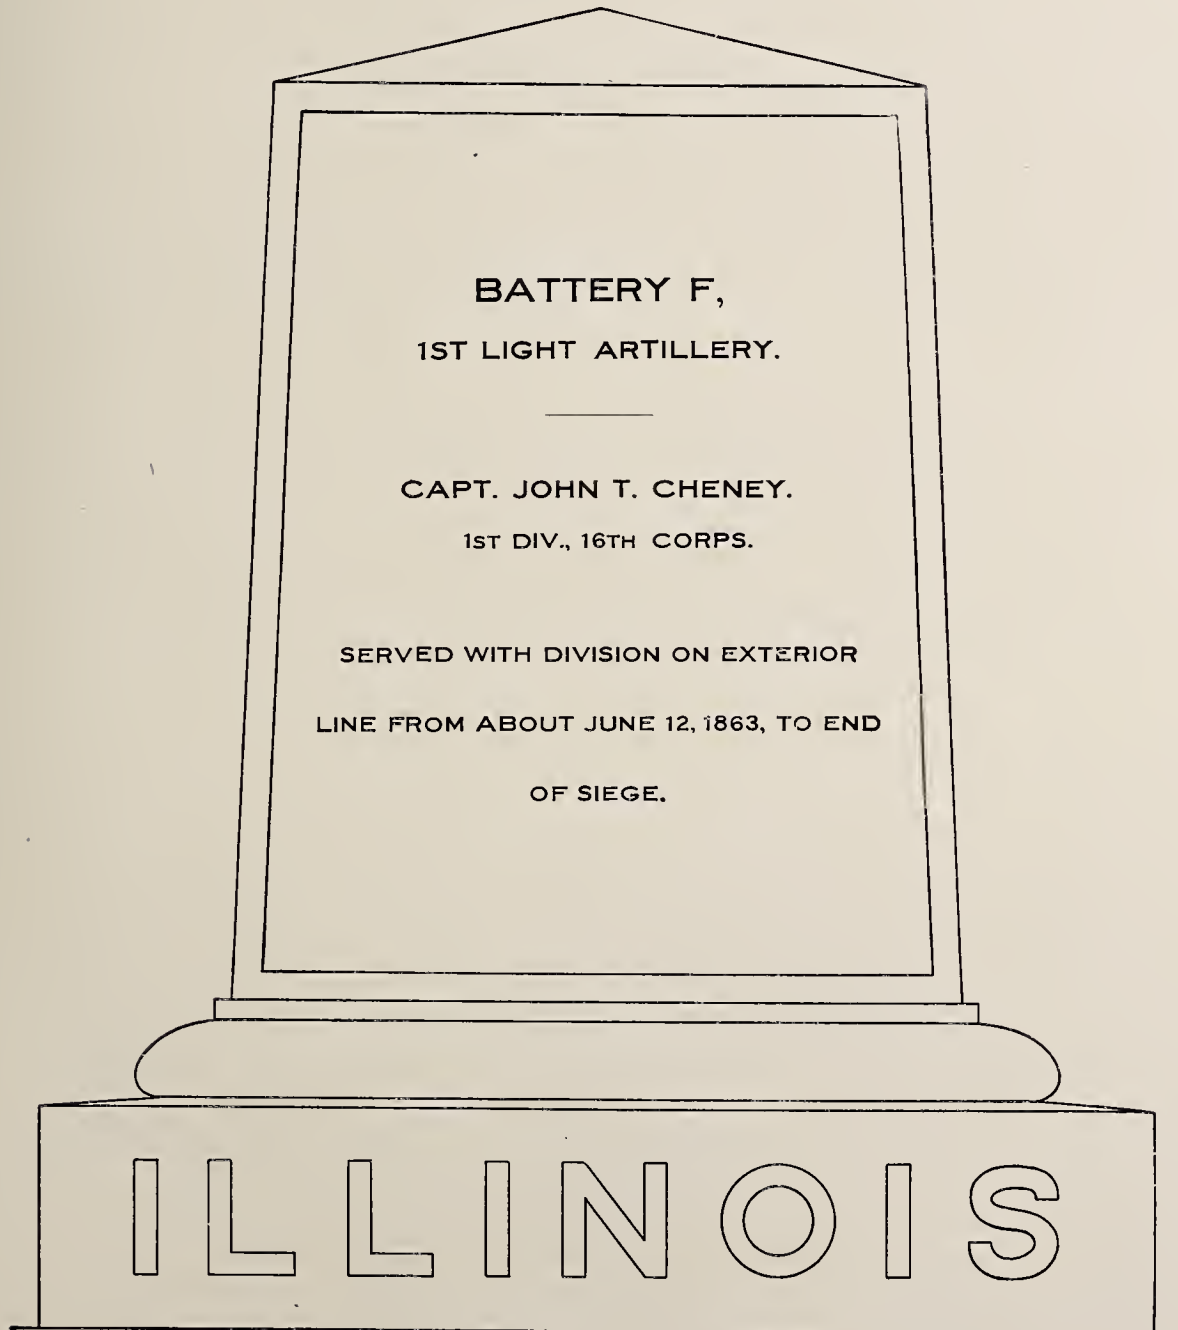

The time of the enlistment of the original men having expired, they were mustered out of service on December 24, 1864, at Louisville, Kentucky. The remaining men and men similarly situated from other batteries, consolidated with it and Battery E remained in service till June, 1865, and was then mustered out at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and sent to Chicago for final disbandment, July 15, 1865.

BATTERY F, FIRST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was recruited at Dixon, and was mustered into the United States service at Springfield on February 25, 1862.

It proceeded to Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, Missouri, on March 15th. April 1st it moved by steamer to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, which it reached on the 9th. From here it moved forward with the troops that had participated in the battle of Shiloh, toward Corinth, Mississippi, and took part in the siege of that place. Early in June it started on a march toward Memphis, where it arrived on the 18th. Here it remained until November 26th, when it moved with General Sherman's forces to join General Grant near Oxford, Mississippi, in the Northern Mississippi campaign. It moved as far south as the Yocona River and, after the Holly Springs disaster, marched north to the Tallahatchie River and then to Davis' Mills, where it served as an outpost of the main army, which went into winter quarters in the vicinity of Grand Junction, Tennessee.

It then served in northern Mississippi and along the line of the Memphis & Charleston and the Mobile & Ohio railroads, until early in June, when it moved to Memphis and thence to the vicinity of Vicksburg. During the siege it took position on the exterior line, extending from the Yazoo to the Big Black River, which faced the army of relief under General Joseph E. Johnston.

After the surrender of Vicksburg it marched with Sherman's army on July 5th and participated in the second siege and capture of Jackson, after which it returned to the vicinity of Vicksburg and remained there until the last of September. It then changed station to Memphis, which it reached October 4, 1863. From there it marched on the 11th by way of Iuka, Mississippi, Florence, Alabama, Winchester and Decherd, Tennessee, and by way of the Cumberland Mountains to Bridgeport, Alabama. Here it crossed the Tennessee River, then marched over Sand Mountain and was in time to participate in the battle of Mission Ridge. It then took part in the relief of Burnside at Knoxville and returned to Scottsboro, Alabama, where it went into winter quarters.

On May 1, 1864, the battery entered the Atlanta campaign, marching through Chattanooga and Crawfish Springs. Was engaged at Snake Creek Gap and participated in the battle of Resaca, Georgia. It followed Johnston's retreating forces, crossing the Oostenaula River and encountered him behind intrenchments at Cassville, Georgia, which he evacuated and again to Dallas, Georgia, which it reached on the 26th of May. From that time to June 2d the battery was almost constantly under fire until the evacuation of Dallas. From that time until July 2d it was constantly on the move and frequently under fire. It was at Kenesaw Mountain and at the Chattahoochie River. On the 13th of July it moved through Marietta, crossed the Chattahoochie at Roswell and then moved through Decatur, Georgia, assisting in the destruction of the railroad, reaching the advanced pickets and skirmish line defending Atlanta, on the 20th of July. One section of the battery was sent to the front to develop the Confederate position, but was compelled to seek cover in haste. The morning of the 21st found the battery established behind earthworks, but notwithstanding, it suffered a severe loss. The next day it was discovered that the Confederates under Hood, who had succeeded Johnston, had withdrawn their advanced line and their position was taken possession of. Several movements of flank attacks on the part of the Confederates took place while the battery was in this new position, which caused frequent changes of its location. It was finally so hard pressed that it was forced to withdraw its guns and compelled to abandon its caissons, which were captured, not, however, without the postillions escaping.

Prior to the 22d of July First Lieutenant Samuel Smythe and Second Lieutenant Theodore W. Raub had been detached to command Battery A of the First Artillery and during the hard struggle of the 22d one of these was killed and the other captured. Many non-commissioned officers, cannoniers and postillions were killed or wounded. On the 27th the Battery was ordered to change its position, but was again engaged on the 28th immediately in front of Atlanta. A few days after, the Battery was in position, properly protected by earthworks, within twenty-six yards of the Confederate works. Here it remained during the siege operations until August 26th, when it was ordered to move down the Sand-town Road, and on the 28th it struck the Atlanta & Macon Railroad and thence moved toward Jonesboro, in front of which it was engaged on the 31st.

It remained here until September 8th, when it went into camp at East Point, just out of Atlanta, after that city had fallen.

At Jonesboro the caissons lost before Atlanta, on July 22d, were re-captured, but the battery was woefully deficient in horses and being rendered almost unserviceable, due to this deficiency, it was ordered to proceed to Nashville, Tennessee, to refit. While here it occupied one of the forts during the battle of Nashville.

Early in March, 1865, the term of enlistment of the original members of the battery having expired, it was ordered to proceed to Springfield, Illinois, where on March 15, 1865, it was mustered out. The men received honorable discharges and the battery as such ceased to exist. Those members of it who had enlisted after the original organization and whose terms of service had not expired were transferred to other batteries of its regiment.

BATTERY H, FIRST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

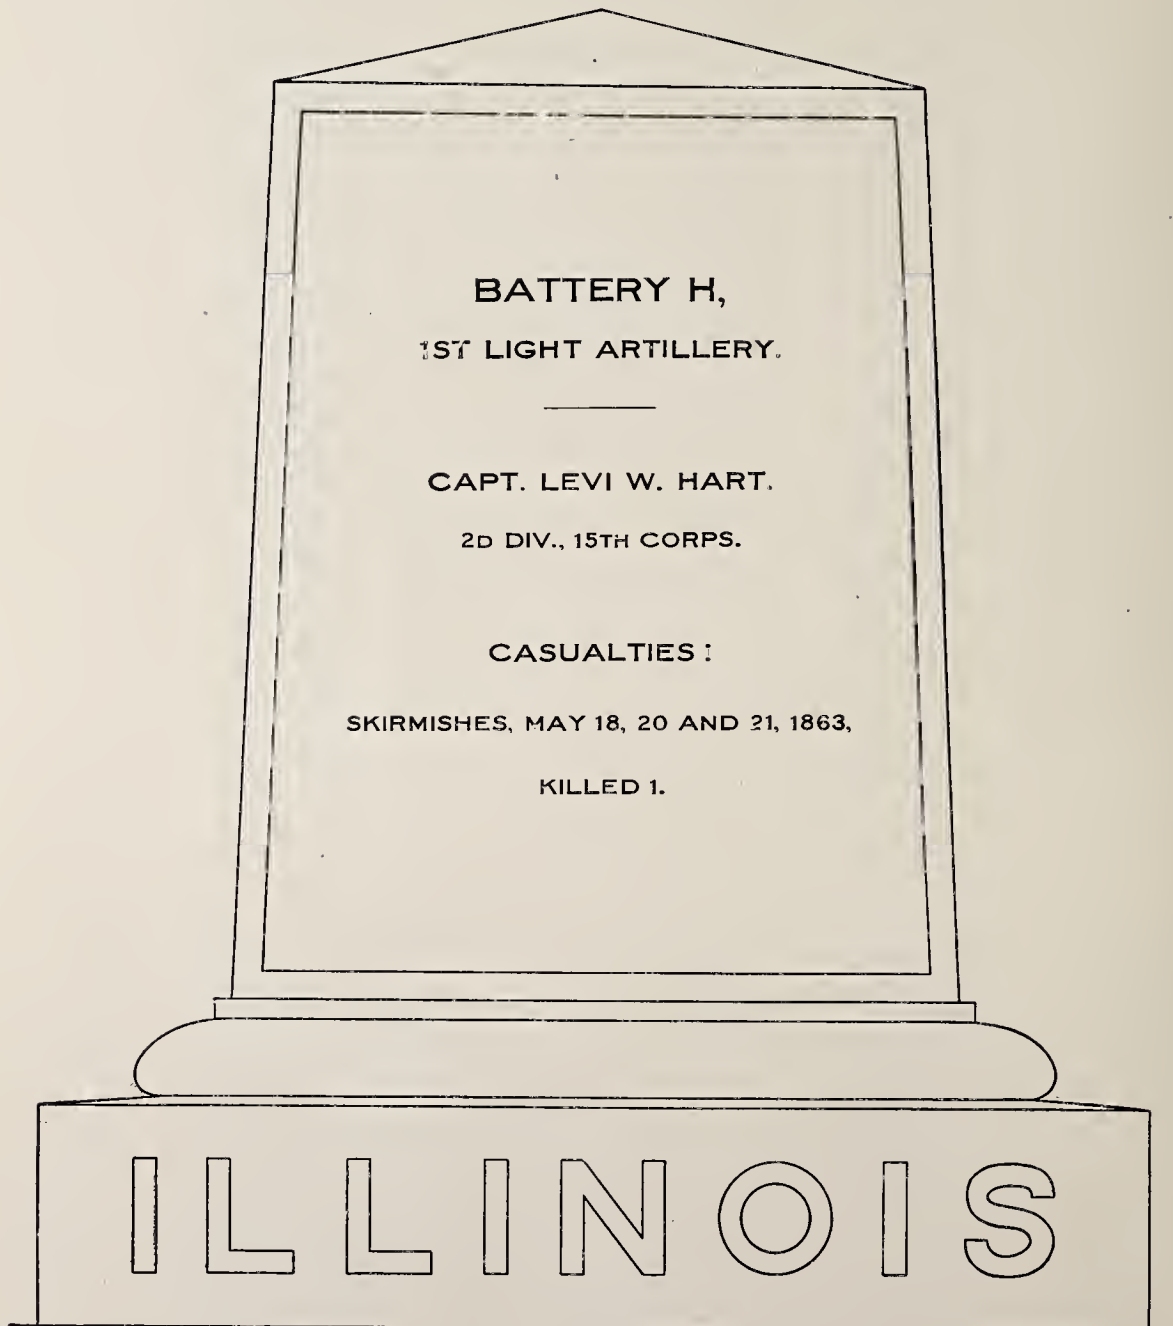

This battery was recruited and mustered into the United States service February 28, 1862 under Captain Axel Silversparre. In March it moved to St. Louis, where it was equipped as a four-gun battery with twenty-pounder Parrots.

It was at once sent to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, where it arrived on April 5th and the next day participated in the battle of Shiloh, being there formed in the center of the artillery which confronted the last efforts of the Confederates on the first day's battle.

It participated in the operations around Corinth, Mississippi, and after the evacuation, marched to Memphis. From here it moved in December with Sherman's column that joined General Grant near Oxford in his Northern Mississippi campaign. It returned to Memphis after the Holly Springs disaster and later moved down the Mississippi River as part of General Sherman's command, where early in 1863, it held a position near the entrance of the canal and was several times engaged in thwarting attempts of Confederate steamers to reach Vicksburg from below. It also participated in the various movements of Grant's army to find a route by which transports could be sent below Vicksburg. During the Vicksburg campaign it crossed the river at Grand Gulf on the 7th of May, 1863, and participated in the battle of Jackson on May 14th. On the evening of May 18th it reached the line of defenses at Vicksburg, on the Graveyard road and was on the left of Sherman's position supporting his infantry during the assaults of May 19th and 22d. Afterwards one section under Lieutenant DeGress moved to the extreme north-east angle in General Steele's front where it remained in service during the siege, while the left section held the position first taken and fought the guns of the famous stockade redan and participated in all the siege operations until July 4th.

The day after the surrender of Vicksburg, it moved back to Jackson, Mississippi, and participated in General Sherman's second attack and capture of that city. It then returned to Vicksburg and later to Memphis. From here it marched to Chattanooga and took part in the battle of Mission Ridge in November, 1863. It next participated in the Atlanta campaign and then in the "march to the sea," under Captain Frank DeGress. In the battle before Atlanta on July 22d, its guns had been captured, but they were soon retaken and used with severe effect upon the retreating captors. It took part in the campaign of the Carolinas and was engaged in the battle of Bentonville. After the surrender of General Joseph E. Johnston's army it marched north through Virginia to Washington, where it formed part of the Grand Review on May 24, 1865. This battery ceased to exist on June 14th when it was mustered out of the service and disbanded.

BATTERY I, FIRST ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This organization, known as Bouton's Battery, was organized at Camp Douglas, Chicago, in December, 1861, and January, 1862, the men coming from Chicago and the near vicinity. It was mustered into the United States service on February 10, 1862.

On March 1st it proceeded to Benton Barracks, Missouri, where it received its equipment, and on April 1st, moved by steamer to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, where it arrived on the 4th. On the 6th and 7th it was engaged in the battle of Shiloh. It next participated in the operations around Corinth, Mississippi, and after the evacuation of that place one section of the battery was ordered to LaGrange, one to Moscow and one to Lafayette, Tennessee, as guards along the Memphis & Charleston Railroad. It served in this detached way during the summer and was then again re-united and ordered to Memphis. From here it participated in a number of expeditions into Arkansas and Mississippi.

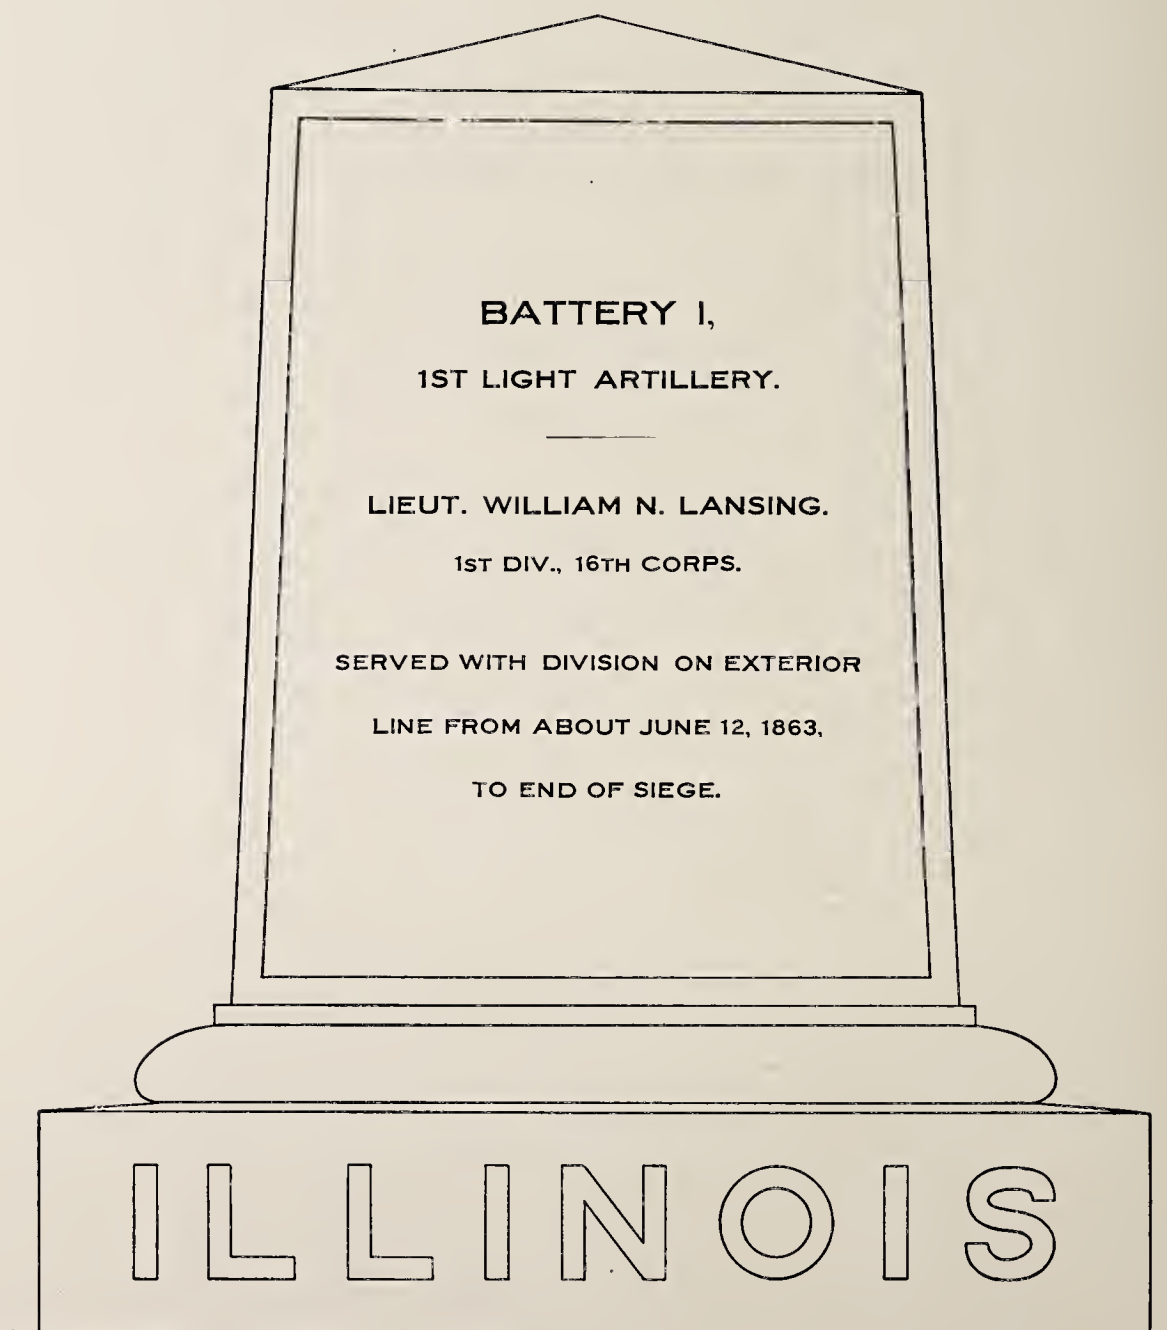

On November 28th it moved with General Sherman to join in Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign, reaching Oxford early in December. After the surrender of Holly Springs it moved to LaGrange, Tennessee, then to Holly Springs, Mississippi, and later to Moscow, Tennessee, where it remained until June 6, 1863.

It then marched to Memphis and embarked for Vicksburg, landed at Snyder's Bluff, on the Yazoo River on June 11th, and went into position along the exterior line extending from the Yazoo to the Big Black River. It served in this line opposing General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army until the surrender of Vicksburg, on July 4th. The next day it moved with General Sherman's army to Jackson and participated in the siege and second capture of this city, which took place on the 16th of July.

It then returned to the Big Black River. In the autumn of 1863, it moved to Vicksburg and from there to Memphis and then marched by way of Corinth to Chattanooga. On this march it encountered General Chalmers at Colliersville and assisted in his defeat. Having reached Chattanooga it took part in the battle of Mission Ridge on November 24th and 25th. From there it marched to Ringgold, Georgia, in pursuit of the fleeing Confederates and later returned to Chattanooga and then moved to Bridgeport and Scottsboro, Alabama. While stationed at the latter place, most of the men of the battery re-enlisted as veterans.

It moved to Nashville, Tennessee, on March 17th, turned over its equipment and then went on a furlough to Chicago after the expiration of which, it re-assembled and moved to Nashville where it was re-equipped and participated in the battle of Nashville on the 15th of December, 1864. During this last service, it served in the siege line with heavy guns. After this it was mounted, equipped as horse artillery and attached to General Hatch's Cavalry Division. It joined in the pursuit of General Hood's army, being engaged almost daily until December 24th when it reached Florence, Alabama, and went into camp. From there it moved by way of Gravelly Springs to Eastport, Mississippi, and from there to Iuka where it remained until ordered mustered out.

It moved to Chicago for muster-out and final payment and was disbanded on July 26, 1865.

BATTERY "A," 2D ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Battery "A," Second Illinois Light Artillery, was organized at Peoria, Illinois, by Peter Davidson, the enlistments beginning on the 19th day of April, 1861; being unable to get into the United States service under President Lincoln's first call for volunteers, it went into camp at Peoria, with the Seventeenth Illinois Infantry.

The Battery was mustered into the state service on the 23d of May, 1861, and remained in camp at Peoria until the 6th day of July, when it moved to Alton, Illinois.

Thence it proceeded to St. Charles, Missouri, and into northern Missouri, and back to St. Charles, and then to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, where, on the 17th of August, it was mustered into the United States service.

It moved from Jefferson Barracks to Jefferson City, Missouri, and joined Fremont's army. Went by boat to Booneville, and thence marched to Springfield, Missouri. It returned to vicinity of Georgetown, and later went into camp at Otterville, Missouri.

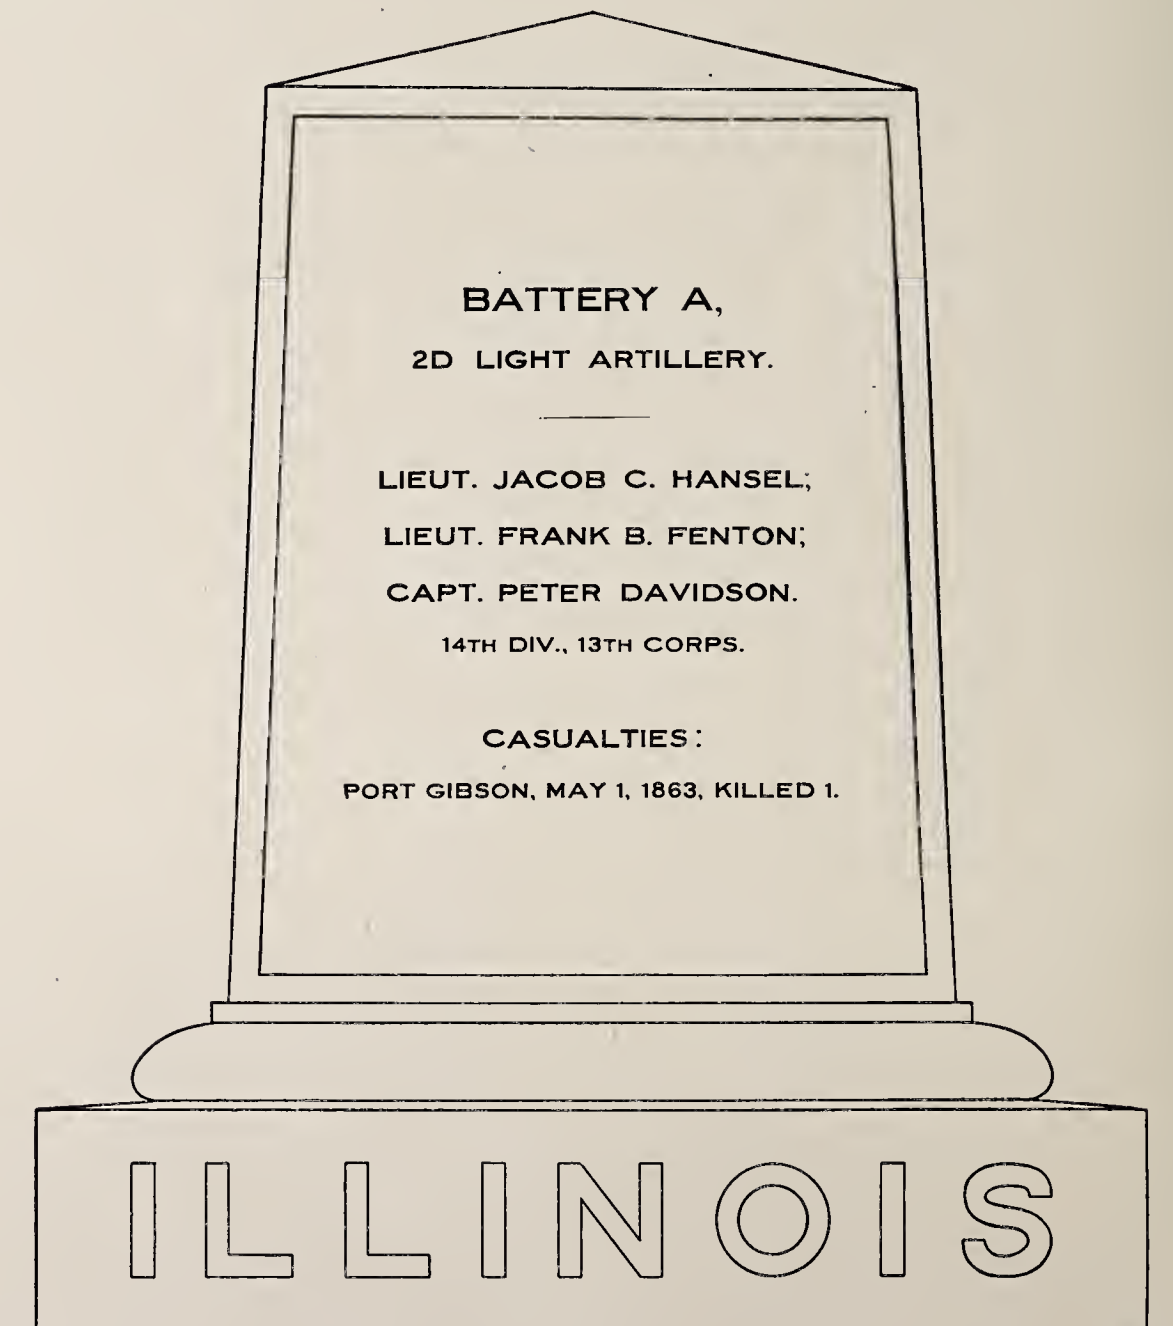

On January 25th it started with General Curtis' army to Springfield, Missouri. On the 6th, 7th and 8th of March, 1862, it was at the battle of Pea Ridge, in which it performed distinguished service.

After this battle it moved to Cassville, Missouri, where the First Section, under command of Lieutenant (afterward Captain) Borris, remained. The Second and Third Sections, under command of Captain Davidson, marched with General Curtis' army to Helena, Arkansas.

These latter sections participated in the expedition up White River to Duvall's Bluff and remained at Helena until the organization of the Vicksburg campaign. The Battery was then assigned to the Thirteenth Army Corps, commanded by Gen. John A. McClernand, and moved to Milliken's Bend, whence later, it marched down the west side of the river and crossed the Mississippi to Bruinsburg on the night of the 30th of April, 1863. It was engaged in the battles of Port Gibson, Champion's Hill and Big Black River bridge, and reached the investment line of Vicksburg May 19.

The guns of the Battery were in position immediately south of the railroad leading from Jackson, and were under fire from the 19th of May until the surrender on the 4th of July.

UNION AVENUE.

For names on Bronze Tablet, see Artillery, page 349.

After the surrender of Vicksburg, the Battery marched with General Sherman to Jackson, Mississippi, and participated in the engagement which resulted in Johnston's retreat and the second capture of Jackson.

It returned to Vicksburg, and in the early fall, proceeded by boat to New Orleans, where, a little later, it was joined by the First Section, which had remained in Missouri. This Section was on the move almost continuously from the spring of 1862, following the battle at Pea Ridge, until it went into camp at New Orleans with the rest of the Battery in the fall of 1863, participating in the engagements at Prairie Grove, Neosho and Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The Battery remained in quarters at New Orleans and vicinity until July 28, 1864, when it entered the movement against the forts at the entrance to Mobile Bay. Arrived at Dauphin Island on August 4th. Then crossed the bay and began the investment of Fort Morgan, which was besieged until its surrender on the 23d of August, 1864.

The Battery returned to New Orleans on September 9th, where it remained until February 2, 1865, when it moved to Brashear City (now called Morgan City), eighty miles west of New Orleans. Here it was stationed when orders were received, on July 10th, to proceed to Springfield, Illinois, for disbandment.

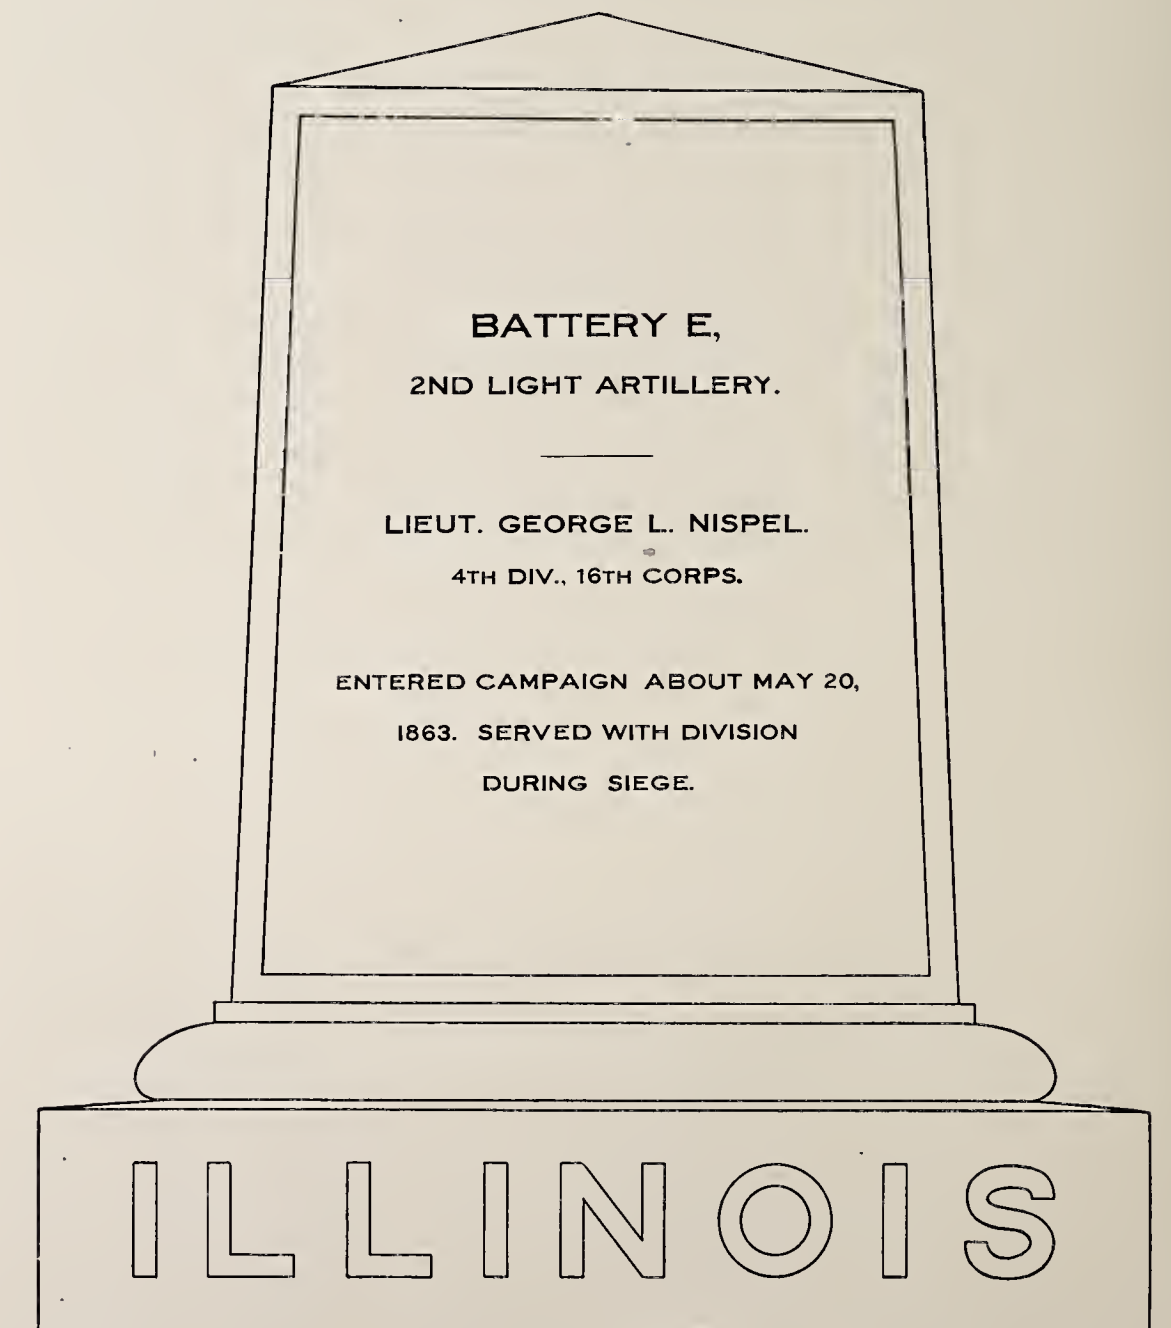

It arrived at Springfield on July 22d, and was mustered out of service on July 28, 1865.

BATTERY E, SECOND ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was organized at St. Louis, Missouri, and was mustered into the service at the United States arsenal there on August 20, 1861. One section moved to Liberty on September 6th and had an engagement there on the 17th. It then moved to Cairo on December 29, 1861, where it joined the battery that had proceeded to this place on September 14th. It next moved to Fort Holt and Jefferson, Kentucky, and then returned to Cairo. In November, a section of the battery participated in an expedition to Bloomfield, Missouri, and on January 9, 1862, to Columbus, Kentucky.

On February 1st, it moved to Fort Henry and on the 13th arrived at Fort Donelson. It was engaged in the battle there. It next moved to the Tennessee River and was engaged in the battle of Shiloh April 6th and 7th and then participated in the operations around Corinth and the siege. In June it marched to Purdy, Bethel and Jackson, Tennessee, and on July 28th, a section took part in an expedition to, and was engaged and captured at Britton's Lane on September 1st, with one officer and ten men. On November 3d the other section joined the Northern Mississippi campaign and moved as far south as the Yocona River. It retraced its steps northward on December 24th and reached Moscow, Tennessee, on January 12, 1863. It remained on duty here and in the vicinity of Memphis until the early part of May, when it was ordered down the Mississippi River to re-enforce Grant's army before Vicksburg.

It reached Young's Point about May 20th and the investing line of Vicksburg about May 25th. Here it remained throughout the siege, participating in its labors until July 4th, when Vicksburg surrendered. On the 5th it became part of General Sherman's army that moved to Jackson and participated in the siege, assault and capture of that place on the 16th. It then returned to camp near Vicksburg, Mississippi. The battery was later consolidated with Battery A of the Second Artillery and its history is continued in the history of that command.

BATTERY F, SECOND ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was organized at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, and mustered into the service of the United States December 11, 1861.

On March 14, 1862, it moved to Pittsburg Landing, with six 6-pounder guns and participated in the battle of Shiloh on April 6th. The battery was hotly engaged all day. It sustained a severe loss of officers and men, and also lost 2 guns and 27 horses in this action. It next participated in the operations around Corinth, including the siege, and on October 3d and 4th of the same year, one section of the battery was engaged in the battle at Corinth; another section was in the battle of the Hatchie.

In November it participated in the Northern Mississippi campaign, advancing as far as the Yocona river, and after the fall of Holly Springs it proceeded to Memphis, where it remained until the next spring, when it moved down the Mississippi river to participate in the campaign of Vicksburg.

It crossed the river at Grand Gulf and reached the defensive works of Vicksburg on the extreme left on the 19th of May, 1863. From there it moved in the rear of the investing line and took position near the right of the 17th corps. In this position it participated in the assault on May 22d and in all the siege operations until the surrender of July 4th.

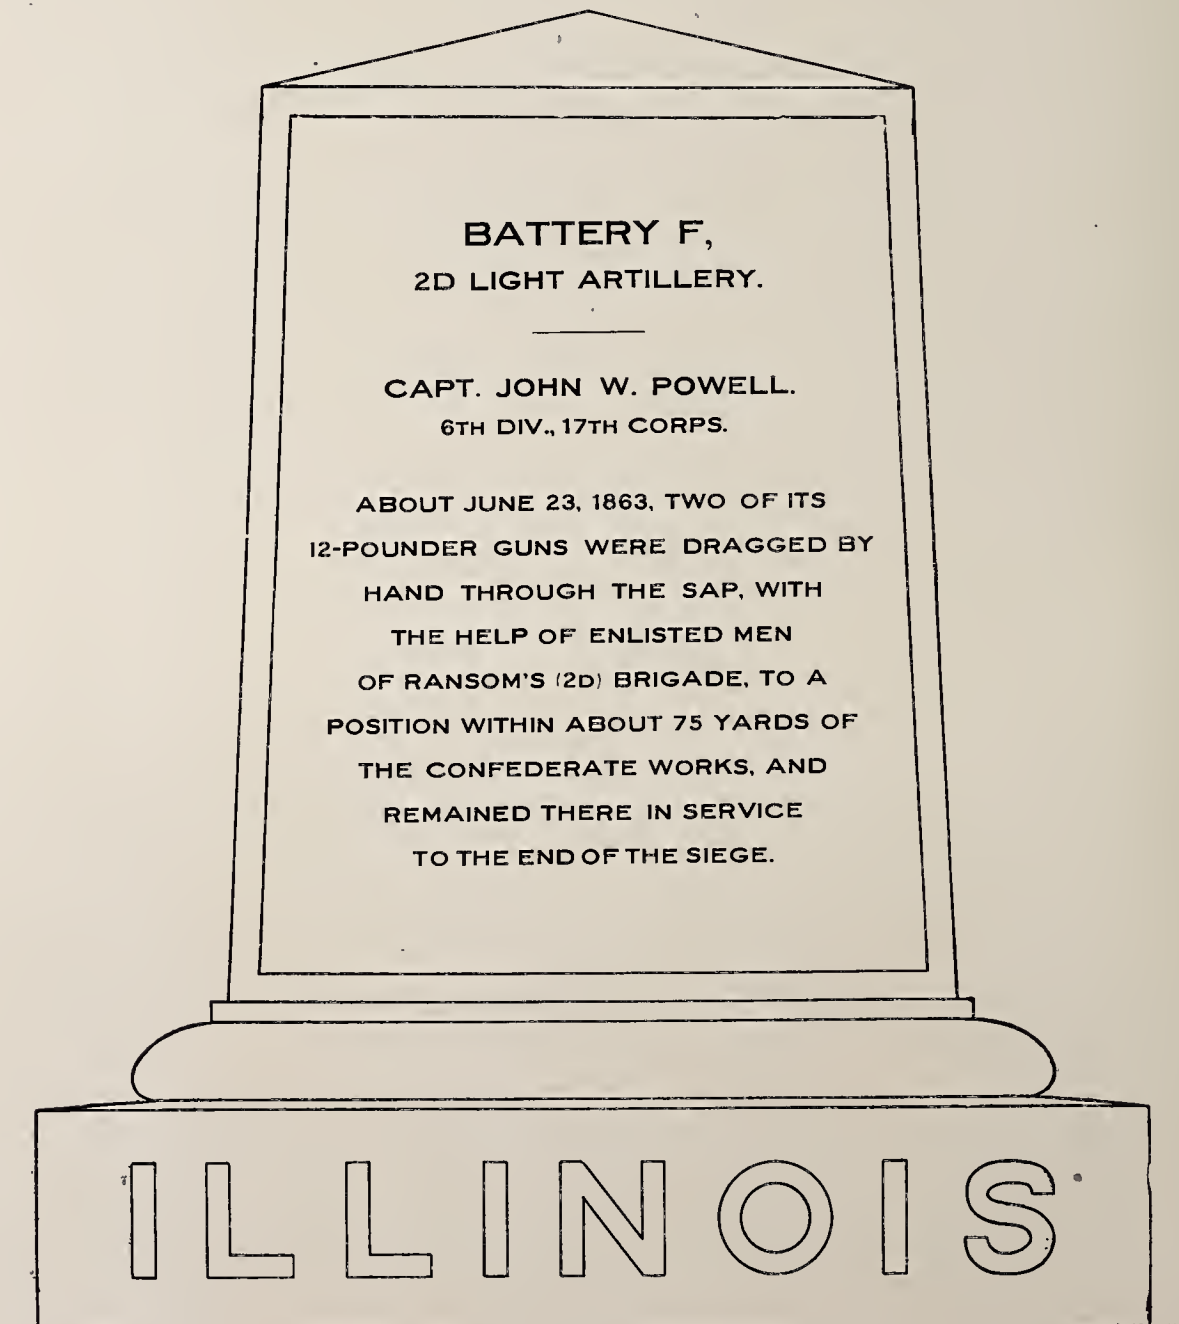

Two guns of this battery were placed in battery in a position about 70 yards from the enemy's works about June 20th, and there remained doing service until the surrender on July 4th. After the fall of Vicksburg it moved to Natchez.

From there it participated in several expeditions and then returned to Vicksburg and on February, 1864, it took part in the Meridian campaign. Having returned from this it proceeded by way of Cairo to Clifton, Tennessee, and from there marched to Allatoona. The battery was engaged in the battle of Kenesaw Mountain and in the battles before Atlanta. On July 22, 1864, it lost very heavily. It participated in the siege of Atlanta and the battle of Jonesboro. After the fall of Atlanta it returned to Nashville, Tennessee, and there was engaged in the defensive battle of December 15 and 16, 1864.

From this time it served in and about Nashville until it was mustered out on July 9, 1865. It was finally discharged and disbanded at Springfield, Illinois, on July 27, 1865.

BATTERY G, SECOND ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The Adjutant General's reports of Illinois unfortunately do not contain a full history of this battery. The Commission has compiled a history from the only data available, the Official Rebellion Records published by the War Department, which is as follows:

It appears from the muster rolls of the battery that it was mustered into the United States service on October 5, 1861, at Camp Butler, Ill. Its men were recruited mostly from Chicago, Sycamore, Belvidere, DeKalb, Joliet and Rockford.

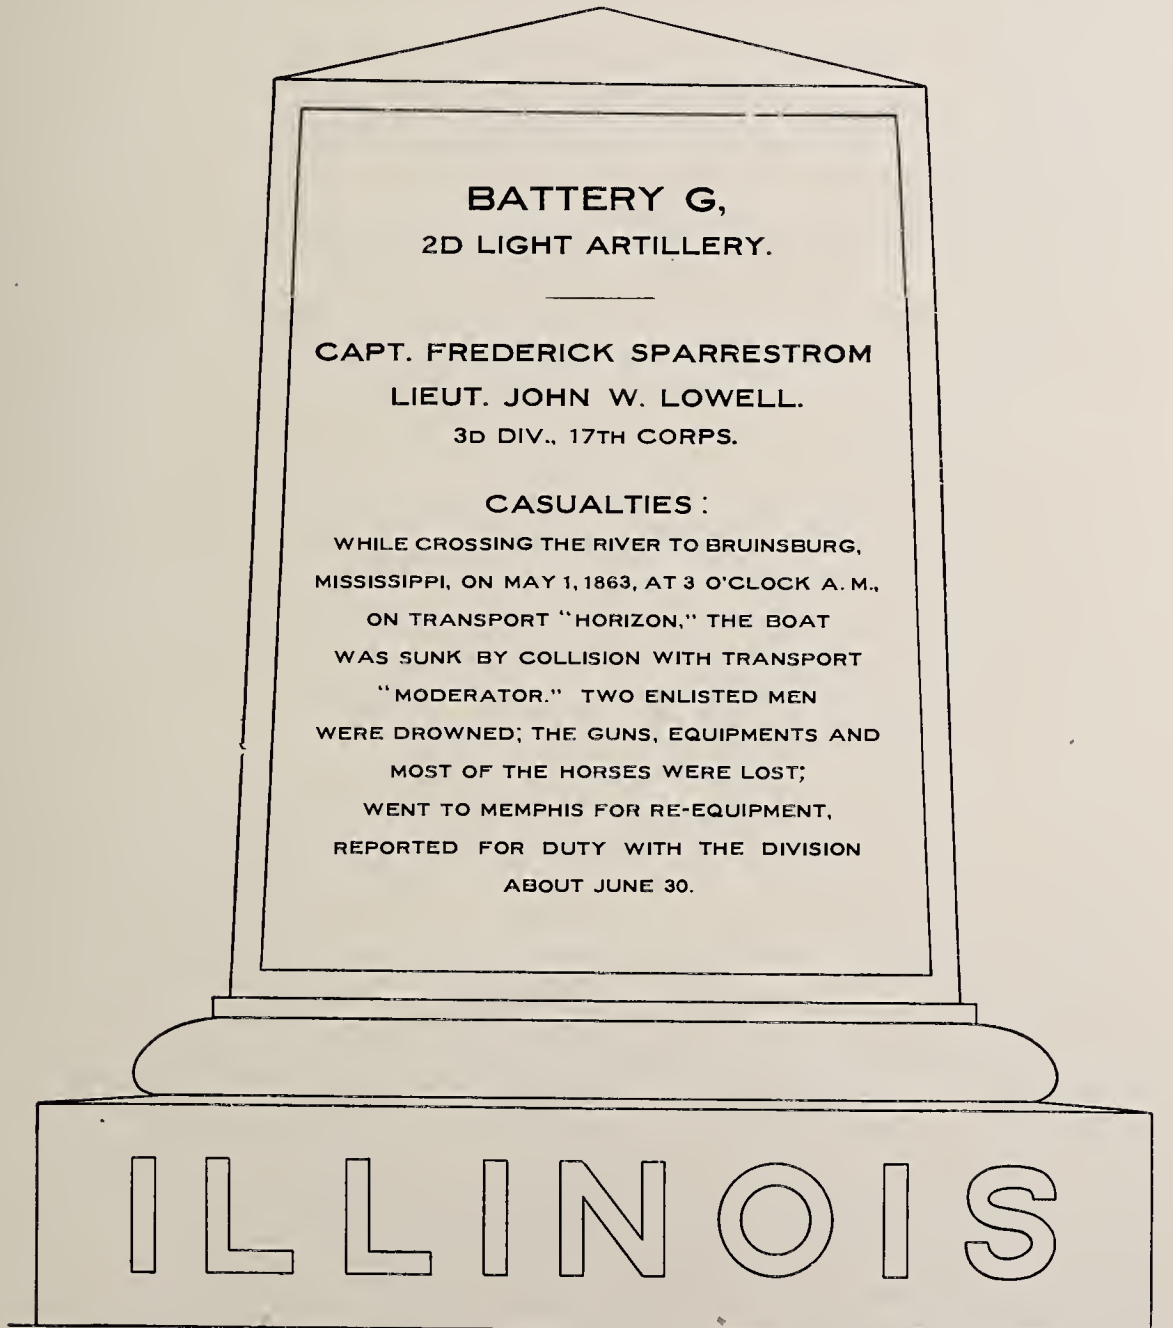

Early in December, 1861, the battery was ordered from Camp Butler to Cairo, Illinois, where it was assigned to General Pain's Division then in camp at Fort Holt, on the Kentucky shore opposite Cairo, Illinois, and was furnished with its equipment of two Napoleon and four Rodman guns. In the meantime the men were detailed to man the "Howitzers" used in the attack on Fort's Henry and Donelson.

From Fort Holt the battery proceeded to Columbus, Kentucky; it was among the first Federal troops to land in the vicinity in the campaign against Island No. 10. Toward the end of March, 1862, it took part in an expedition under General Buford to Hickman, Kentucky, and Union City, Tennessee. From there it went to Trenton, Tennessee, and until November of that year was actively engaged in the Corinth and Iuka campaign. From here it joined the Northern Mississippi campaign at LaGrange, Tennessee, in which it was attached to the cavalry column and designated as Flying Artillery. It proceeded with this column as far as Water Valley, Mississippi, and was the first battery to cross the Tallahatchie River in General Logan's command.

After the Holly Springs disaster, it returned to the line of the Memphis & Charleston railroad and from thence to Memphis, where it was stationed until the 1st of February, 1863. It then moved with General Logan's Division to Lake Providence, Louisiana, and in March participated in the movement of Logan's Division in the beginning of the final Vicksburg campaign. The battery was represented among the volunteers to run the blockade in front of Vicksburg.

At 3 a. m., May 1, 1863, while crossing the Mississippi River to Bruinsburg, Mississippi, the transport "Horizon" on which the battery was being carried to join its command en route to Vicksburg, collided with the steamer "Monitor," resulting in the sinking of the boat carrying the battery and the loss of its guns, horses and two men.

The command was then ordered to Memphis for re-equipment. It reported back to Vicksburg and took position in the investment line on the Jackson Road near Gen. Logan's headquarters on July 2d.

After the surrender it remained in the vicinity of Vicksburg, participating in a number of expeditions to Goodrich's Landing, Louisiana, Monroe, Louisiana, and Brownsville, Mississippi. It also took part in the Meridian campaign under General Sherman.

In October the battery moved to Memphis, Tennessee, and from there, December, 1863, to Union City, Tennessee, where it remained for several months, participating in the campaign against General Forrest's command.

Early in the spring of 1864, it proceeded to Columbus, Kentucky, where the battery was reorganized by additional recruits and "veteranized." Thence it returned to Memphis and participated in the expedition to Tupelo, Mississippi, under General A. J. Smith. In July it returned to LaGrange, Tennessee, when it took part in an expedition to Holly Springs, Mississippi. From there it moved to Memphis and participated in an expedition to Oxford, Mississippi, in August, 1864.

In September it joined General A. J. Smith's corps in the pursuit of General Price during that general's invasion of Missouri, and in November of the same year, it moved with the corps to Nashville, Tennessee, where it participated in the battles of December 15th and 16th. From here it entered in the pursuit of the defeated Confederate army, and then moved to Eastport, Mississippi, where, in February, 1865, it embarked for New Orleans. From here it participated in the Mobile campaign and took an active part in the siege and capture of Fort Blakeley.

About the middle of April it proceeded to Montgomery, Alabama, and in that vicinity it served until it was finally ordered to proceed north, and was mustered out and disbanded on September 4, 1865, at Springfield, Illinois.

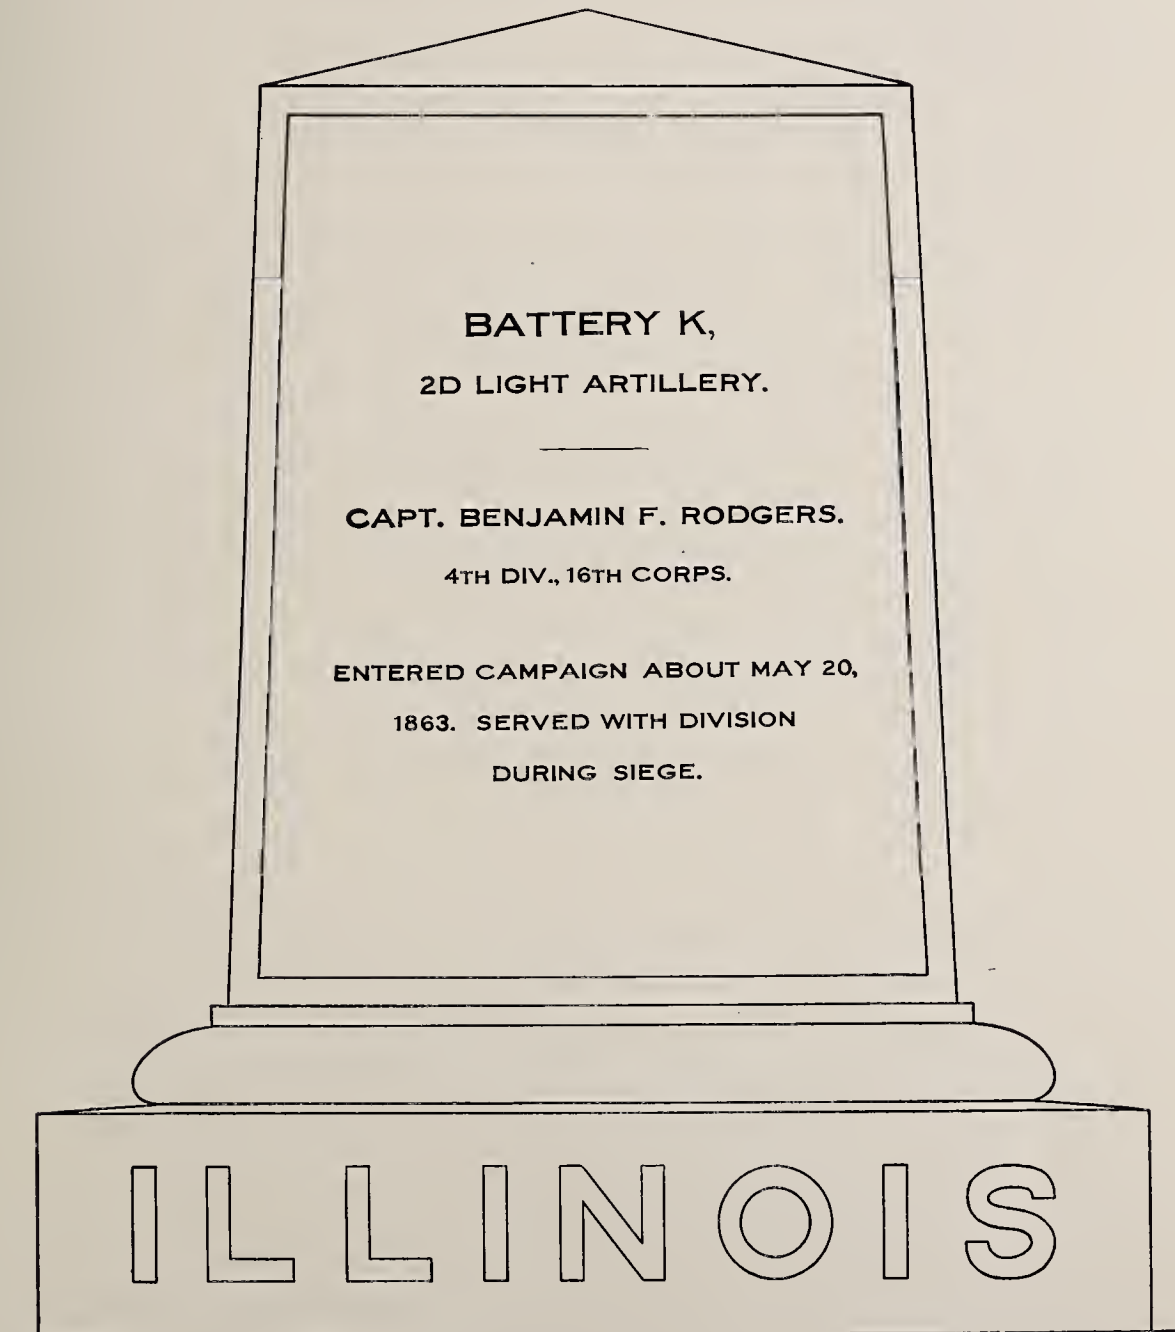

Several of its members have been awarded Congressional medals for individual bravery while in action.

BATTERY K, 2D ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was recruited in the vicinity of Jacksonville and Rutland, LaSalle County, and organized and mustered into the United States Service at Camp Butler, near Springfield, on December 31, 1861. On February 7, 1862, it was transferred to Cairo, then to Fort Holt, Kentucky, opposite Cairo, and thence to Columbus, Kentucky, in March.

On February 14, 1862, a detachment of twelve men, under a sergeant belonging to this battery, was sent for the investment of Fort Donelson, on board a naval vessel to man a mortar boat with a 13-inch mortar, which was towed by the naval vessel. The difficulty of this tow delayed the arrival at Donelson and the detachment only reached there just as the troops under General Grant were taking possession of the Fort. The detachment was joined by another detachment of the battery a little later and all of the men of this battery then returned to Columbus, Kentucky, being among the first Union troops to enter that post.

In June, 1862, a portion of the battery was engaged in an expedition to Fort Pillow, Tennessee, and took part in the bombardment of the place. It then moved to Memphis and in August returned to Columbus. On October 23d it participated in an expedition to Clarkton, Missouri, via New Madrid and took part in the affair at that place and the breaking up of a Confederate recruiting camp.

In November, it changed station to Memphis and from there marched with Sherman to Oxford during Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign and moved as far south as the Yocona River. After the Holly Springs disaster, it marched north and remained on duty along the line of the Memphis & Charleston Railroad at Moscow, Tennessee, until February, 1863, when it took post in Memphis.

From there it moved early in May to the vicinity of Vicksburg and about May 25 entered the line of investment near the extreme left, where it participated in all the siege operations to July 4th, the day of the surrender.

It then marched east with General Sherman in pursuit of General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army and participated in the second capture of Jackson, Mississippi. Having returned to Vicksburg it moved on August 20 to Natchez, where it remained stationed until December 11, 1864, participating during the interim in various expeditions into the interior of Mississippi and Louisiana.

It next moved to Memphis, Tennessee, where it performed garrison duty and remained to July 9, 1865, when it proceeded to Chicago, received its final pay and was disbanded on July 14, 1865.

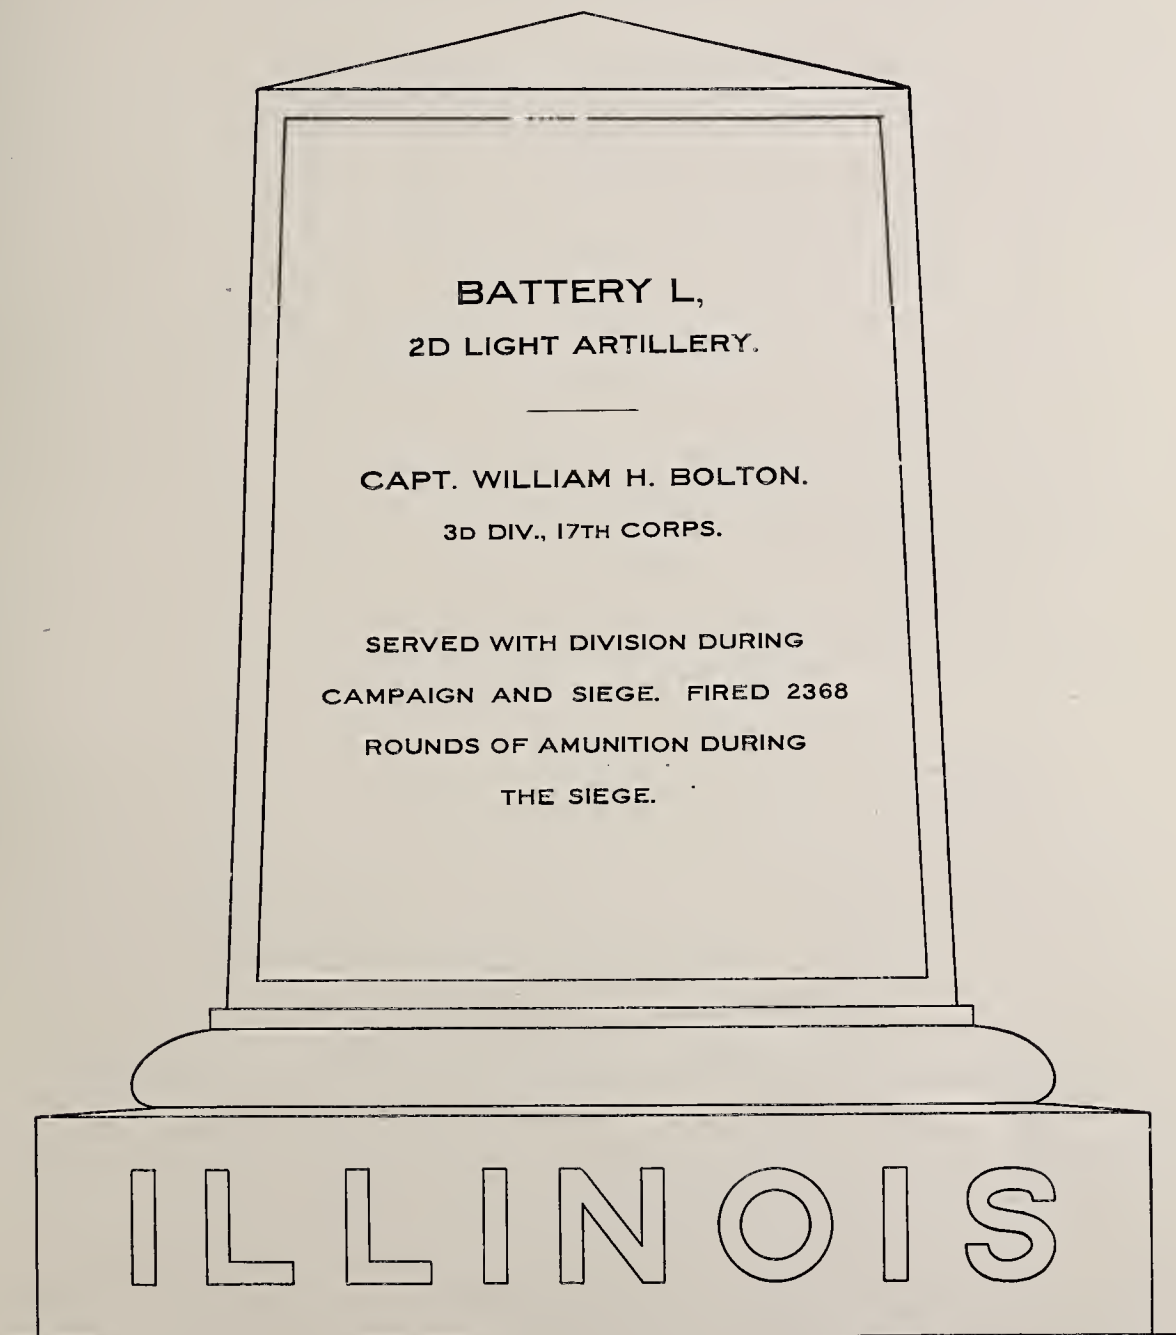

BATTERY L, SECOND ARTILLERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was recruited in Chicago, organized at Camp Douglas and was known throughout its service as Bolton's Battery. It was mustered into the United States service on February 28, 1862.

On March 11th it changed station to Benton Barracks, Missouri, and on April 8th moved to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee. It joined Grant's army after the battle of Shiloh and took part in the advance on, and siege of Corinth, Mississippi. It was engaged in various expeditions into Tennessee and Mississippi and on October 5, 1862, it participated in the battle of the Hatchie. Here the battery captured a four-gun battery.

It then took part in Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign, advancing as far south as the Yocona River and returned with the army to Memphis, where it remained until March, 1863, when it moved by transports, first to Lake Providence and then to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, where it was detained during the earlier movements of General Grant's army in the final Vicksburg campaign. It crossed the Mississippi River to Grand Gulf, Mississippi, about May 13th, and rejoined Logan's Division, to which it was attached, on May 17th, just after the battle of the Big Black River.

It reached the defensive line around Vicksburg on May 19th and served in the investment line, a short distance south of the Jackson Road, throughout the siege, being actively engaged in the assault of May 22d. On July 4th, the day of the surrender, it entered the city with Logan's division. From this time on until its final muster out, the battery remained in permanent station in and about Vicksburg, participating in numerous expeditions. On August 20, 1863, it moved to Goodrich's Landing, Louisiana, and marched from there to Monroe. Returning thence to Vicksburg it participated in an expedition to Canton, Mississippi, under General McPherson.

During 1864, in February, it took part in General Sherman's Meridian expedition and in July in an expedition to the Big Black River, thence to Grand Gulf and back to Vicksburg. Later it was ordered to Morganza Bend, Louisiana, where it remained for some time and then again returned to Vicksburg. From that time on it participated in a number of minor expeditions to various Mississippi points and finally it returned to Chicago, where on August 9, 1865, it received its final pay and discharge and was disbanded.

CHICAGO MERCANTILE BATTERY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This battery was organized under the patronage of the Mercantile Association of Chicago, composed of prominent and patriotic merchants of that City. It was mustered into the United States service on August 29, 1862, at Camp Douglas. It changed station to Memphis, Tennessee, where it arrived on the 11th of November. It soon after became part of the force under General Sherman that moved to participate in General Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign and reached Oxford, Mississippi, about the 10th of December. It returned with General Sherman to Memphis and embarked about December 20th for the vicinity of Vicksburg and participated in the operations along the Yazoo River and Chickasaw Bayou on the 27th of December and until the 1st of January, 1863. One section of the battery being with the rear guard to cover the retreat when the army withdrew from the Yazoo swamps.

It next proceeded to Arkansas Post, Arkansas, and was there engaged in the battle and capture of that place. Two of its guns did service from the right bank of the Arkansas River, opposite the fort, the four other guns serving on the left of the line of attack. They next proceeded to Young's Point, Louisiana, and after a few weeks were transferred to Milliken's Bend.

On the 15th of April they broke camp, proceeding with the right of Grant's army in its march on the Louisiana side of the river and crossed from DeSchroone's Plantation to Bruinsburg, Mississippi, on the night of April 30th, and participated in the first battle of the final Vicksburg campaign on May 1, 1863. It was next engaged at the battle of Champion's Hill, where it had a short range duel with an 8-gun Mississippi battery. On the morning of the 17th of May it was again engaged in the battle of Big Black River Bridge, from whence it proceeded to the investing line of Vicksburg, which it reached on May 19th.

On May 22d it participated in the assault on Vicksburg, in which one section of the battery was particularly distinguished, doing service on a Confederate bastion in the close range gained by the assault of the Infantry column, for which each officer and man serving in this section received a medal of honor from the Congress of the United States. One section of the battery was next day sent for duty on the line of investment considerably to the left and remained there for several days on duty with another division. It participated in all the siege operations until the surrender of the City on July 4th and then moved east on July 5th, in General Sherman's second Jackson campaign and participated in the siege and capture of that City, which resulted on July 16th. It then returned to Vicksburg.

After a few weeks of rest the battery proceeded to New Orleans and then went up the Bayou Teche and thence to Franklin and New Iberia. In December, 1863, it returned to New Orleans and embarked for Texas, reaching Matagorda Bay on January 1, 1864. Here it remained until March, when it proceeded to Berwick City, Louisiana, and became part of General Banks' army in the Red River campaign.

At the battle of Sabine Cross-Roads this battery had a most desperate encounter at close quarters. It succeeded in bringing its guns off from the field, but, finding the road blocked, could move them no further. The guns were rendered unserviceable and abandoned. Most of the horses were saved by cutting the traces and brought away by the men that were able to save themselves from capture. Two of the battery's officers were killed and two taken prisoners and of the men it lost 46, killed, wounded and prisoners. The remainder reached Grand Ecore, on the Red River, and from there were sent by steamer to Alexandria and thence to New Orleans.

Here they were sent to the defenses and, having no guns for a battery, ordered to act as infantry. The enlisted men drew up and signed a protest against this, in consequence of which the only commissioned officer present with the battery and all of the non-commissioned officers were placed under arrest. The non-commissioned officers were reduced to the ranks and Lieutenant Roe was tried by a court-martial, but was quickly acquitted. Shortly after this the reduced non-commissioned officers were reinstated. Horses and equipment of a United States regular battery were turned over to this battery at Carrollton, Louisiana, and its offense of protesting was thus condoned and justified.

It then moved to Baton Rouge and from there participated in an expedition that brought it to Pascagoula, Mississippi. It remained there till about the 1st of January, 1865, and then embarked for New Orleans and moved thence to Baton Rouge, where it remained until May, 1865. It was then again returned to New Orleans.

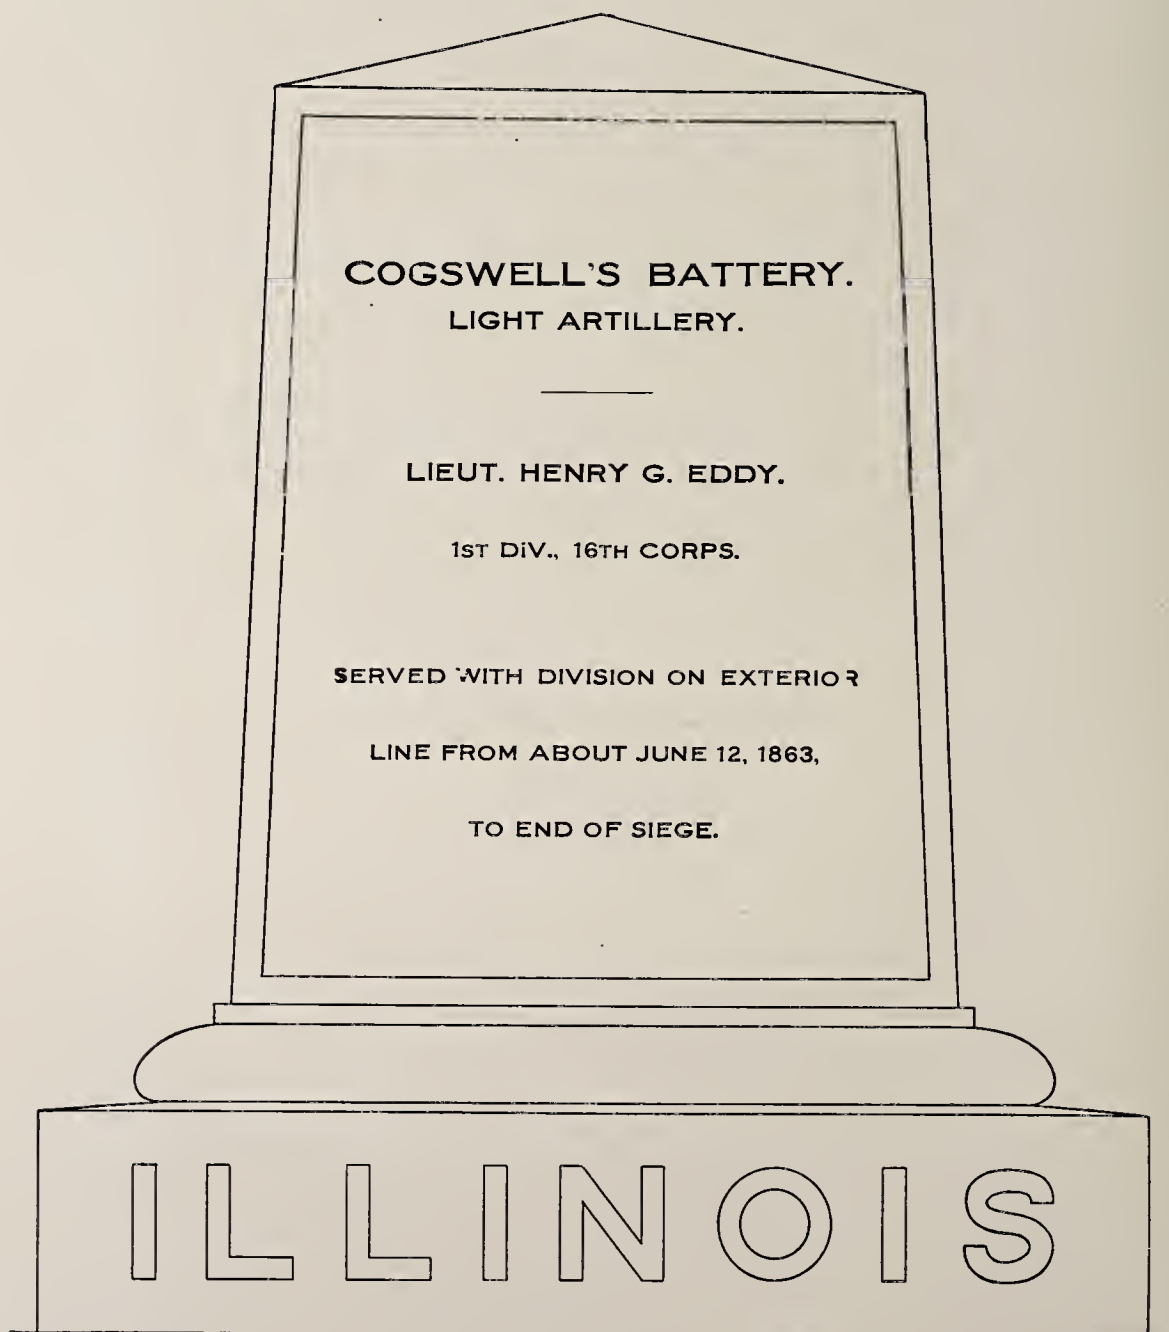

In June the battery was ordered home to be mustered out. It reached Chicago on July 3d and received its final payment, and disbanded on July 10, 1865.

COGSWELL'S BATTERY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Cogswell's Battery was recruited, organized and mustered in at Ottawa, Illinois, on November 12, 1861, and was at first attached as Company A to the 53d Illinois Infantry and then known as the First Independent Battery, Light Artillery. February 28, 1862, it transferred to Chicago with the regiment and on March 17th was detached and moved to St. Louis and thence on April 8th to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee. Having reached there after the battle of Shiloh had been fought, it participated in the advance on Corinth, and after the evacuation of that place, moved to Memphis, Tennessee, which it reached on June 14, 1862. On November 26th, it moved to Oxford, Mississippi, with General Sherman as part of Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign, and upon General Sherman's return to Memphis with one of his three divisions, it remained with the other two divisions as part of General Grant's army. It advanced as far as the Yocona River and after the fall of Holly Springs marched northward to Grand Junction, Tennessee, which it reached on January 9, 1863. It changed station to LaGrange on March 8th and on June 4th to Memphis. Here it embarked for Vicksburg, arriving at Haines' Bluff on the Yazoo River about June 11th. During the siege of Vicksburg it formed part of the line along the Yazoo and Big Black rivers, opposing General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army.

On July 5th, after the surrender of Vicksburg, it moved with General Sherman to Jackson, Mississippi, and participated in the operations around this City and its second capture. It then returned to the vicinity of Vicksburg and on September 28th embarked for Memphis. From here it joined the march, on October 11th, to Chattanooga and on November 23d and 24th it participated in the battle of Mission Ridge. On April 20, 1864, it took station at Nashville and on December 15th and 16th of that year it participated in the battle of Nashville. It took part in the pursuit of Hood and marched to Pulaski, Clifton and then to Eastport, Mississippi. On February 5, 1865, it took steamer here for New Orleans and from there joined the Mobile campaign, being engaged from March 8th to April 28th in the operations against Spanish Fort, Alabama, and also against Fort Blakeley, and after the capture of Mobile moved to Montgomery, Alabama. On July 28, 1865, the battery was ordered to Springfield for muster out. Here it received its final discharge and pay and disbanded on August 14, 1865.

SECOND ILLINOIS CAVALRY.

This regiment was recruited in the central part of the State and organized and mustered into the service of the United States at Camp Butler, near Springfield, August 12, 1861, except Company M, which joined the regiment some months later. The men owned their horses and equipments.

The regiment moved August 29, 1861, via Carbondale and Duquoin to Fort Massac on the Ohio River, arriving there September 24th. On October 3d, six companies were ordered to Cairo, and October 16th, Company C was ordered to Caledonia, Kentucky, where it spent the winter.

November 11, 1861, the five companies still at Fort Massac were ordered to Paducah, Kentucky. March 2d, Lt.-Col. Harvey Hogg, with a detachment from Companies E, F, G, H, K and M started from here for Columbus, Kentucky, and arrived there the next evening, just as the Confederates were evacuating, and took possession and held it until the next morning, when a fleet of gunboats and transports bearing General Sherman and three regiments of Infantry arrived.

Companies A and B participated in the engagement at Forts Henry and Donelson, and also in the battle of Shiloh.

Between February 28, 1862, and the latter part of May four companies took part in operations against New Madrid, Island No. 10 and Fort Pillow.

May 13, 1862, one squadron was attached to General Thomas' command in front of Corinth. After Corinth was evacuated, the regiment took part in opening the Mobile & Ohio Railroad through western Tennessee.

August 16, 1862, Lieut's. Terry and Goodhart in command of a small detachment had an engagement at Merriweathers Ferry, on the Obion River with a Confederate force double its own and inflicted great punishment upon this force, not, however, without the loss of Lieut's. Terry and Goodhart and Private Stone killed and six others wounded.

August 26, 1862, eight companies arrived at Jackson, Tennessee, and went into camp; August 29th, seven companies were ordered from there to Bolivar, Tennessee, where they arrived August 30th. Lieut.-Col. Harvey Hogg, with about 130 men of this command, was ordered out at once to reinforce Colonel Leggett's command, which had been sent out to meet Generals Armstrong and Jackson's forces, whom they had met about six miles south of Bolivar. During the engagement which followed Colonel McCulloch, with his regiment, the Second Missouri Cavalry (Confederate), charged the force commanded by Colonel Hogg. While leading a counter charge, Colonel Hogg was killed, also 1st Lieut. N. T. Shannon, Second Lieut. L. H. Leib, and a number of men, all of Company F, were wounded.

October 17, 1862, Colonel Faulkner (Confederate), with 300 men attacked Major McNeil's 2d Cavalry Battalion Camp, at Island No. 10, but they were repulsed. Captain F. T. Moore of Company L pursued them and captured Colonel Faulkner and three other officers and eleven privates.

October 21st, Major Mudd, with a portion of the regiment, attacked Haywood's rangers near Brownsville, Tennessee, and killed one and captured forty.

November 8, 1862, Companies H and K of the Second Illinois and one company of the 7th Kansas Cavalry, under command of Colonel Lee of the 7th Kansas, had an engagement with a force composed of the 1st Mississippi and the 1st Tennessee regiments, near Coldwater, Mississippi, in which the Confederates lost severely, and Colonel Lee's command but slightly.

December 20, 1862, while camped at the Fair Grounds at Holly Springs, Mississippi, Companies C, F, G, H, I and K, under command of Lieut.-Col. Mudd, were attacked before daylight, by a force of about 8,000, commanded by General Van Dorn; Colonel McNeil was captured, after which Lieut.-Col. Mudd took command, and with about half of the command cut through the Confederate lines and escaped. Captain B. F. Marsh of Company G, who was with him, was wounded several times, but remained in command of his company. Major D. B. Bush, with the other portion of the command, remained in town for nearly an hour, and after recapturing the regimental camp and releasing many of its men, who were prisoners, went to Coldwater, taking one Major and twelve other prisoners.

December 23d, General U. S. Grant, in a special Field Order, after censuring Colonel Murphy, who had commanded the Post and part of the garrison, said:

It is gratifying to notice in contrast to this the conduct of a portion of the command, conspicuous among whom was the Second Illinois Cavalry, which gallantly and successfully resisted being taken prisoners; their loss was heavy, but the enemy's was much greater. Such conduct as theirs will always insure success.

December 25, 1862, Majors Mudd and Bush had a skirmish with the rear guard of VanDorn's command at Ripley, Mississippi. They returned to Holly Springs the next day and moved to Memphis, Tennessee, early in January, 1863. February 17th, the command attacked Major Blythe's Camp, a few miles from the City, and captured a portion of his command; about this time Sergeant Rider while on a scout with a few men near Wolf river captured a party belonging to this same command.

February 19th Companies F, I and K embarked for Young's Point, Louisiana; they landed at Greenville, Mississippi, en route and had a successful skirmish with a force of southern cavalry and artillery.

From March 30 until Vicksburg was invested on May 19, Companies F, G, H, I and K served as a Battalion in the advance of the 13th corps and had almost daily skirmishes.

May 9th at Hall's Ferry on the Big Black river, Lieutenant Stickel, with his company, F, charged the Confederate force, killed and wounded 12, captured 30 and secured the crossing of the river.

During the siege the five companies guarded the line of the Big Black river and had frequent skirmishes with portions of General Joseph E. Johnston's relieving force; in one of these skirmishes Colonel Mudd was severely wounded. Company A was General Logan's escort and Company E acted as escort to Generals Quimby and Crocker, and both did good work in the advance of the 17th Corps on Hankinsons' ferry. The day after the surrender of Vicksburg, five companies, with portions of the Third Illinois and 6th Missouri Cavalry, took the advance of Sherman's movement on Jackson, Mississippi, and after the capture of that city moved south to Brookhaven, following the line of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, destroying the railroad and much of its rolling stock, also capturing quite a number of prisoners, and then returned to Vicksburg on July 24th.

On August 16th, this part of the regiment embarked for New Orleans, and upon arrival went into camp at Carrollton.

It started early in October for Berwick Bay, went from there to Iberville, Salt Island, Vermillion Bay and New Iberia; it was in the advance most of the time and had frequent skirmishes with the enemy and captured many prisoners.

About the middle of January 150 men from these six companies re-enlisted; the command returned to New Orleans early in February and soon afterward the veterans went home on a 30-day furlough. The non-veterans under command of Major B. F. Marsh started for Shreveport, Louisiana, February 29, 1864; arrived at Alexandria, March 20th and participated in the Red river campaign. From March 30th until the 21st of May skirmished almost daily. At Sabine crossroads, General Banks' force was defeated and the Second Cavalry lost 42 killed and wounded and 10 prisoners (all of whom were wounded). At the expiration of their furloughs, the veterans returned to Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

May 3, 1864, while Colonel Mudd was going up Red river on steamer which was carrying troops, the boat was attacked and in the fight which ensued he was killed.

November 16, 1864, while under command of Lieut.-Col. Marsh it captured Liberty, Louisiana. Soon after this it took part in an expedition toward Mobile, crossed Pearl river at Columbia and marched as far as Pacagoula, Mississippi. During the summer the regiment was consolidated at Baton Rouge.

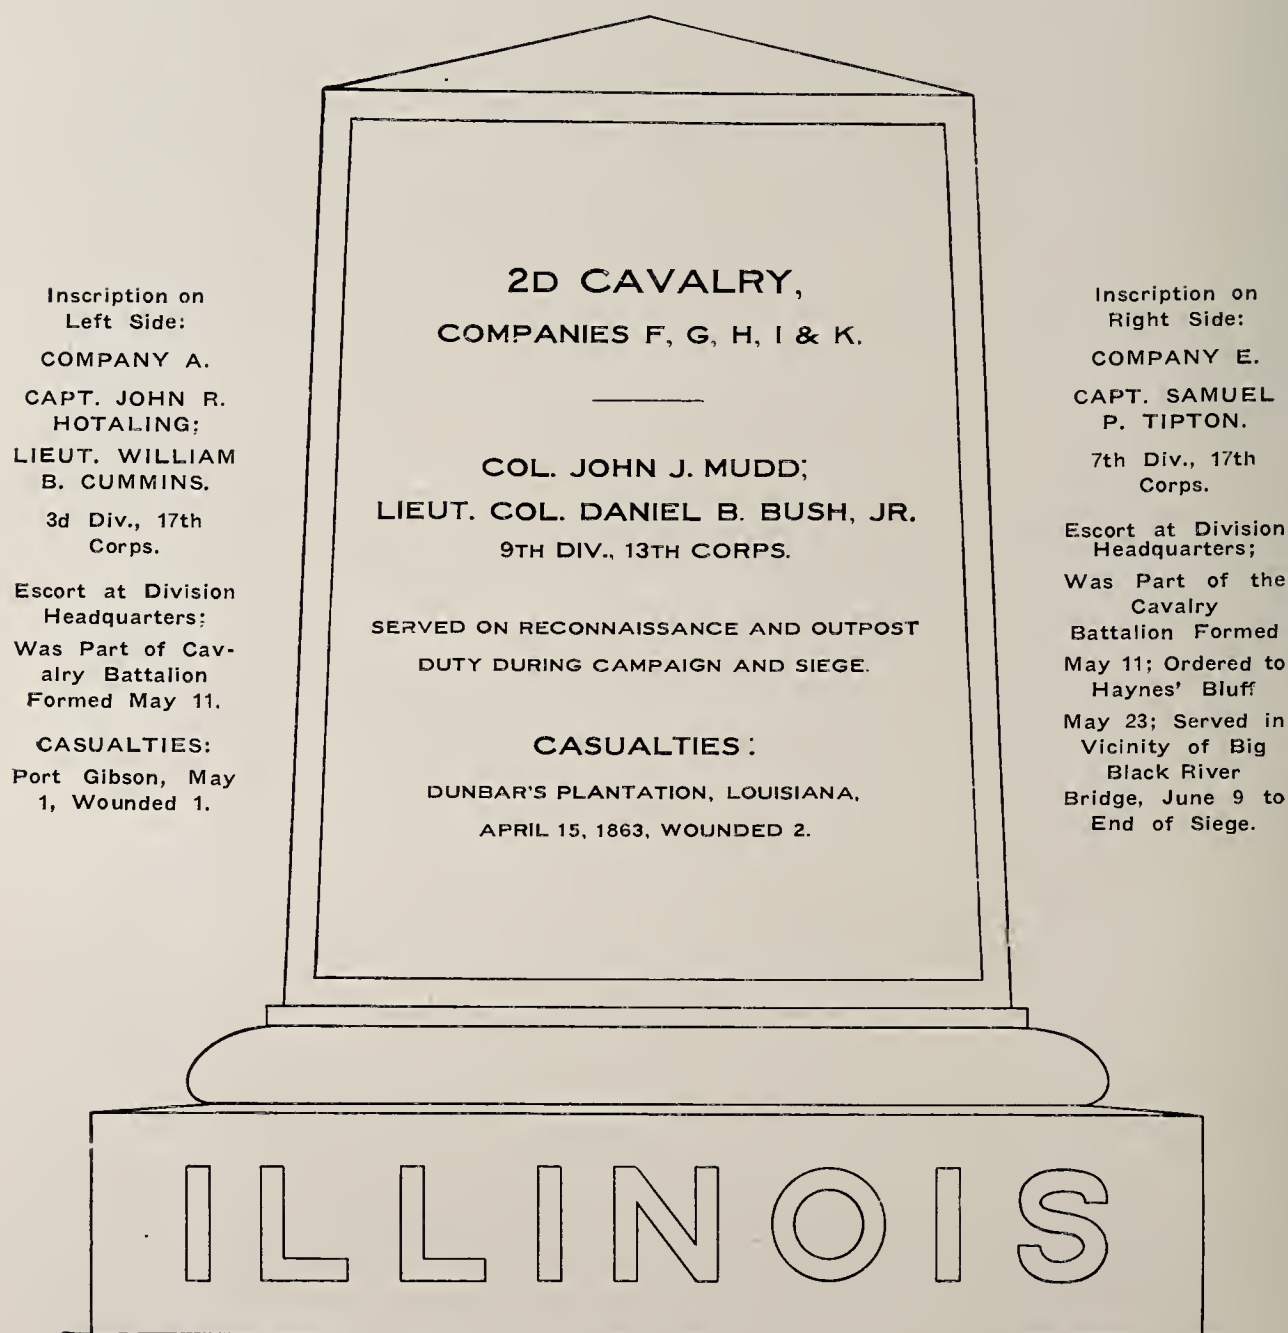

January 1, 1865, it moved to New Orleans, and on March 11 sailed for Pensacola, Florida. On March 20th, it moved toward Fort Blakely and drove its pickets within the works and held the place until the Infantry invested it.

After the fall of Mobile it marched through Alabama in search of Jefferson Davis. On April 11th it had an encounter near Mount Pleasant.

June 4th, it again reached Vicksburg, Mississippi, and on the 14th embarked for the Red river. Arrived at Shreveport, Louisiana, June 21st, and on the 25th was consolidated into a battalion of six companies. On July 9, 1865, it started on a march to San Antonio, Texas, arriving there August 2d, and received orders October 31st to be mustered out.

It was mustered out November 24, 1865, and started for home on November 27, 1865, via New Orleans, Vicksburg and Cairo; arrived at Springfield December 20, 1865, and was disbanded there January 3, 1866.

MONUMENT FOR 2D CAVALRY ON UNION AVENUE.

In addition to the regimental monument placed along Union Avenue, there are two markers placed for this regiment; one of these designates Company A, which served as escort at General Logan's headquarters, and is placed along the Jackson Road, and the other designates Company E, which is placed near Union Avenue along the line of the 7th Division of the 17th Corps, for which it served as escort at headquarters.

WYATT, JOHN
YOUNG, JACOB

3D CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This Regiment was organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield, and mustered into the service of the United States on August 27, 1861. The companies were raised in Sangamon, Tazewell, Cass, Bond, Saline, Gallatin, Adams, Brown, Fulton, McLean, Livingston, Macoupin and Christian Counties, and the Companies that served during the Vicksburg campaign came mostly from the vicinity of Chatham, Greenville, Raleigh, Mt. Sterling, Danville and Staunton.

On the 25th of September the regiment moved to St. Louis and from there to Jefferson City, whence it marched to Warsaw, where on the 11th it made a capture of a large supply of stores. It bridged the Osage River and then completed its march to Springfield, Missouri. On the 13th of November the First and Second Battalions of the regiment proceeded with General Hunter's army to Rolla, Missouri. The Third Battalion remained and acted as a rear guard and was the last to leave Springfield before the Confederates again took possession of it. The regiment remained at Rolla from November 19th to December 29th, when it was in the advance of General Curtis' army to Springfield and the southwest of Missouri. At Marshfield on the 11th of February, 1862, it had a small affair and again a few days later in the vicinity of Springfield. On the 15th the 3d Battalion participated in a cavalry charge at Sugar Creek and this battalion moved on the 20th to Cross Hollows, Arkansas, where it remained until March 5th. It next participated in the battle of Pea Ridge, where the First and Second Battalions also were present. This occurred on the 6th, 7th and 8th of March, 1862. A week later the regiment made a raid on Fayetteville, Arkansas. On the 19th it moved back with the army to Keytesville and on the 29th of April, it arrived at West Plains and on the 3d of May encamped at Batesville, Arkansas. On the 14th it moved to Little Red River and crossed White River on the 25th. On the 4th of June it fell back to Fairview and on the 11th returned to Batesville and then moved on to Jacksonport. From there it began to move on July 5th to Helena, where it arrived on the 15th. Here it remained for a long time, taking part in raids, scouts and various expeditions. It participated in the movement under General Washburn to Grenada, Mississippi, threatening Pemberton's line of retreat during the Northern Mississippi campaign and then returned to Helena.

On December 23, 1862, the regiment, excepting Companies E and G, embarked and proceeded with General Sherman's army to the vicinity of Vicksburg and participated in the Chickasaw Bayou campaign. It next formed part of the army of attack on Arkansas Post and then returned to Young's Point, Louisiana. In February, 1863, five Companies of the regiment were sent to Memphis. Company L was retained as escort to Major-General McClelland and Companies A, G, K and E were assigned to General Osterhaus, on his advance through the swamps of Louisiana, in the final Vicksburg campaign. This battalion and a similar battalion of the 2d Illinois Cavalry and of the 6th Missouri Cavalry formed the advance guard of General Grant's army when it crossed the river at Bruinsburg, Mississippi. It participated in the opening of the battles of Port Gibson, Jackson, Champion's Hill and Big Black River Bridge. During the siege of Vicksburg it was kept constantly busy on reconnaissance and outpost duty, in the direction of General Johnston's relieving army. After the surrender of Vicksburg on July 4th, it moved with General Sherman and participated in the second attack and capture of Jackson.

Having returned to Vicksburg, it proceeded to New Orleans and on the 16th of August entered the western Louisiana campaign under General Banks. In December this battalion moved to Port Hudson and thence to Memphis, where the entire regiment was again re-assembled; the other portion having been in the meantime engaged in service along the Memphis & Charleston Railroad and participated in the battles of Tupelo, Okolona, Guntown and a number of affairs.

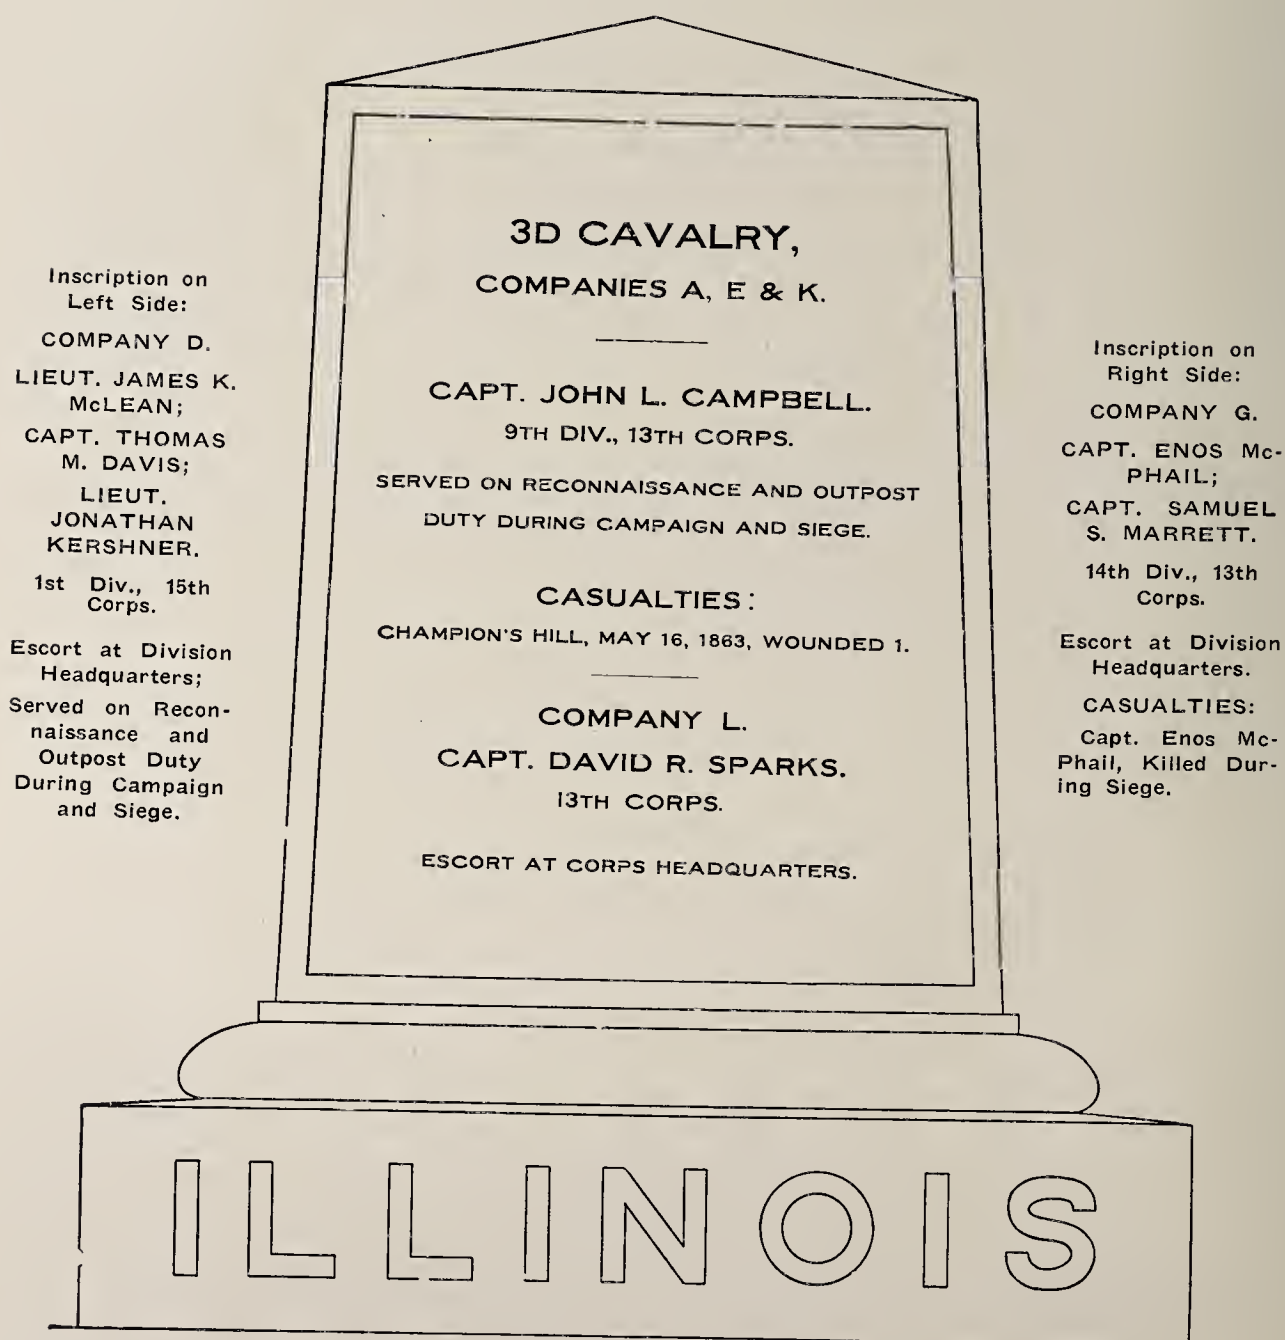

In July, 1864, a large portion of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and the non-veteran portion of the command were stationed at Germantown. On August, 21st, their term having expired, they proceeded to Illinois to their old camp near Springfield and were mustered out of service on September 5th.

The veterans remained at Memphis, participated in the repulse of General Forrest during his raid into Memphis and on August 24th they were consolidated into six companies. On September 27th the regiment thus organized left Memphis on its march to Clifton, Tennessee, where it crossed the Tennessee River and confronted Hood's army. It participated in the battles of Lawrenceburg, Spring Hill, Campbellsville and Franklin. On December 15th, in the battle of Nashville, the regiment was the first to enter the enemy's works. In January, 1865, it was at Gravelly Springs, Alabama, and moved to Eastport, Mississippi, in February.

It then proceeded to St. Louis, Missouri, and thence to St. Paul, Minnesota, and on the 4th day of July started on an Indian expedition into the Dakotas, marching north as far as the British possessions and returned thence by way of Devil's Lake, Fort Berthold to Fort Snelling, where it arrived on October 1st.

It was then ordered to Springfield, Illinois, where it was mustered out and finally disbanded on the 18th of October, 1865.

MONUMENT FOR 3D CAVALRY ON UNION AVENUE.

To mark the service of this regiment during the campaign and siege three markers have been erected along Union Avenue, in addition to the regimental monument; one of these markers is for Company D and is placed along Union Avenue in the front occupied by the 1st division of the 15th corps, to which it was attached, as headquarters' escort. Another has been placed along the front of the 14th division of the 13th corps for Company G; this company being the escort at division headquarters, and the third marker, for Company L, is placed near the headquarters of the 13th corps, where this company served as escort during the campaign.

4TH CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 4th Cavalry was organized and mustered in at Ottawa on September 26, 1861. Only one company of this regiment, namely, Company "A," which was raised in Chicago and Ottawa, participated in the Vicksburg campaign. The other companies came from Oswego, Plainfield, Joliet, Hennepin, Danville, El Paso, Lincoln, Earle, Kankakee, Clinton, Fort Byron and their vicinities.

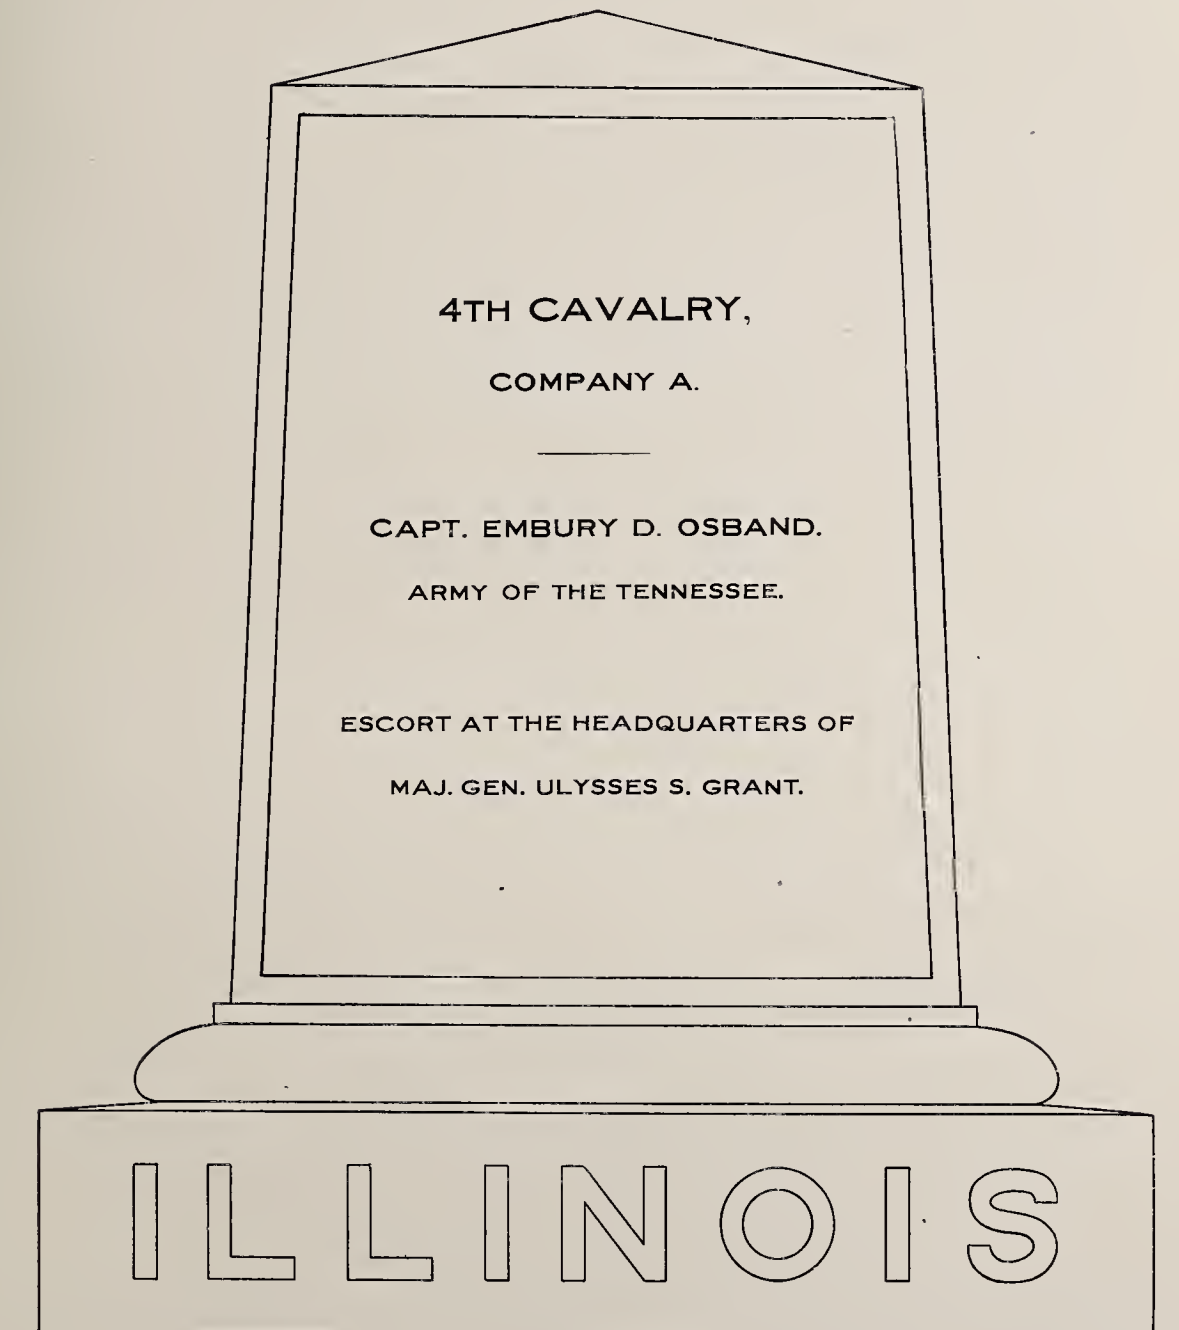

The regiment moved to Springfield and then to Cairo. One company was sent to guard the Big Muddy bridge on the Illinois Central and Company A under Captain E. D. Osband was detached to serve as escort to General U. S. Grant, in which service it continued until August, 1863. In General Grant's report of the Vicksburg campaign made on July 6th to the War Department occur these lines:

"In all former reports I have failed to make mention of Company A 4th regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, Captain E. D. Osband, Commander. This Company has been on duty with me as an escort Company since November, 1861, and in every engagement I have been in since that time rendered valuable service, attracting general attention for their exemplary conduct, soldierly bearing and promptness. It would not be overstating the merits of this company to say that many of them would fill with credit any position in a cavalry regiment."

In December, 1861, the regiment participated in a reconnoissance of Columbus, Kentucky. It was in the advance in the movement on Fort Henry and Fort Donelson. It next moved to Pittsburg Landing, stopped a short time at Savannah and then participated in the battles of Shiloh on April 6th and 7th. After these battles it was engaged in the movement upon Corinth, after the evacuation of which it moved slowly westward until it reached Memphis in August, 1862. From here it moved to Trenton, Tennessee, where it remained until the beginning of General Grant's northern Mississippi campaign. Here it participated in the advance movement, proceeding to Holly Springs and as far as Coffeeville. From there it fell back to Water Valley and after the disastrous affair of Holly Springs it moved to the line of the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, extending from Moscow to Colliersville. While at Moscow, a battalion of four companies was sent to Bolivar, Tennessee, with an expeditionary force. The regiment remained at Colliersville until August, 1863, when it proceeded to Vicksburg, where it was reunited and remained so until the expiration of its term of service. From Vicksburg it proceeded to the Big Black river, then returned to Vicksburg and went to Natchez, where it spent the winter of 1863-4 in reconnoissance and scouting duty.

In October, 1864, while here, a portion of the regiment that had not re-enlisted was ordered to Springfield, Illinois, to be mustered out of service. The remaining men were consolidated into four Companies on October 18, 1864, and in May, 1865, this battalion was consolidated with the 12th Illinois Cavalry, and their history thenceforward becomes that of this organization.

5TH CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 5th Cavalry was organized at Springfield, Illinois, with Companies recruited mostly in the vicinity of Prairie City, Mattoon, Bloomington, Fairfield, Robinson, Oconee, Nashville, Sparta, Effingham, Mt. Erie and in Cumberland and Coles counties. It was mustered into the United States service by Companies at various dates, beginning with August 31, 1861, to December 30, 1861.

On February 20, 1862, it moved to Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, thence on March 3d to Pilot Knob. On the 27th it marched to Donovan and had its first skirmish there on April 1st. On the 17th it moved to Pocahontas and on the 27th of June marched to the Mississippi river, reaching Jacksonport on the 29th and Helena, Arkansas, on July 13th.

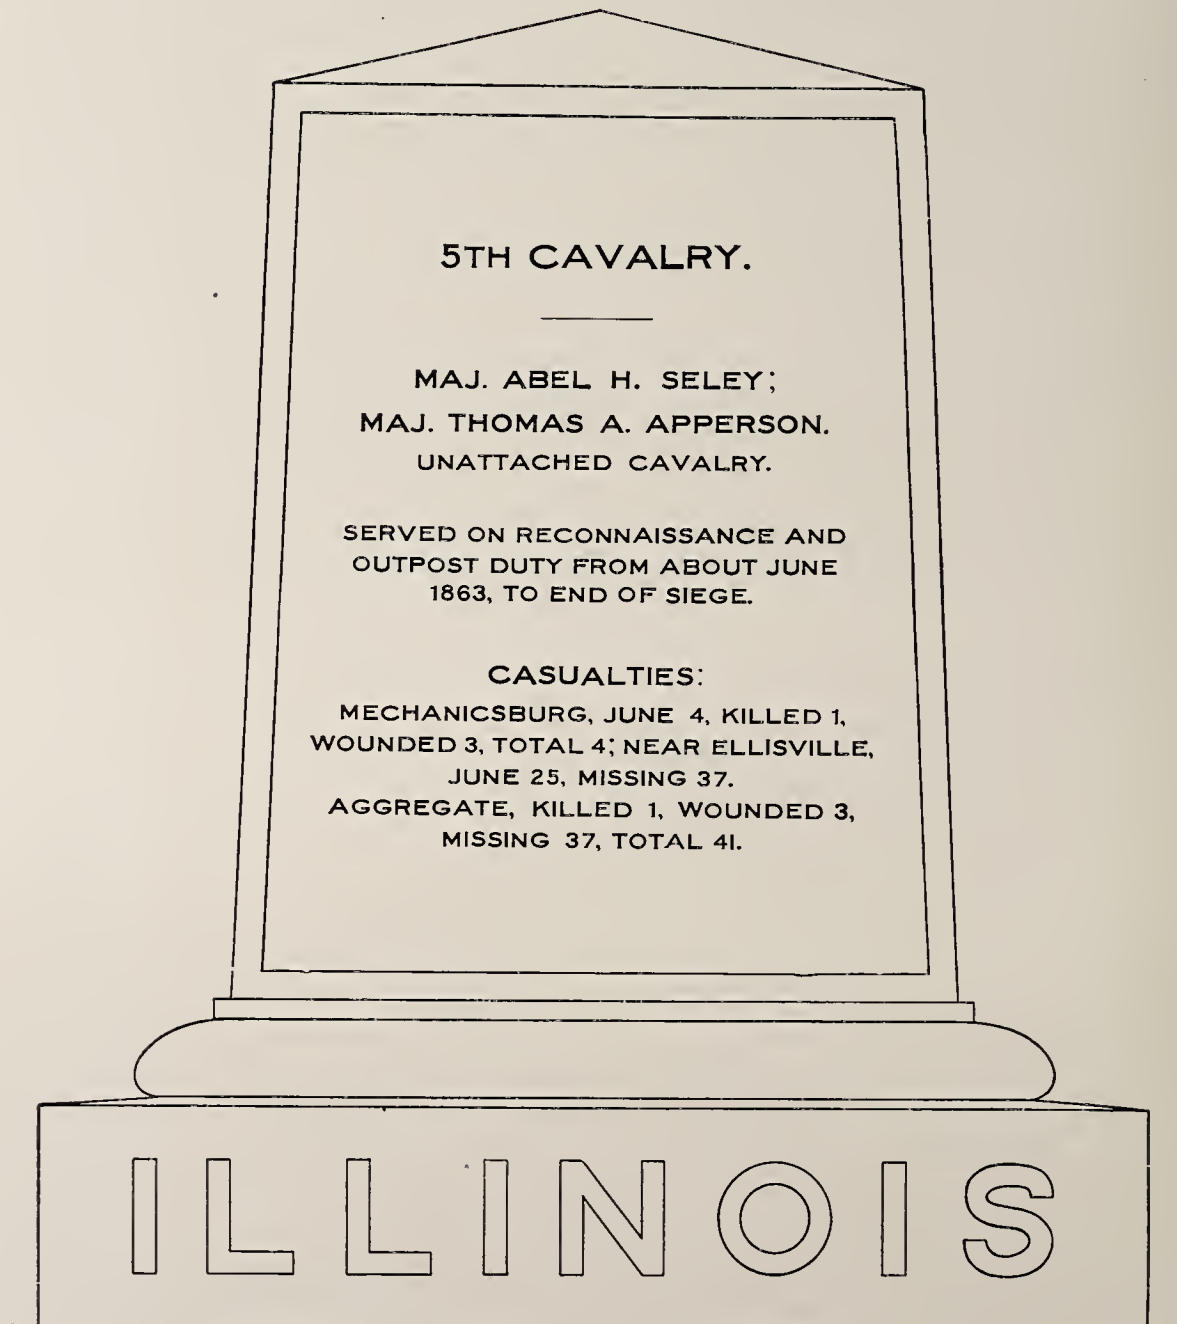

October 22d it had an engagement, while out foraging, and on January 11, 1863, it made the scout to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, and in April marched in pursuit of General Marmaduke in his retreat from Missouri. On May 29, 1863, the regiment embarked for Vicksburg and landed at Snyder's Bluff on June 1st. It participated in a reconnaissance to Mechanicsburg on June 3d and remained on outpost and kindred duty, serving in the line of the Yazoo and Big Black defences against Joseph E. Johnston's relieving army until the surrender to Vicksburg. On June 4th the 3d Battalion, Companies I, K, L and M, encountered Gen. Wirt Adams' Mississippi Cavalry at Mechanicsburg, in close quarters, using sabers freely and effectively. On July 6th moved with General Sherman toward Jackson, and on the 11th of July formed part of a Cavalry expedition to Canton, from which, after several affairs and destroying public property and railroads, it returned to Jackson on the 17th of July, after its second evacuation.

On August 3d, having returned to the Big Black river, it went on an expedition to Grenada, Mississippi, where it arrived on August 16th, having destroyed all possible property, including rolling stock of railroads; it took up its line of march from Memphis on the 19th. On the 21st, encountered Blythe's irregular cavalry at the Coldwater river and arrived at Memphis on the 22d. It embarked here and returned to its camp on Big Black river on August 29th, where it remained until May, 1864. In October it participated in an expedition to Jackson and was also in the engagement with General Wirt Adams at Brownsville. On January 1st, a large percentage of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans and on February 3d the command joined General Sherman on the Meridian raid. On March 17th, the veterans went north on their furlough, from which they returned May 10th. On July 1st, Companies A, B, C and D, being the only mounted companies in the regiment, participated in an expedition to Jackson and had some severe fighting, both going and returning. On September 27th it joined an expedition from Vicksburg by river which moved to Port Gibson and thence to Natchez, where it was joined by the 4th Illinois Cavalry and then made an expedition to Woodville, Mississippi, sustaining considerable loss. It returned to Vicksburg on October 11th. In November it marched to destroy the Mississippi Central Railroad, and having accomplished its purpose, it returned to Vicksburg. It then moved to Memphis on January 24, 1865, and from there participated in an expedition to southern Arkansas and northern Louisiana, from which it returned on February 13th. On March 3d it moved to Ripley, Mississippi, and after its return, on March 11th, was assigned to the duty of guarding the Memphis & Charleston Railroad.

On July 1st it proceeded to Texas via Alexandria and the Red river, which it reached on July 13, 1865. From there it marched on August 12th to Hempstead, Texas, arriving there on August 26th. Here it remained until October 6th, when it was ordered to Springfield, Illinois, for muster out, and on October 27th it was mustered out, and having received its final payment and discharge, it disbanded on October 30, 1865.

7TH CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Was organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield, and mustered into the United States service on September 13, 1861. The Companies were recruited in the vicinity of Paris, Polo, Mendota, Galesburg, Knoxville, Grayville, Vandalia, Effingham, New Haven, Shelbyville, Decatur, Canton, Bushnell and Red Bud.

Four Companies were sent to Bird's Point, Missouri, near the end of October, where the other eight Companies joined them on the 25th of December, 1861. Companies B, C, I and L remained here for some time and the remainder of the regiment moved to Cape Girardeau, the entire regiment being employed in scouting and reconnoitering duty. Early in 1862, the two battalions stationed at Cape Girardeau participated in General Pope's New Madrid campaign. The other battalion joined the regiment at New Madrid later. The entire regiment then took part in the Island No. 10 campaign and from there proceeded up the Tennessee river to Hamburg Landing. Thence it marched in the direction of Corinth and had a skirmish at Farmington, Mississippi. After Corinth was evacuated, the regiment was deployed along the Memphis & Charleston Railroads extending from Tusculum to Decatur, Alabama, opposing the bands of Roddy and others, serving on this duty till December 1st. It also participated in the battles of Iuka in September and of Corinth October 2, 3 and 4, 1862. On November 23d seven companies of the regiment were engaged near Summerville with a force commanded by Colonel Richardson.

On December 1st it entered Grant's Northern Mississippi campaign and served in the advance with other cavalry, proceeding as far south as Coffeeville. Here it had an engagement with General Price.

After the fall of Holly Springs it marched from Oxford to Pontotoc, Mississippi, and thence to Tupelo, and as far south on the Ohio & Mobile Railroad as Okolona, destroying stores, roads and bridges as they went along. The regiment then returned to the Tallahatchie river, and on January 1, 1864, took station at La Grange, Tennessee. Here this regiment, the 6th Illinois and the 2d Iowa Cavalry, were formed into a brigade, commanded by Colonel B. H. Grierson of Illinois. They made frequent raids into the surrounding country from this point and had many encounters with Colonel Richardson and his irregular forces.

On the 17th of April this brigade started from La Grange on what is known as Grierson's raid, which at the beginning consisted of the 6th and 7th Illinois and 2d Iowa Cavalry; the 2d Iowa Cavalry, however, was detached and returned to La Grange, while the two Illinois regiments rode through the State of Mississippi from north to south and then through Louisiana to Baton Rouge, where they arrived on May 1st.

While only one company of this regiment, B, actually participated in the Vicksburg campaign, the wonderful ride of the 6th and 7th Cavalry and the attention it attracted and which it deflected, from General Grant's movements, might with propriety be considered a part of the Vicksburg campaign. Company "B" served as escort to General William Sooy Smith and left Memphis with his 1st division of the 16th corps, arriving at Haines' Bluff, Mississippi, on June 12th. It participated in the operations along the line of the Yazoo and Big Black rivers during the siege of Vicksburg.

After the regiment had been at Baton Rouge two weeks, it participated in the investment and siege of Port Hudson. After the surrender of Vicksburg and of Port Hudson, General Grierson's command returned to Memphis by steamer and the 7th Cavalry then was distributed along the line of the Memphis & Charleston Railroad. It operated from this base against Generals Chalmers and Forrest respectively, the former at Byhalia in October, the latter in December, 1863.

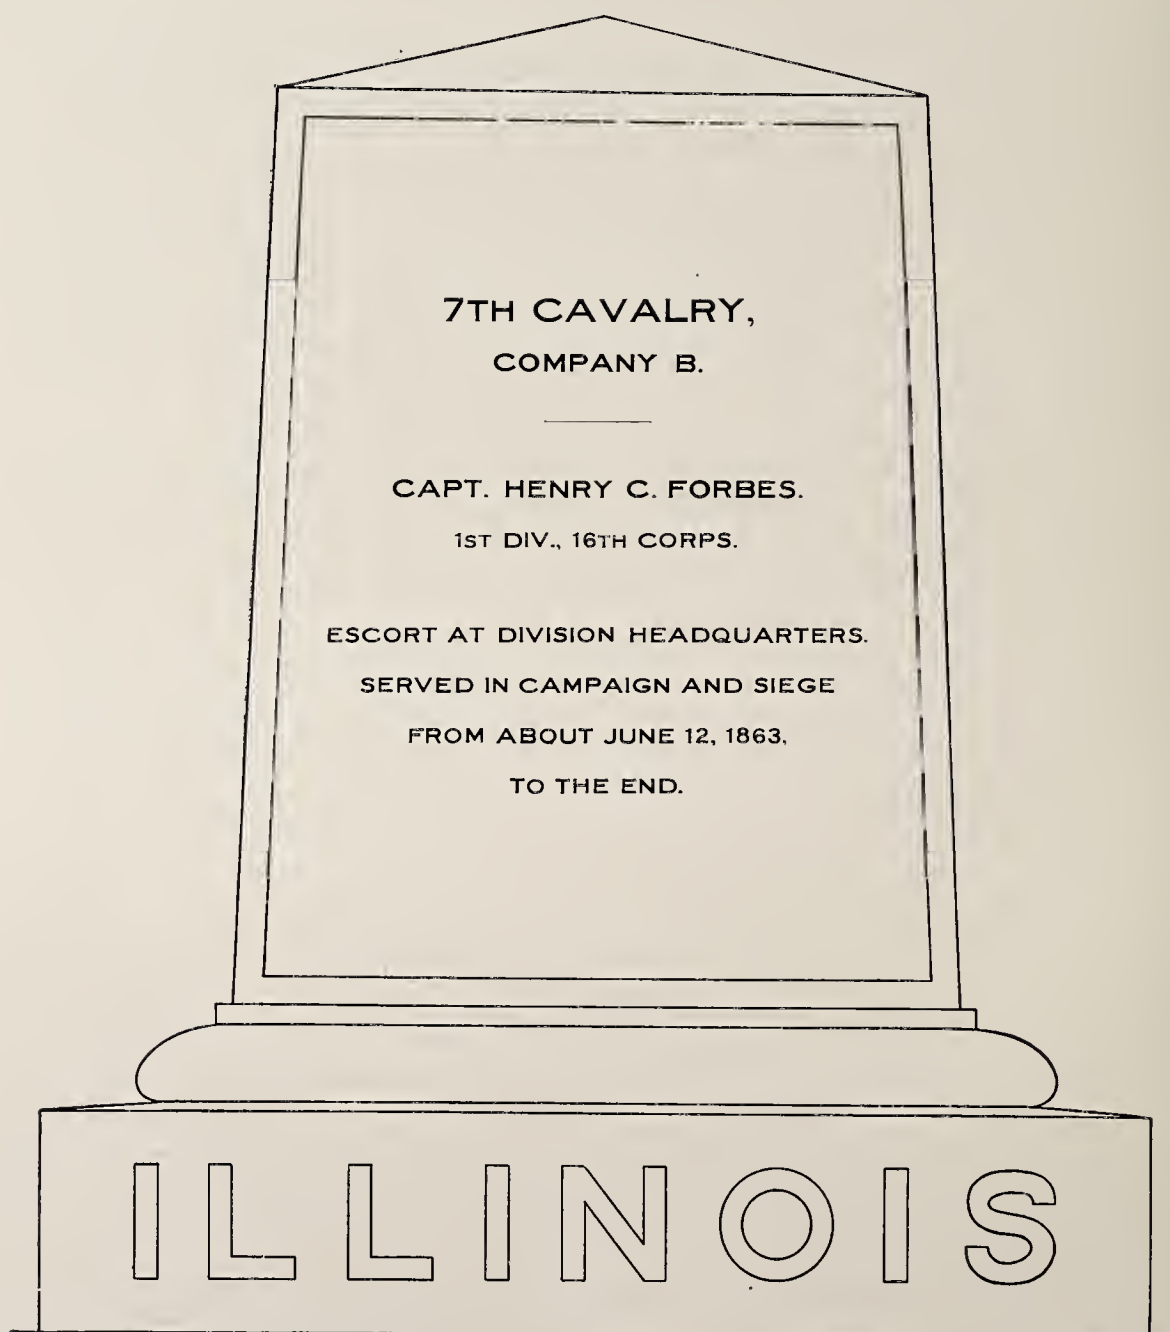

In February, 1864, the regiment formed part of the expedition under General Smith that moved from Germantown, Tennessee, to West Point, Mississippi, in co-operation with General Sherman's Meridian raid from Vicksburg.

In March, 1864, a large number of men re-enlisted and in April went home on veteran furlough. The non-veteran part of the regiment took part in the defeat of Sturgis at Guntown. When Forrest made his raid into Memphis, this regiment fought him on the Hernando Road and followed him to the Tallahatchie river.

On September 30th it marched to the Tennessee river, which it crossed at Clifton, and from there pursued Forrest. It remained in this vicinity until October 26th, when it proceeded to Pulaski and thence marched to Shoal Creek, where it arrived on November 8th and remained to the 21st. Here it met General Hood's advance on Nashville. It was engaged at Campbellsville, and thence marched to Columbia and covered the rear of the Infantry to Franklin, Tennessee, being engaged at Hart's Cross Roads. At Franklin it had an encounter with Infantry which it pursued over the Harpeth River. It was again engaged on December 13th and on the 14th at Brentwood Hills. On Hood's retreat, after the battle of Nashville, it followed him as far as the Tennessee river at Bainbridge until December 23, 1864.

On January 13, 1865, the regiment was at Gravelly Springs and here the very much decimated command received a large number of recruits, after which it was sent to Okolona, Mississippi, where it remained until the 1st of July. Having been dismounted since early in January, the regiment proceeded to Decatur, Alabama, and was here remounted. It remained in the vicinity of Decatur until October 20th, and then marched to Nashville and was mustered out, and then sent to Springfield, Illinois, where it received its final pay and was disbanded on November 17, 1865.

10TH CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized and mustered in at Camp Butler, near Springfield, on the 25th of November, 1861. The Companies came from Springfield, Loda, Chicago, Alton, Petersburg, Marine, Elkhart, Champaign, Jacksonville, Mattoon and the vicinity of these places.

It moved to Quincy late in January and remained there until March 13, 1863, when it moved to Benton Barracks, Missouri. The 3d Battalion of this regiment left about the first of April and was shortly after followed by the 2d and 1st Battalions on its way to Rolla, Missouri, which all of them finally reached on the 1st of May. On the 15th of June, 1862, the 1st Battalion, composed of Companies A, D, G and K, left Springfield, Missouri, to join General Curtis' army in Arkansas. This battalion participated in the Vicksburg campaign later.

The other two battalions joined in an expedition to Keytesville on July 8th, from which it returned from Springfield on the 20th. It then moved to Marshfield, Missouri, on the 16th of August, where it remained until November. From here it made expeditions into the surrounding country of southern Missouri and northern Arkansas and as far as the eastern line of the Indian Territory. On November 14th these Battalions became part of the army of the Frontier and also part of a cavalry brigade at Wilson's Creek, Missouri. From here it participated in a raid to Yellville, Arkansas. It participated in the movements of General Blunt in Arkansas and those of General Herron and took part in the battle of Prairie Grove. It also took part in the pursuit of the Confederate army as far as Van Buren, Arkansas. It then returned to Fayetteville. In January the 2d Battalion was moved to Flat Creek, Missouri, and the 3d Battalion engaged in scouting and expeditions south of the Boston Mountains and in March the two battalions joined and returned to Rolla, Missouri. From there they participated in an expedition in April to Cape Girardeau. In May they were at Pilot Knob and on July 1st they became part of the army that left Arcadia, Missouri, and whose movement finally culminated in the capture of Little Rock.

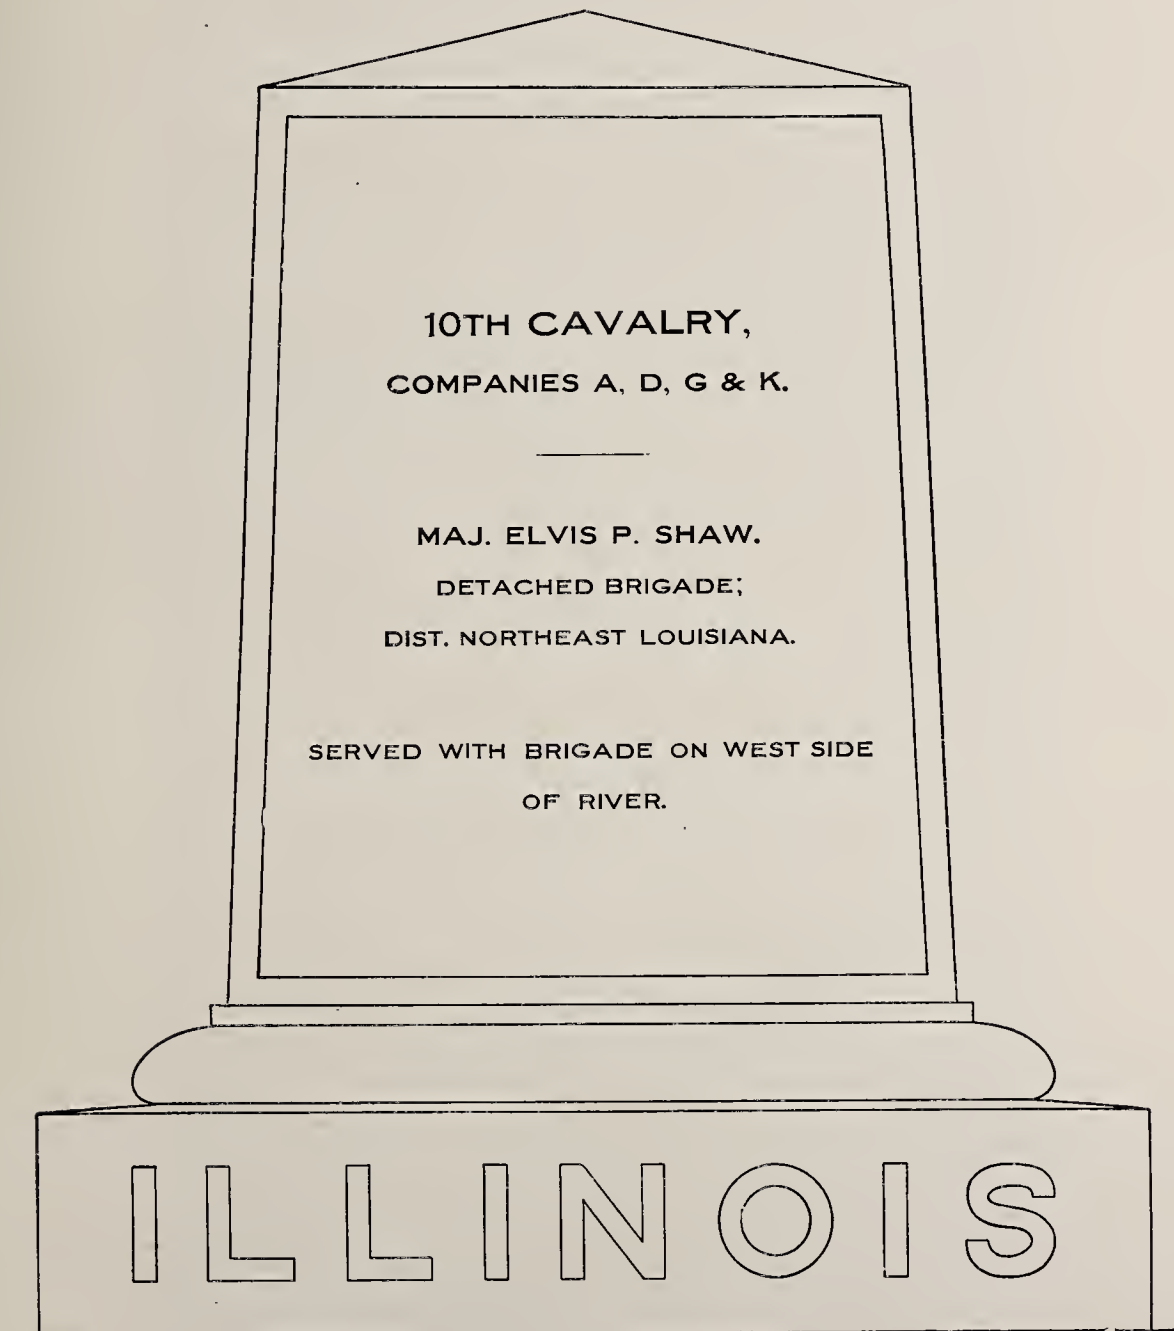

The 1st Battalion, after proceeding to Jacksonport, Arkansas, on July 4, 1862, was ordered to Helena, Arkansas, where it arrived on July 12th. It took part in the expedition across the Mississippi river and the rear of General Pemberton's army that was then being confronted farther north by General Grant during his Northern Mississippi campaign. It also participated in the battle of Arkansas Post, Arkansas, January 11, 1863; the Yazoo Pass expedition in March, 1863, and during the siege of Vicksburg it was stationed between Young's Point and Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, doing the scouting and reconnoitering on the west side of the river. It was engaged in a brush near Richmond, La., on June 6, 1863, and after the fall of Vicksburg it was returned to Arkansas, where on August 1st it rejoined the other two battalions of the regiment near Witsburg, Arkansas. The regiment reached Clarendon August 7th, Brownsville on the 26th, where on the 27th it had a sharp encounter. On September 10th it took part in the capture of Little Rock. On October 7th it went to Pine Bluff on an expedition. In January the regiment re-enlisted and went home on a veteran furlough, arriving at Springfield on February 28, 1864. The furlough being over, the men of the regiment proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee. From there they moved to Little Rock, Arkansas, where they found that the non-veteran portion of the regiment had accompanied General Steele on his expedition in support of General Banks' Red river campaign. The regiment was reunited and stationed at various points in Arkansas, being at Brownsville in November, 1864, where it remained until March, 1865.

In July, 1864, it had a severe encounter near Searcy, Arkansas. On January 27, 1865, the members of this regiment were consolidated into nine Companies and those of the 15th Illinois Cavalry into three Companies under the title of the Tenth Illinois Veteran Cavalry. On March 16th it left Brownsville, Arkansas, for New Orleans, reaching its destination by way of Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, April 1st; and on April 15th, when the news of President Lincoln's assassination had reached New Orleans, it was placed on duty here as a police guard. While stationed at Greenville, near New Orleans, a detachment of this regiment captured the crew of the Ram Webb, which was run ashore about ten miles below the city and blown up.

On June 6, 1865, the regiment proceeded by transports up the Red river to Shreveport, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 17th and marched from Shreveport on July 8th to San Antonio, Texas, where it arrived on August 1st. From here it made several raids into various parts of the country after unruly Indians. On November 22, 1865, the regiment was mustered out, was sent north by way of Galveston and New Orleans. Reached Springfield January 1, 1866, and was there disbanded on January 6th.

11TH CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Peoria, the men coming mostly from Woodford, Peoria, Fulton, Tazewell, Marshall, Stark, Knox, Henderson and Warren Counties. It was mustered into the United States service December 20, 1861.

On February 22, 1862, it broke camp and marched to Benton Barracks, Missouri, arriving there March 3d. On March 25th it proceeded to Crumps Landing, Tennessee river, where it landed on April 1st in part and at Pittsburg Landing in part. It was engaged in the battle of Shiloh on the 6th and 7th of April and after that participated in the operations around Corinth. During the summer following it operated through southwestern Tennessee and northern Mississippi; was engaged in the fights at Bolivar, Davis' Bridge, and the battle of the Hatchie river. It also participated in the battle of Iuka and Corinth. During the winter of 1862-3 the regiment was stationed at Jackson, Tennessee, and about the time that Van Dorn made his raid upon Holly Springs, Mississippi, this regiment met Forrest's advance at Lexington, where it sustained a heavy loss on December 18, 1862, including the capture of its Colonel, Robert G. Ingersoll. It was next engaged at Jackson on the 19th, and at Humboldt on the 20th, and at Parker's Cross Roads on the 31st of December. During the early part of 1863, it was stationed along the line of the Memphis & Charleston Railroad which it guarded and whence it made numerous raids. On June 21st it had an engagement with General Chalmers' Cavalry at Hudsonville, Mississippi.

On September 17, 1863, it went to Memphis and from there it embarked for Vicksburg, Mississippi, and went into camp near Messengers' ford on the Big Black river.

One Company of this regiment, G, was detached from it in the fall of 1862 and assigned to General John McArthur's headquarters as escort. This Company alone, of this regiment, served in the Vicksburg campaign. It crossed the river at Grand Gulf and struck the extreme left of the investing line around the defenses of Vicksburg about May 22d and about the 25th it accompanied General McArthur to the Big Black river, and while it was his personal escort it acted constantly on outpost and scouting duty throughout the Vicksburg campaign.

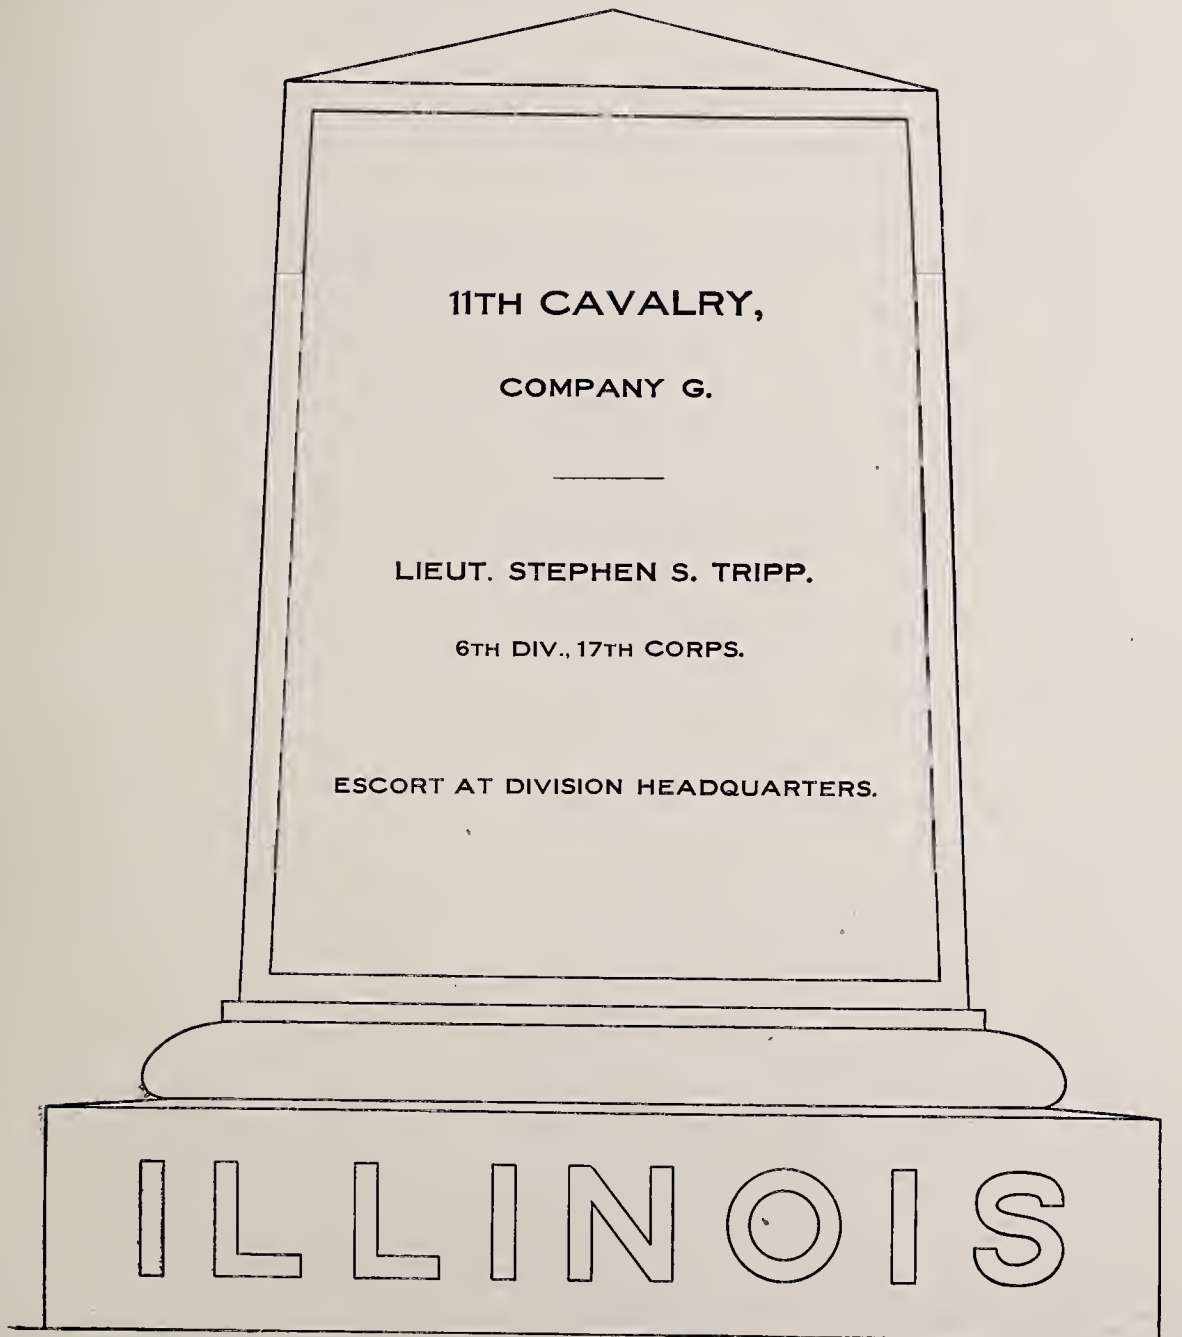

After the surrender of Vicksburg it performed similar duty for some time in that vicinity and then in August was assigned to escort duty at General M. M. Crocker's headquarters and went with him to Natchez, Mississippi, and in December returned to Vicksburg and went into camp on Hebrom Plantation near Big Black river. In January, 1864, the entire Company re-enlisted and in February formed part of General Sherman's column in his Meridian expedition.

After returning from this expedition, the Company went to Illinois on a veteran furlough, having returned from this it was ordered to report to General Frank P. Blair at Cairo, Illinois. It proceeded thence up the Tennessee river to Decatur, Alabama, and from there marched over the mountains to join Sherman's army in Georgia during the siege of Atlanta. It became the escort at General Blair's headquarters, commanding the 17th corps, and participated in the march from Atlanta to Savannah, Georgia, and thence in the campaign through the Carolinas to Goldsboro, Raleigh, Richmond, Virginia, and finally participated in the grand review at Washington May 24, 1865. The Company was then ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, for muster out. The regiment then was stationed at Memphis, but by special orders of General Logan the Company was not required to take the journey to rejoin its command, but was mustered out at Louisville and sent home to Illinois for final muster out and disbandment.

In October, 1863, the regiment moved with General McPherson to Canton and in February and March, 1864, it participated in General Sherman's Meridian raid. A large number of the regiment re-enlisted in December, 1863, and the last of March went to Illinois on a veteran furlough. It returned to Vicksburg and remained stationed here and in its vicinity, participating in July, 1864, in an attack on Yazoo City. Late in the fall of that year it left Vicksburg on transports, landed on the Louisiana side of the river and reached the point opposite Natchez, Mississippi, from there it proceeded to Baton Rouge on an expedition to Woodville, Mississippi, and then marched to Natchez, whence it again embarked for Vicksburg and then to Memphis, Tennessee. From here, in the winter of 1864-5, it moved into Arkansas, and then in January, 1865, entered upon a raid by way of Grand Junction, marching south to Vicksburg, being engaged at Egypt Station. From Vicksburg it again returned by boat to Memphis and then took station at La Grange Tennessee, being deployed east and west from this point along the Memphis & Charleston Railroads. It then proceeded to Memphis for muster out and on September 30, 1865, it started for Springfield, Illinois, which was reached on October 2d, and on the 20th of that month it received its final payment and discharge.

BATTALION 15TH CAVALRY, AND KANE COUNTY CAVALRY COMPANY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

The 15th Cavalry was organized from independent Cavalry Companies that had been attached to Infantry regiments. The Companies came from Alexander, Massac, McHenry and Winnebago Counties, Benton, Carbondale, Geneva, Aurora and Ottawa.

It moved with the army up the Tennessee river to Fort Henry, and then to Fort Donelson, then to Pittsburg Landing, where it participated in the battle of Shiloh April 6th and 7th. It also participated in the operations around Corinth and after the evacuation, it was stationed at Jackson, Tennessee. In November it moved to Corinth, Mississippi. In the spring of 1863 the regimental organization was perfected and Companies F, H and I became part of this regiment. Companies F and I, under Major James Grant Wilson, left Memphis with General Lauman's Division as Division escort, about May 13th, and arrived in the vicinity of Vicksburg about May 20th, and when the division took position on the left of the investing line about May 25th, this battalion was engaged in reconnoitering and outpost duty in the direction of the Big Black river. Company H of this regiment, during the siege of Vicksburg was known as the KANE COUNTY CAVALRY COMPANY. It left Memphis in December, 1862, in General Sherman's first operations around Vicksburg and participated in the campaign of Chickasaw Bayou and also of Arkansas Post. It was attached to General Blair's Division as escort at his headquarters. It participated in the Vicksburg campaign, crossing the river in time to be with the front of the army near Champion's Hill, Mississippi, on May 16th. During the siege, was engaged in outpost duty and reconnoitering. (Company I of this regiment was formerly attached to the 36th Illinois Infantry as Company A, Dragoons.)

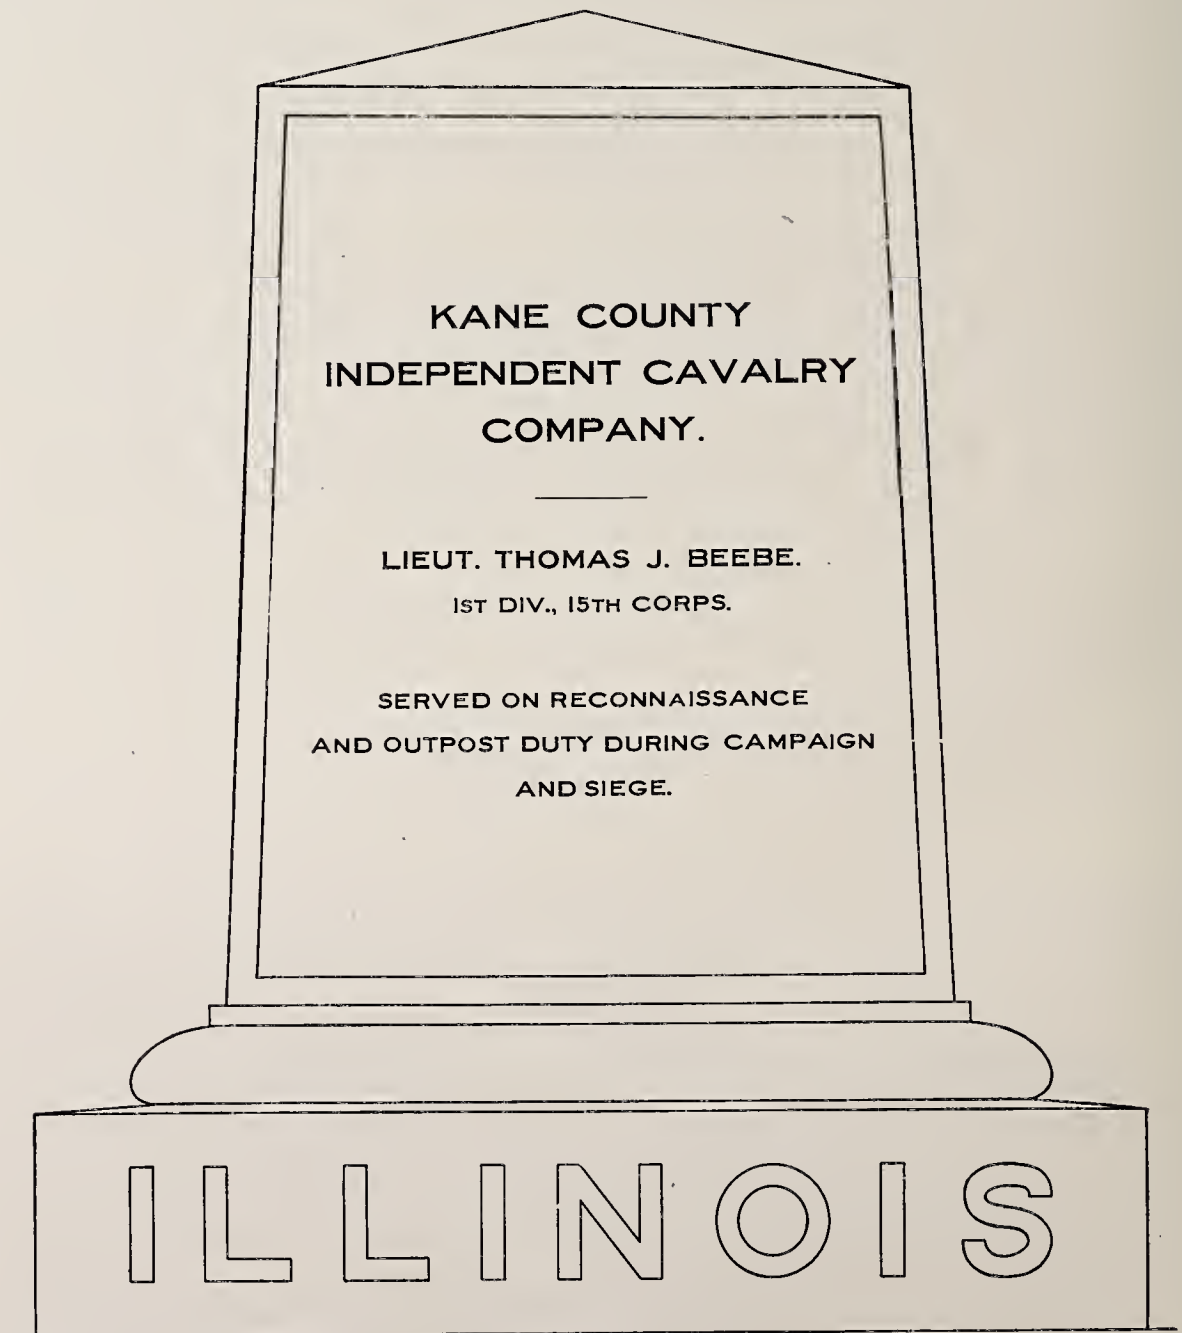

After the siege of Vicksburg, Major Wilson's detachment accompanied the Thirteenth Army Corps to the Department of the Gulf, and was stationed near New Orleans for several months. The regiment was re-assembled near Memphis and moved thence to Helena, Arkansas, where it did post duty and scouting in the vicinity from November, 1863, to August, 1864, when it was ordered to Springfield, Illinois, for the discharge of all the men whose term of enlistment had expired, which took place on August 25, 1864. The men whose terms of enlistment was not completed were consolidated with the 10th Illinois Cavalry and were later mustered out of the service with that command at San Antonio, Texas.

THIELEMANN'S BATTALION, CAVALRY, ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

This organization has its origin by the enlistment at Chicago in June, 1861, of a Cavalry Company that was intended to become General Fremont's body guard. It left Chicago under command of Captain Thielemann and moved to St. Louis, but General Fremont having selected another organization as his escort, this company was expected to become part of the First Illinois Cavalry, to which organization, however, it never was assigned. From St. Louis it moved to Paducah, Kentucky, where it was assigned to General W. T. Sherman's command. From here a detachment was sent to Smithland, Kentucky, at the junction of the Cumberland with the Ohio river. Here it remained during the winter scouting in the direction of Forts Henry and Donelson.

While on this duty, a second company, known as Company B, was recruited, mostly from refugees from Kentucky and the two companies were constituted a battalion designated by the name of its commander, Captain Thielemann, who had been promoted to Major. The original Company was designated as Company A. The battalion was ordered to Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, a week before the battle of Shiloh, where it performed mostly orderly and escort duty. It then took part in the movement on Corinth and after the evacuation of this place, it moved to Bolivar and thence to Memphis, Tennessee, where it spent the greater part of the winter, 1862 to 1863. It moved with General Sherman in his first attack on Vicksburg in December, 1862, and after the failure of his attack on Chickasaw Bluffs, it moved with the army to Arkansas Post and participated in the capture of that place with its five thousand prisoners.

It then moved to Young's Point and Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, and participated in the Deer Creek and Black Bayou expedition and assisted in the extrication of Admiral Porter's fleet, near Rolling Fork, Mississippi. It was part of General Blair's command in the feigned attack north of Vicksburg April 29, 1863. It crossed the Mississippi river at Grand Gulf with Blair's Division of Sherman's Corps and participated in the final Vicksburg campaign. Detachments of this battalion took part in the battles of Jackson on May 14th and Champion's Hill on May 16th and the entire battalion reached the defenses of Vicksburg near the Grave Yard road on the afternoon of May 18th, having crossed the Big Black river at Bridgeport in advance of Sherman's corps on the 17th. While thus engaged in front of the column, Lieutenant Lavigne, just as he reached the view of the Chickasaw Bayou on Walnut Hills, was mortally wounded. This is believed to have been the first casualty in the investment of Vicksburg. During the siege this battalion did escort and reconnoitering duty and acted by details as orderlies, at the various headquarters of the 15th corps.

After the surrender of July 4th the battalion accompanied General Sherman in his second campaign and capture of Jackson, Mississippi, and after that went into camp along Big Black river. In the autumn of 1863, it moved to Memphis and thence to Iuka, Mississippi. On the way there, the column of which it formed part, was attacked by General Forrest at Collierville and fought a successful engagement, lasting nearly eight hours. From Iuka the battalion moved to Chattanooga and participated in the battle of Mission Ridge and in the pursuit of the defeated Confederate army.

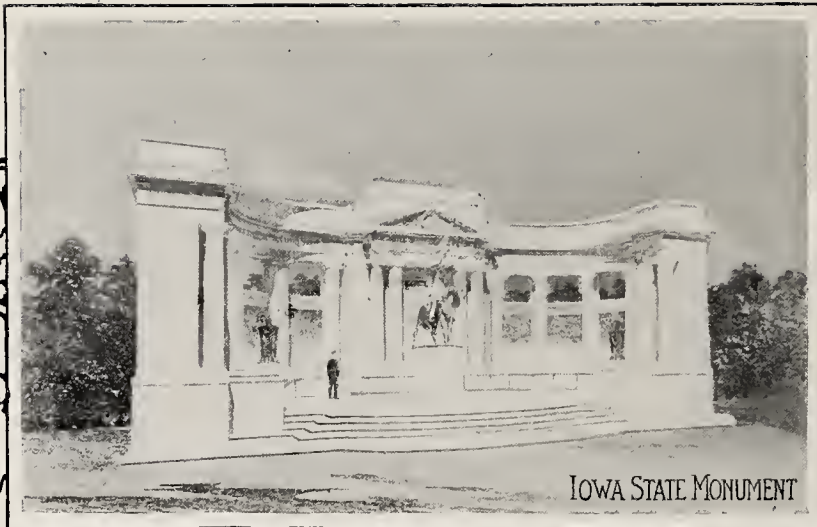

It next took part in the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville and afterwards went into winter quarters at Huntsville, Alabama. In February, 1864, the battalion was ordered to comprise Companies A and B of the 16th Illinois Cavalry. It was ordered to Mount Sterling, Kentucky. These two companies never actually joined the 16th regiment. While in Kentucky they were employed in assisting the fight against John Morgan on his raid and served at Lexington, Paris and Cinthiana, Kentucky.

The term of enlistment of the original men having expired they were mustered out of the United States service and sent home; the others joined the 16th Illinois Cavalry which as such never participated in the Vicksburg campaign.

STATE MONUMENTS OF OTHER STATES.

HISTORY OF ILLINOIS MONUMENTS IN THE VICKSBURG NATIONAL MILITARY PARK.

Early in May 1901, the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, being urged thereto by the veteran soldiers of the State, and especially by the Grand Army of the Republic, passed a bill creating a Commission to ascertain and mark the positions occupied by the Illinois troops in the siege of Vicksburg. This bill became a law on July 1st of that year, and in November Governor Richard Yates appointed and commissioned the members of this Commission. The following pages are re-prints from reports of this and the subsequent Commission. They tell of the conception of the plans and the progress and completion of the work of locating, designing and erecting monuments in the National Military Park at Vicksburg in honor of the soldiers from Illinois who served there in the campaign and siege, in chronological order.

AN ACT

Authorizing the appointment of a Commission to ascertain and mark the positions occupied by Illinois troops in the Siege of Vicksburg, and to make an appropriation to pay the personal expenses of said commission.

SECTION 1.—Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That the Governor of the State be, and is hereby authorized to appoint a Commission of eighteen (18) persons, not more than nine (9) of whom shall be selected from the same political party, each of whom was present and participated in the Siege of Vicksburg, who shall serve without compensation, and whose duty it shall be to co-operate with the National Commission in ascertaining and marking the positions occupied during said siege by each regiment, battery and independent organization from this State. And for this purpose they shall avail themselves of the knowledge and assistance of the representatives of such regiments, batteries and other organizations.

SEC. 2. The sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000) is hereby appropriated to pay the personal expenses of the members of said commission in the discharge of their duties aforesaid, and the Auditor of Public Accounts is hereby authorized to draw his warrants upon the State Treasurer for so much of the sum herein appropriated as may be necessary for the use aforesaid, on bills of particulars certified by said commission and approved by the Governor, and the State Treasurer shall pay the same out of any funds in the State treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Under the provisions of the act the following expenses, which have been duly audited and approved, were incurred:

For traveling expenses of commissioners.....	$1,641.73
To services of stenographers, books of record, postage, expressage, etc	62.50
For team hire in field work, maps, medical service, traveling case for records, telegrams and sundry petty expenses.....
Total	$ 290.98
Leaving a balance in State treasury.....	$ 4.79

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION APPOINTED PURSUANT TO THE ACT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY TO ASCERTAIN AND MARK THE POSITIONS OCCUPIED BY ILLINOIS TROOPS IN THE SIEGE OF VICKSBURG.

To His Excellency, RICHARD YATES, Governor of Illinois:

The undersigned members of the Commission appointed by your Excellency, pursuant to the terms and provisions of "An act of the General Assembly of this State, to ascertain and mark the positions occupied by Illinois troops in the siege of Vicksburg, and to make an appropriation to pay the personal expenses of said Commission, approved May 11, 1901, in force July 1, 1901," beg leave to submit the following report:

The members of the Commission met at the city of Chicago on Nov. 23, 1901, and formally organized by electing John C. Black, president; A. C. Matthews, vice president; George S. Durfee, secretary, and Charles R. E. Koch, assistant secretary and treasurer of the Commission.

In order to act more intelligently and to profit from the experience of a similar Commission appointed by this State to perform similar work and to discharge like duties upon the battlefields of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain, your Commission proceeded to Vicksburg by way of Chattanooga in April last.

The knowledge obtained by your Commission as a result of their study of the military parks in the vicinity of Chattanooga has proved of great value in carrying out the work authorized by the General Assembly. Six days were devoted to the necessary field work of locating the positions of the Illinois regiments, batteries and detachments serving upon the investment line during the famous siege.

We append a statement of the expenditures of the Commission, for which vouchers are on file with the assistant secretary and treasurer of the Commission.

We have also prepared a careful resume showing the number of Illinois troops engaged and the services rendered by them in the campaign and siege, together with a tabulated statement of the losses there sustained by the Illinois commands. Also a map showing accurately the siege lines of both armies, the fortifications, and the several positions occupied by the Illinois organizations, all of which are hereto appended.

There have been many changes in the topography of the siege lines, which have resulted from the growth or removal of trees, the deepening of roads, the leveling of elevations and the erosion of soil by water.

The essential positions occupied by the Union army during the siege of Vicksburg remain, however, well fixed, so that the difficulty in establishing the positions of regiments, batteries and detachments from Illinois, and the points of special interest attained by them during the progress of the siege, have, through consultation with the representatives of the several Illinois commands, and after conference with the officers of the National Commission, been satisfactorily determined.

While it was not practicable, in the comparatively short time at the command of the Commission, to locate with entire satisfaction the exact position of every Illinois command, yet we are glad to report that a very large majority of them have been fixed and established beyond any reasonable controversy, and whatever remains to be accomplished in this respect we believe will be done with comparative ease.

The general government has purchased 1,200 acres of land for a military park at Vicksburg, and upon this land it is intended by the national government, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to restore the forts, the lines of fortifications and the parallels and approaches of the opposing armies, and to open and construct roads, as well as to ascertain and mark with historic tablets or monuments the lines of battle occupied by the troops engaged in the assaults and the lines held by the attacking and defending forces during the siege.

The National Commission in charge of their work, under the direction of the Secretary of War, will also designate within the limits of this military park and its vicinity, in appropriate manner, the headquarters of General Grant, as well as other special points of historic interest pertaining to the siege and defense of Vicksburg.

The National Commission has also decided to construct two main roads or avenues, one along and in rear of the line of the Confederates' works, and the other along the line and works of the Union army, as these lines and works existed during the siege. When these roads and avenues shall have been completed, visitors and students of history and military science will be able to understand and appreciate the positions of the Union army from the points of view of the Confederate forces, and the positions of the Confederate forces from the points of view available to the attacking Union forces, and thus comprehend the almost insurmountable difficulties which confronted the Union army.

The military park at Vicksburg comprises a strip of land covering the entire line of the Confederate works from the Mississippi river on the north to the same river on the south, and also covering the ground of the Union investment lines from the National Cemetery on the north to a point on the Hall's ferry road on the south.

We deem it proper here to say that if Illinois desires to commemorate the services of such of her regiments and batteries as performed duty with Herron or Lauman upon the sites of their actual services, it will be impossible to do this under present conditions, as the land is not now owned by the national government. As many Illinois regiments served during this siege in the divisions of Generals McArthur, Lauman and Herron, between the Hall's ferry road and the Mississippi river to the south of Vicksburg, the omission of the government to acquire the necessary lands upon which the above named commands were located is seriously to be regretted; and we here express the hope that Congress will authorize the acquisition of sufficient additional land to include the site of the entire Union line in this military park system. This we deem essential in order that the preservation of the lines of the Union army may be as complete as those of the Confederate army.

During the visit of your Commission to the city of Vicksburg, we were advised of a purpose to alter the plan of constructing the two principal roads or avenues above referred to, and in order to prevent such changes in the plans of the National Commission, your Commission memorialized the Secretary of War to direct the National Commission to construct the roads according to their plan. The request contained in this memorial, a copy of which is hereto appended, was acceded to by Secretary Root, and the National Commission was directed by him to proceed accordingly. That Commission is now expending the sum of $130,000 in the construction of these two main roads or avenues.

Your commissioners, while at Vicksburg, discovered that the historic building, located near the center of the Union line during the siege, and known to the Union soldiers of that day as the "White House," was fast falling into ruin. This building, around which the events of those days clustered, was then conspicuous, and it is now, in the esteem of all, one of the distinguished landmarks of that siege worthy of preservation. With that end in view, your commission requested the Secretary of War to authorize the expenditure by the National Commission of the amount necessary to restore and preserve this historic structure.

The Secretary concurred in the views expressed by your Commission concerning the "White House," and accordingly it has been restored at the expense of the national government. It now appears, as it did in the spring of 1863, a memento designating "the thick of the fight" for the capture of the citadel of Vicksburg.

Illinois is justly proud of the achievements of her patriotic sons. Every heart-beat of her generous people vibrates with praise for the valor, courage, fidelity and victories of her "men at arms."

The past deeds of the soldiers from Illinois in all security is graven upon all our hearts. The glory and the grandeur of those deeds of heroic duty culminated in the matchless triumphs of the military campaign against Vicksburg in 1863. In the well considered judgment of the most accomplished soldiers of the world today, it was the best conceived, the best executed, the most successful, the most daring and the most brilliant military event of the 19th century.

The design of that unexampled military movement, and the command of the forces necessary to insure its triumphant success, belong to an Illinois soldier. No exhibitions of military genius, unwavering purpose, daring resolution and far-sighted wisdom from the beginning of the 19th century until its close are comparable with those of General Ulysses S. Grant in conceiving and consummating the marvellous plans and achievements which resulted in the surrender of General Pemberton with more than 31,000 officers and men of his command at Vicksburg on the 4th day of July, 1863. At every turn and at every point of danger in that memorable campaign the soldiers from the State of Illinois were conspicuous, and the members of the Commission feel that the people of the State will regard it not only a duty, but a privilege not to be overlooked, to contribute whatever may be necessary to commemorate the services of her soldiers and her sailors upon this most decisive battlefield of the war for the preservation of the Union.

Thus relying upon the patriotism and generosity of her people, your Commission obtained from the National Commissioners in charge of the Military Park at Vicksburg a reservation of land, amply sufficient for the erection by the State of Illinois of a suitable monument upon the position occupied by an Illinois battery at the "White House" on the Jackson road, and at about the center of the position occupied by the division of General John A. Logan during the entire siege.

The National Commission have also at the request of your Commission set apart additional ground within the Park lines, and at suitable places, where appropriate memorials and monuments may be erected for all organizations from Illinois which did not serve in the actual investment movements, but which, nevertheless, contributed with equal valor and fidelity to the ultimate success of the campaign; such commands as those which stood between the investment lines of the Union army in front of the Confederate fortifications and the line of the Big Black and Yazoo rivers, and those which maintained an efficient and watchful guard against the forces of General Richard Taylor in Louisiana, upon the west bank of the Mississippi river. Your Commission also includes in this report the duty of erecting a proper memorial for those who rendered services on the gun boats and transports under command of Admiral Porter.

During the war for the preservation of the Union the State of Illinois was represented by her soldiery upon nearly every great battlefield and in every campaign from the Potomac river on the east to the limits of the contest in the far west and upon every campaign and in every conflict of arms her sons won high praise.

It would be neither just nor chivalrous to discriminate in favor of the soldiers from Illinois, or against the heroic services rendered by soldiers from other states of the Union, in the campaign against Vicksburg, but in the number of her sons who participated in that conflict Illinois was pre-eminent; the result of her splendid service and of all the men from all the states, was the most important victory of the great war. It removed from the Mississippi river all obstructions to navigation, and restored the Union communications between the centers of the great west and the sea. It cleaved the Confederate states in twain, cut off its main armies from their source of supplies and recruits, and resulted in the capture of more than 31,000 officers and men within the Confederate fortifications alone, and to this number should be added more than 6,000 prisoners, captured in the several battles fought between Port Gibson and the gates of Vicksburg. This incomparable achievement of Grant's army broke the hearts and destroyed the hopes of the Confederate people, and unmistakably foretold the triumph of the Union. From the mortal wound thus inflicted by this great success, the Confederacy never recovered.

In this famous siege and in the operations necessarily attending it, Illinois furnished 79 different regiments, batteries and detachments, amounting to nearly one-third of all the troops engaged. More than 25 per cent of all those who fell or were wounded there were hers. She furnished more troops than any other four states, Ohio and Iowa only excepted, and more than both of those states combined.

Illinois was also conspicuous in that great event by reason of her many distinguished military commanders who participated there; and the illustrious general whose military and civic achievements have made his name and his fame immortal in all lands, and whose heroic deeds are now a part of the Nation's treasures, was from our proud State. Thus it happened that on this field of blood and sacrifice Illinois exhibited the greatest array of her sons that ever stood together in battle order. And where all were equal in valor, in patriotism and in the glory of great deeds, Illinois stands eminent by reason of her superiority in numbers, and by reason of the greatness of her leadership.

On other fields of renown Illinois has built and is now building monuments to mark the esteem of her people for the patriotic sacrifices made by her sons. Why should not our noble State then at Vicksburg, upon the highest land that rises between Cairo and New Orleans, and where once frowned the Gibraltar of the Confederate states; upon the highest elevation in a city whose history will never perish while deeds of valor and heroic purposes are accounted, at one of the most conspicuous and memorable points in all the battle regions of the Republic, erect to the memory of her sons, and in honor of their fidelity, a monument typical of the mighty victory and grand results which they helped to achieve?

It is the custom of the American people to commemorate the deeds of their heroes, and in the spirit of this custom at Gettysburg, Shiloh, Chickamauga and Antietam, priceless granite and bronzes testify the affection which the Nation bears for its patriot soldiers. On those historic fields made sacred through the sacrifices and blood of the American soldier unstinted wealth has been poured forth in lavish tribute.

The members of your Commission therefore hope that within the Military Park at Vicksburg, the site of the greatest and most memorable siege of the great war and of the greatest battlefield but one on the continent, a suitable monument may be erected by the State of Illinois, representative alike of its wealth, its patriotism and its prominence in that mighty event.

We, therefore, after careful consideration of the necessities of the undertaking, and with a full appreciation of the purpose and intention of our people as expressed in the act pursuant to which your commissioners were appointed, respectfully request that a sum of not less than $250,000 may be appropriated and expended, under proper restrictions, in the erection of a monument, and of markers within the National Military Park at Vicksburg for the several military organization from Illinois who participated in that siege.

We beg to call attention to the fact that our sister state of Iowa, represented in the Vicksburg campaign by only 32 different military organizations, has appropriated the sum of $150,000 to be expended in the erection of monuments in honor of the men from that state who fell and served there.

We also ask your Excellency to submit to the Legislature such recommendations and suggestions as you may deem proper in this behalf.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

LETTER TO SECRETARY OF WAR.

VICKSBURG, MISS., April 21, 1902.

The Honorable, The Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

SIR:—The undersigned respectfully represent that they constitute a commission appointed by the authority of the State of Illinois, to assist in designating and marking places occupied by Illinois troops during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg.

We were all present during the siege and participated therein.

In the discharge of our duties, we have been about the entire battle line, occupied by the Union and Confederate forces from the 17th day of May to the 4th of July, 1863, and have carefully, painstakingly, and conscientiously considered the question of the improvement of the military park of Vicksburg projected and now in process of development by the government.

We have gone to the respective points occupied by the nearly four score regiments and batteries of Illinois engaged in the siege and have assisted in designating the precise spots occupied by our troops in the campaign and in the fighting at this point.

We speak to you in the voice of former soldiers and of present patriotic citizens of a common country.

The government having determined to improve this spot we believe that the work should be done with regard to its permanence and its historical accuracy and to the great purpose for which the park is established, namely: to commemorate all the heroic qualities of the American soldier as exhibited by both sides here engaged and as well as the great victory here achieved for the national cause.

We respectfully represent that we believe history will declare that this was the greatest example of unflinching valor in attack and heroic defense afforded upon any such scale of magnitude in any war.

For 47 days and nights more than 100,000 men contended here for mastery. The hardships of neither army will ever be adequately told, nor their sufferings.

In one spot here are gathered 16,600 Union dead who perished in fights and service at and near Vicksburg. The Confederate dead rest where they fell, on every hill top and in every ravine occupied by their works.

The whole battle line is one vast graveyard and the number of the fallen can never be accurately determined.

The result of the successes of the National Arms at Vicksburg was that the Confederacy was cleaved in twain. The Mississippi river was open from its source to its mouth. The great armies of the Confederacy were separated from resources and supplies of every description and from their recruits. Their cotton trade with the foreign people, theretofore largely carried on by the Mexican line, was minimized and destroyed and the supplies of war munitions cut off.

In view of these facts we think that no reasonable and ordinary expenditure by the Government can be deemed extravagant in the perpetuation of this land mark in American history. Since the Government has resolved that it will mark this spot as one where estranged brothers fought, it should be so marked as to preserve on the surface of the earth, an accurate representation of the conditions as they existed during the struggle, to the end that the generations that come after us may know how their fathers bravely fought and fell in the defense of what each man among them, considered right. Any economy that may detract from this plan we believe will be unworthy of the survivors of the armies who struggled here, will be unfair to their memories and unjust to the future student of war and its vicissitudes and achievements. We therefore, earnestly request you not to consider the matter of economy too closely in view of the monumental nature of the enterprise, but that you will make such expenditure as will wisely and truly preserve this great field for the nation.

As between the two plans that are proposed for the improvement of the park, in view of all that we have seen now, and remember of the past, we earnestly hope that you will approve and follow the plan proposed by the National Commission, even if it costs thousands of dollars more than any other plan submitted to you.

Before concluding this memorial, we desire to call your attention to the fact that the government has shown no disposition to be parsimonious on its part and the states whose troops were on this field, are liberal and will be liberal to a degree. The state of New York, which had but three regiments and one battery here, has appropriated $12,500 for a monument in their honor. The state of Iowa has appropriated $150,000 for this purpose. Other states are yet to pass upon the matter and we speak with assurance for the State of Illinois, that she will not be found lacking in her generosity and that a sum proportioned to her forces here engaged, will be appropriated with pleasure by her Legislature.

Mr. Secretary, we are representatives of the whole body of Illinois citizenship. Men of divers political beliefs, religions, fortunes, etc., but all citizens of the State and the land of our love, and if we add to our signature a description of our employments, it is that you may know that in urging upon you a broad and liberal policy we speak for a great body of citizens, of veteran soldiers and of tax payers who must eventually pay for the increased work that we ask at your hands.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully,

To the Honorable Elihu Root, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR:—The undersigned, Commissioners of the State of Illinois, appointed to locate the lines and positions of Illinois commands and organizations during the siege of Vicksburg, beg leave to submit to you the following suggestions and request relating to the restoration and preservation of the Shirley House, within the limits of the Military National Park, at Vicksburg, Miss., and we solicit your careful consideration of the same.

When we began our work of locating our lines and positions on the 17th inst., being then on the ground, every eye at once sought for the Shirley House as a sure landmark; and we were much disappointed to find that it is no longer white, and that it is in such a state of decay that unless restored it will in a very short time wholly disappear. There are, in our judgment, very many reasons why that result should not transpire.

It is the only truly historical building within the limits of the park.

It is located on a high hill, on the road leading from Vicksburg to Jackson, the State capital, at the point where one of the first attacks was made on May 19, 1863, and where siege operations were begun a few days later.

It is located but a short distance from what might be termed the apex of the Confederate line of defense, in front of their strongest fortification, the "Third Louisiana Redan," which Gen. John A. Logan's division mined and blew up, and which was one of the storm centers of the siege.

During the entire siege it was a landmark from which, for long distances to the right and left of it, the troops engaged located their positions, and commanding generals computed distances and ordered movements.

During the siege it was plainly in view from many points on the lines of investment, in fact from nearly all the elevations of any consequence. It could be seen from Sherman's line near Fort Nogales on the right, from points on Gen. Lauman's front near the left and from many intervening points. If restored it would now be visible from the same points all along the lines.

It is mentioned in many of the orders and reports of the siege, and in many reports of casualties, and very frequently in the records of the National Cemetery at Vicksburg.

All old veterans who visit the field, look first of all, for the "White House," as it was called during the siege.

And those who, having read the history of the siege and shall hereafter visit the scene of that historic struggle, will look for that point as the one from which the best and most intelligent observations and study of the assaults and siege can be made. To the military student it will be of great importance and value. The cost of its restoration can not exceed more than $2,500 or $3,500 and, in our judgment, the expenditure of that sum of money for it would add more of permanent interest to the park than could be realized from any like sum expended for any other purpose.

We, therefore, very respectfully but most earnestly urge that the Vicksburg National Military Park Commissioners be authorized and directed to restore that historic landmark to the condition in which it was at the time of the siege, and that it may be so preserved.

Very respectfully submitted,

FRONT AND WEST END VIEW OF THE SHIRLEY HOUSE BEFORE RESTORATION, 1902.

FRONT AND WEST END VIEW OF THE SHIRLEY HOUSE AFTER RESTORATION.

SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM GOVERNOR YATES TO 43D GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

SPRINGFIELD, April 8, 1903.

To the Honorable, the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Pursuant to an act of the General Assembly approved May 11, 1901, I had the honor to appoint the Commission therein authorized.

The duties devolving upon said Commission under the said act, were to ascertain and mark the position occupied by Illinois troops in the siege of Vicksburg. These duties have been faithfully performed by said Commission, so far as it was practicable within the limits of $2,000 appropriated by the General Assembly for that purpose.

The report of that Commission, showing in detail the work done by it, was submitted to me at the beginning of the present session of the General Assembly, and is now in the hands of the binder having the contract therefor, and will be laid before the members of the Senate and House of Representatives for their information and consideration.

The Commission has ascertained from the official records that, in the memorable siege of Vicksburg, the State of Illinois furnished to the army of the Union in that most brilliant and effective military campaign of the Civil War, seventy-nine separate regiments, batteries, troops and commands, besides the large number of citizens of this State who served in the navy under command of Admiral Porter during the campaign covering the investment and siege of that most notable confederate stronghold.

In order to appropriately mark the positions occupied by the troops from this State at many different points along the Union line of investment from the point where the Union army commanded the Mississippi river and the city of Vicksburg on the north, extending around the entire city in front of the confederate fortifications to a point on the river west of the Warrenton road to the south of the city, the commission has estimated that the sum of $250,000 is necessary to complete the work and carry out the objects expressed in the act of the General Assembly so approved May 11th, 1901.

I have given the work of this Commission, the subject matter of its appointment, and the objects and purposes for which it has asked this appropriation, earnest and careful consideration. I most heartily approve and commend the work done by its members, and sincerely urge upon the General Assembly the appropriation of the amount estimated to be necessary to complete the patriotic purpose of the Legislature in authorizing its creation.

Suitable bills are already under consideration by the committees on appropriation in the Senate and House of Representatives respectively, and while I do not doubt the friendly interest of the members of the General Assembly to consider these bills favorably, I esteem it both a duty and a privilege to commend and request prompt and favorable action, upon the bills now pending, at the present session.

As was said by the martyred President in his ever memorable speech at Gettysburg, "The world will little heed nor long remember what we say here, but it will never forget what they did here;" so it may be said of the brave and gallant men who fought and struggled and suffered on the field of Vicksburg and in the campaign which resulted in its capitulation to the Union forces, that their deeds and heroism will endure forever.

The campaign of Vicksburg with its wonderful successes, and all of the lasting advantages resulting to the nation from those splendid achievements, was due to the almost matchless abilities of General Ulysses S. Grant; and the soldiers of the Union army who had volunteered from the State of Illinois, during that campaign and siege, bore a most conspicuous and memorable part.

Illinois was there represented by more than twice the number of regiments, batteries and other military organizations there engaged from any other State in the Union, and in the matter of leadership the men from Illinois were pre-eminent.

It is now conceded by students of military campaigns, that the one, which, under the command of General Grant, compelled the surrender of more than 31,000 veteran soldiers, within the strongest military fortress erected by the Confederate forces during the Civil War, was, in both conception and detail, almost without parallel in the annals of warfare. It was a campaign organized and carried on by the citizen soldiery of our republic. Every man of the number which made up the aggregate of the Union forces was a volunteer without compulsion, and every heart was loyal to the national Union, and to the flag which was its emblem.

The fall of Vicksburg was the first decisive demonstration that the Union of the States, as our fathers had created it, should endure, and that armed opposition to the rightful dominion of the National Government over any part of the soil of the United States could not prevail.

It is difficult for me, and I realize that it may be difficult for many of you, who in your department are joined with me in directing the affairs of the great commonwealth of Illinois, to realize the full measure of the sacrifices made by our fathers and brothers during the momentous struggle from 1861 to 1865 for the purpose of preserving the union of these states.

Up to the day when Vicksburg surrendered fear was in the way; doubt as to the final triumph of the Union arms was everywhere present; courage faltered, and faith weakened in the stoutest hearts; but when Grant and his heroic army had achieved the results which flowed from the capture of Vicksburg, the clouds of adversity which had hung like a pall over the nation began to disappear. All hopes were strengthened, faith in all loyal hearts was renewed, courage took on the form of valor, and from that hour the battle went bravely on, without defeat, or substantial disaster, until at Appomatox peace dawned upon a nation redeemed.

The building of durable and appropriate monuments to mark the places where brave men have struggled and fallen on the line of duty in defense of their country and its institutions, is not only the highest privilege of patriotism, but the most impressive evidence that succeeding generations appreciate both the value and necessity of heroic deeds.

The brave deeds of forgotten men have made a world for us, and the smallest tribute due from those who have benefited by noble daring and brilliant achievements is to mark upon imperishable lines the places where such deeds were done and such achievements attained.

Civilization has not yet led the race of man to that exalted station where the use of an armed and trained military force is not a necessity to organized society. The day of universal peace may be ushered in, when the nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks," and when "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more," but there is no promise from the past that heroic deeds and heroic men will not be the best heritage of a noble national life.

I most fervently trust that our generation will not hesitate to offer willing tribute to the noble men who fought and fell, and who by deeds of heroism conquered—not a people, but a peace, which has brought to us priceless benedictions.

Nearly forty years have rolled by since the loyal and brave men whose deeds we now have most fitting opportunity to honor, finished their work; the time for us to perform our duty is at hand. Shall we who were taught in infancy to lisp the names of the loyal men, who, at the risk of all that was most dear to them accomplished so much for us, falter in the performance of what seems to me, should be esteemed a most grateful duty?

Very respectfully submitted,

RICHARD YATES.

Governor.

THE ACT OF MAY 14, 1903.

AN ACT to Provide for the Erection of Monuments and Markers to commemorate the Services and Mark the Positions of Illinois Volunteers in the Campaign and Siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, and Making Appropriation Therefor.
—[Approved May 14; 1903. In force July 1, 1903.]

Section 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That, for the purpose of commemorating the services and marking by appropriate monuments and markers the positions of the several commands of Illinois Volunteers that were engaged in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, in the National Military Park, at that place, and also the services of those that were engaged therein but not actually in the siege lines, and to pay the actual expenses of the commissioners hereinafter created, the following provisions and appropriations in this act contained are hereby enacted and made.

Section 2. That, for carrying out the purposes of this act, the Governor shall appoint nine commissioners, to be known as the "Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission," who shall have participated in said campaign and siege, and were members of the Illinois commands engaged therein, to whom no compensation for services shall be paid, but who shall receive their actual expenses incurred in the performance of their duties, not exceeding in the aggregate the sum of nine thousand dollars to be paid out of said appropriation, and said commissioners shall make full report to the Governor of their acts and doings hereunder.

Section 3. The said commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to first make contracts for the construction, delivery, and erection of appropriate monuments and markers for each regiment and battery and detachment, or other organization of Illinois Volunteers that participated in said campaign and siege within the limits of said National Military Park upon the positions occupied by said several regiments, batteries, detachments, or other organizations to be made entirely of granite and to be appropriately inscribed, and also for the construction, delivery and erection of similar monuments and markers upon a central site set apart or to be set apart for that purpose by the Secretary of War of the United States, appropriately inscribed to designate the commands that participated in said campaign and siege but not actually in the siege lines; and, second, to make a contract or contracts for the construction, delivery, and erection of a State Monument, to be located upon the site already set apart for that purpose by the Secretary of War of the United States within the limits of said National Military Park, as a memorial to all the soldiers and sailors of Illinois who participated in said campaign and siege, the same to be of enduring stone and bronze, with all foundations and approaches, retaining walls, tablets, inscriptions, and memorials, the total cost of all which monuments and markers and other materials and work connected with the construction and erection thereof as herein provided for, together with the actual expense of said commissioners, shall not exceed the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Section 4. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is now hereby appropriated the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) to be applied thereto, so far as the same will reach, to be paid out of money in the State treasury, not otherwise appropriated.

Section 5. The Auditor of Public Accounts is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrants on the Treasurer, on the presentation of proper vouchers certified by said Commission and approved by the Governor, for the payment of the cost of said monuments and markers, and other material and work connected with the construction and erection thereof, to the extent of said appropriation hereby made, when the same shall be constructed, delivered, and erected in the places to be designated by said Commission in accordance with the terms and provisions of such contract or contracts to be made hereunder, and also to pay the actual expenses of said commissioners.

APPROVED May 14, 1903.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION.

CHICAGO, December 3, 1904.

To His Excellency Richard Yates, Governor of Illinois:

The undersigned, members of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, appointed pursuant to "An Act to provide for the erection of monuments and markers to commemorate the services and mark the positions of Illinois volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Miss., and making appropriations therefor," approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, respectfully submit their report of the acts and doings of such commission.

At the suggestion of of your Excellency, the commissioners met at Springfield, Ill., on Aug. 6, 1903, and formally organized the commission by the election of Commissioner John C. Black as president, Charles R. E. Koch as secretary and T. B. Orear as treasurer.

By-laws and rules for the conduct of the business of the commission were adopted at a meeting held in the city of Chicago Aug. 18, 1903. President John C. Black was absent from this meeting, and Commissioner A. C. Matthews was elected president pro tem, and as such presided over every subsequent meeting of the commission until Jan. 30, 1904. On this date your Excellency having informed the commission of the tender and acceptance of the resignation of Commissioner John C. Black, Commissioner A. C. Matthews was elected president and Commissioner Harvey M. Trimble president pro tem.

In March, 1904, Florus D. Meacham, of Chicago, having been appointed by your Excellency to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Commissioner John C. Black, qualified as a member of said commission.

At a meeting of the commission, held in July, 1904, pursuant to the by-laws, the following named officers were elected:

President—A. C. MATTHEWS, Pittsfield.

Vice President—H. M. TRIMBLE, Princeton.

Treasurer—T. B. OREAR, Jacksonville.

Secretary—CHARLES R. E. KOCH, Chicago.

The work of the commission has been carried on through five standing committees, as follows:

Committee on Designs—Riddle, Chairman; Noble, Matthews, Orear and Meacham.

Committee on Locations and Inscriptions—Koch, Chairman; Trimble, Noble, Matthews and Meacham.

Committee on Contracts—Trimble, Chairman; Orear, Moore, Matthews and Riddle.

Committee on Audits—Durfee, Chairman; Moore, Noble and Meacham.

Executive Committee—Matthews, Riddle, Koch, Trimble and Durfee.

These committees have had special care of the matters indicated by their titles, and have respectively submitted reports from time to time of their acts and doings, and of their views respecting the matters in charge of each, for the consideration and action of the entire commission.

The labors of preparing preliminary details are now nearly completed, and it is expected that at an early date the execution of the entire plans for the work to be done under said Act of the General Assembly will be put under the supervision of the Executive committee, composed of the president of the commission and the chairmen of the standing committees.

These commissioners fully appreciate the patriotic impulse of the Forty-third General Assembly in authorizing such liberal expenditures for the commemoration of the deeds of the men of Illinois, who fell, or fought and survived, in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, and they are deeply grateful to your Excellency for your kindly and helpful co-operation and sincere interest in the work imposed upon the commission.

The commissioners also fully appreciate the honor of appointment conferred by your Excellency. Each member has assumed the somewhat onerous duties with the single purpose to expend the funds appropriated for the work judiciously, economically, honestly and for the highest honor of our State.

The Committee on Designs was authorized, on Aug. 18, 1903, to employ the services of Major W. L. B. Jenney, an artist and architect of great skill and reputation, who was General Sherman's chief engineer during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, to aid the committee in the preparation of designs for the monuments and markers to be erected by the commission under the Act of the General Assembly. This employment was subject, however, to the condition that, until designs had been prepared and submitted, acceptable to the commission, no compensation should be paid Major Jenney, and that upon the acceptance of the designs for the work he should be paid not to exceed $200.00.

The chairman of the Committee on Designs devoted much time to the study of monumental art, both ancient and modern, and as a result of such painstaking consideration and study, conceived and presented the idea of a design for the State monument, which should not only be appropriate and classic in outline, but serve also as a temple of fame in which should be commemorated the names and the deeds of the heroic sons of Illinois during that campaign and siege.

The plan so conceived after months of careful and intelligent study and thought, with almost daily consultation with Major Jenney and others, and weeks of elaboration in the drafting rooms of Messrs. Jenney & Mundie, architects, under the supervision and scrutiny of the chairman of the Committee on Designs, took such tangible and acceptable form that it was unanimously reported and recommended for adoption by that committee to the commission. After a full discussion and careful consideration of the plans and design presented, covering a highly artistic and appropriate structure, and holding in view the purpose for which the same was to be erected, the report and recommendation of the committee was unanimously approved and adopted by the full commission.

Designs and drawings for regimental monuments and regimental markers were also prepared by Messrs. Jenney & Mundie, under the direction of the Committee on Designs, and submitted to and adopted by the full commission.

The design for the State monument as adopted was subsequently in some minor details modified, in order to bring its cost, together with the cost of regimental monuments and markers, within the amount contemplated by the General Assembly for both purposes, but such modifications have in no way detracted from the general grace and beauty of the design, but, on the contrary, the changes subsequently adopted, it is believed, will rather enhance its imposing grandeur and effectiveness under the peculiar topography of its situation. It is the desire and intention of the commission to make this monument, not only a grand and imposing commemorative structure worthy of the State of Illinois, but a temple of fame as well, within the walls of which will be preserved in enduring bronze and stone the name of every soldier from Illinois who participated in that memorable and decisive campaign and siege.

In a general way the conception of this monumental temple to be dedicated by Illinois as a tribute to the memory of those of her citizen soldiers who participated in the campaign and siege from March 29 to July 4, 1863, will recall the Pantheon and the Temple of Minerva Medica at Rome, classified by Ferguson as among the finest structures of the ancient world. This idea of a rotunda or a circular temple was adopted by the commission because it seemed most admirably suited for commemorating in enduring form the names and patriotic services and heroic achievements of the men who served in that campaign and siege.

In proportions the main part of this State monument, or memorial temple, will be a little over fifty-four feet in diameter, surmounted by a hemispherical dome, the crown of which will be a little over sixty-two feet in height. It will face the south, and the entrance to it will be under a Tetrastyle Doric portico thirty-two feet wide and projecting fourteen and one-half feet on the south facade of the temple. The pediment of the temple is supported by six Doric monolith columns of the Roman Doric style.

The pediment will be decorated with appropriate sculptures, consisting of the figure of a scribe supported by Fame and Valor with other suitable figures, the whole representing History enrolling the names of the Illinois soldiers and sailors of that campaign.

On the frieze under the center of the pediment will be inscribed in large raised letters the word "Illinois."

The external cornice of the temple proper will be surrounded by a cresting of eagles and shields, placed alternately, suggestive of both attack and defense.

This temple will be lighted from the top only by an opening, or eye, eleven feet in diameter at the apex of the dome.

Around the exterior of the temple at proper height will be engraved in large letters, beginning on the right, the immortal sentiment from Lincoln's second inaugural, "WITH MALICE TOWARD NONE, WITH CHARITY FOR ALL," and ending on the left, with the last words of General Grant's farewell order to the army, "LET US HAVE PEACE."

The massive steps leading from the Jackson highway will be built of gray granite, and the temple itself will be constructed of granite up to a level with the floor of the Portico, and above that of Georgia marble, so-called, but which in reality resembles a quartzite, very hard and quite as durable, it is believed, as granite.

The wall space of the interior around its entire circumference at a height of about seven and one-half feet above the floor, will be ornamented with a chastely designed frame, consisting of bronze panels between a base and cornice of gray marble. These panels will be sufficient in number and size to contain the names of all the men from Illinois, in the order of the organizations of infantry, artillery and cavalry to which they belonged respectively. There will be sixty-two of such bronze tablets, bearing the names in bronze letters large enough to be easily legible, of every officer and enlisted man from Illinois who participated in the Vicksburg campaign and siege.[†]

The entrance to the temple through its southern wall will be six and one-half feet wide, but there will be no door. Directly opposite and facing the entrance will be a large bronze panel, upon which will be inscribed in appropriate phrase, the dedication by Illinois of this monument, or memorial temple, to the memory of her sons who participated in that great historic campaign and siege.

Immediately above this large panel will be inscribed, first, the name, "Abraham Lincoln, President;" next below the name, "Richard Yates, Governor of Illinois." On the right of Lincoln's name, the name, "Ulysses S. Grant, Major General;" on the left of Lincoln's name, the name, "John A. Logan, Major General;" on the left of Logan's name, the name, "John McArthur, Brigadier General;" on the right of Grant's name, the name, "John A. McClermand, Major General;" and in the same way, on the right and left will be inscribed the names of Generals Carr, John E. Smith, Dennis, Ransom, Lawler and Orme from this State, who commanded corps, divisions and brigades in the campaign and siege. Below the names of the general officers from Illinois will be inscribed the names of Colonels Raum, Putnam, Pugh, Cyrus Hall, Loomis, Hicks, Sanford, Johnson, Englemann, Richmond and Neely from this State, who commanded brigades.*

The entire interior decorations with the inscriptions will be not only highly artistic in design, but unique in the construction of monuments for such purposes.

The exact site of the State monument, or memorial temple, is a small knoll on the north side of the Jackson highway leading from Vicksburg to Jackson, Mississippi, about 300 feet southwesterly from the Shirley house, which during the siege and since has been known as the "White House," within 60 rods of the strongest of the Confederate defenses, the apex of lines, known during the siege as Fort Hill, but now designated as the Third Louisiana Redan.

[†]This number of tablets was reduced to sixty, in order to give more width to each name and tablet.

*These names and their positions were somewhat changed in the final execution of the work.

The site is one of the most conspicuous within the limits of the Vicksburg National Military park, and is the point upon which was located during the siege the famous McAllister Illinois Battery, and the place where Captain Rogers, then commanding that battery, was killed on May 29th, 1863.

The floor of the interior will be of marble mosaic, displaying in the center the Seal of the State of Illinois, six feet in diameter.

The regimental monuments and markers are simple in design and uniform in size and style. The former are intended to commemorate the organizations and their services, the latter to mark and record specific services in the siege lines. Prints of these designs accompany this report.

There will be 79 of these regimental monuments. The number of markers necessary to carry out the purpose intended is to be determined during the meeting and field work of the commission to be held at Vicksburg on December 12 and 13, 1904.

The position occupied by Illinois troops along the siege lines were so well established by the commission created by the 42nd General Assembly, which preceded us, that our labors in this respect have been comparatively light. We owe it to the forethought of that commission that the most desirable and most appropriate site for the erection of the State monument was secured and reserved for Illinois by action of the Secretary of War. The site selected is the highest rise of ground between Cairo and New Orleans, and is about the center of the line of General Logan's division during the siege.

The scheme of the National Military park at Vicksburg provides for a general boulevard along the positions occupied by the Confederate troops, known as "Confederate avenue;" and a like general boulevard along the positions occupied by the Union Army during its siege operations, known as "Union Avenue." At a point south of the city "Union Avenue" merges into "Confederate Avenue," and near the point of this convergence a series of avenues deflect, known as "Indiana," "Iowa," "Wisconsin" and "Illinois" avenues and the "Warrenton Road." North of Union Avenue a roadway connects the National cemetery with the site of General Sherman's headquarters. This roadway is known as "Sherman Avenue," and it enters Union Avenue near a point where a roadway known as "Grant Avenue" connects with the site of General Grant's headquarters during the siege.

In December, 1903, the commission visited the field and located, by driving iron stakes, the sites upon which the 79 regimental monuments will be located. Each command that served in the siege lines will have its monument erected near Union Avenue, Wisconsin Avenue, Illinois Avenue or Warrenton Road, contiguous to its actual position in the siege lines. The commands serving in the exterior lines along the Big Black River, to check the operations of General Johnston's relieving Confederate army, who were under the immediate command of General Sherman, will have their monuments erected near Sherman Avenue; and the commands that served on the Louisiana side of the river, preventing succor to the besieged garrison as well as its escape by that route, and all unattached commands, will have their monuments placed near Grant Avenue; and the commands that served at the headquarters of the army will have their monuments near the site of General Grant's headquarters.

As Illinois troops were present at many points along the siege lines and were distributed conspicuously in all the exterior lines and performed whatever duty was assigned to them with like fidelity, courage, endurance and daring, so, now, the memorials erected in honor of these Illinois troops are to be distributed in like manner. They are intended to be typical in that they represent uniformity, simplicity, strength and endurance. As Illinois was then pre-eminent in her representation in the campaign and siege, so she now will be pre-eminent; her State monument will stand resplendent in grandeur over all others, visible from every point, and the uniformity of the regimental monuments and markers will cause the positions of Illinois troops to be quickly recognized by all future visitors. Illinois was everywhere in the campaign and siege and will be seen everywhere on the field through these memorial markings.

This arrangement and distribution, as well as the designs of the regimental monuments and markers and the design for the State monument with interior commemorative tablets has been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War.

The Committee on Locations has been engaged for more than a year in obtaining correct data for the names upon the regimental tablets. Lists of names have been prepared from the printed volumes of the Adjutant General's Reports of Illinois, eliminating therefrom all names of men whose services expired before the beginning or commenced after the close of the campaign and siege. This has resulted in the enrollment of 33,294 for the infantry, 2,310 for the cavalry and 1,574 for the artillery, making a total of 37,178 Illinois soldiers.

It is well known that the number who actually served in the campaign and siege is less than the enrollment, and efforts are now being made by correspondence with the survivors of the several organizations concerned to have their rolls edited and corrected to show the number and names of those who actually served.

We are indebted to over 300 commanders of posts of the Grand Army of the Republic and to more than 500 individual survivors with whom we have corresponded for valuable assistance. We feel assured that another year of continued labor and investigation in this direction will enable us to determine with approximate accuracy the names of all Illinois soldiers entitled to be on the bronze commemorative tablets in the State monument.

CONTRACTS.

On December 15, 1903, the firm of Jenney & Mundie, of Chicago, were employed as architects for the commission, and a contract was entered into with them in which they agreed to furnish all the necessary drawings, plans and detailed specifications for the State and regimental monuments and markers and the superintendence of the work of construction in the Vicksburg National Military park for the State of Illinois, as contemplated by this commission, for the compensation of 5 per cent of the cost of the State monument and an allowance of $600.00 for traveling expenses, they to receive no compensation on account of plans for, or the superintendence of the construction of, the regimental monuments and markers.

On March 12, 1904, plans and specifications for the regimental monuments, regimental markers, the State monument and the interior bronzes for the same having been adopted, the commission authorized letters of invitation to be sent to bidders under these specifications. In order to give the broadest publicity to this undertaking, advertisements were inserted in the following newspapers: Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.; Herald, Boston, Mass.; Tribune, Inter-Ocean, Chronicle and Record-Herald, Chicago, Ill.; Journal, Springfield, Ill.; Globe-Democrat, St. Louis, Mo.; Herald, Vicksburg, Miss.

A copy of this advertisement, as well as the letter of invitation to bidders, accompanies this report.

The invitation to bidders resulted in the receipt of 61 applications for the plans and specifications for the State monument and the regimental monuments and markers; and of seven applications for the plans and specifications for the interior bronze tablets. Full sets of blue prints and specifications were sent by express to each applicant.

On May 23 the commission met at Springfield and opened the bids. Only five proposals were received for the State monument, ranging as follows:

ILLINOIS AT VICKSBURG

FOR ALL GRANITE CONSTRUCTION.

F. J. McGraw, Vicksburg, Miss., from $275,000.00 to.....	$334,016.00
John Pierce, Chicago.....	217,714.00
Hughes Granite Co., Clyde, O., from $309,424.85 to.....	321,184.00
Culver Construction Co., Springfield, Ill.....	198,800.00

FOR GRANITE BASE WITH MARBLE SUPERSTRUCTURE.

F. J. McGraw, Vicksburg, Miss., from $334,500.00 to.....	$390,500.00
Culver Construction Co., Springfield, Ill.....	179,000.00

FOR GRANITE BASE WITH BEDFORD STONE SUPERSTRUCTURE.

F. J. McGraw, Vicksburg, Miss.....	$247,500.00
George Dugan, Bedford, Ind.....	161,609.00
John Pierce, Chicago, Ill.....	172,848.00
Culver Construction Co., Springfield, Ill.....	125,000.00

On the regimental monuments and markers there were 14 bidders, offering many varieties of granite, in eight and ten cut work, and these bids ranged from $26,420.00 to $45,160.00 for 80 regimental monuments and eighty regimental markers.

On the interior bronze work, four proposals were received, ranging from $12,565.64 to $65,000.00.

These proposals made it apparent to the commission that they would be unable to execute the proposed plans, as determined upon, within the amount permitted to be contracted for in the Act of the General Assembly, excepting under the bid of the Culver Construction Company. This company's proposal was the lowest; and yet, all things being considered, the commission thought it higher than should be paid for this portion of the work.

Accordingly the commission instructed the architects, Messrs. Jenney & Mundie, to devise plans by which the cost of construction might be diminished without sacrificing the beauty of the design or the strength of the structure, and at the same time saving its purpose and effectiveness.

A tentative award was made to the Culver Construction Company, and then suspended, with the understanding that in the event that they would agree to carry out the revised plans to be adopted by the commission, at a price to be agreed upon at a subsequent meeting, the award should stand.

On July 25 the revised plans were adopted by this commission. The mosaic floor and some other things not contemplated in the original plans to be done by the general contractor, were added to the new specifications. The suspension of the tentative award was set aside, and contracts with the Culver Construction Company of Springfield, Ill., were agreed upon for the furnishing of all materials and work and for the erection of the State monument for the sum of $162,400.00, and 80 regimental monuments and 80 regimental markers for the sum of $30,000.00, these latter to be in 12 cut work in place of eight and ten cut work as originally designated.

The award for the interior bronze work was made to the American Bronze Foundry Company of Chicago for $12,565.00

The contracts and bonds of the contractors, under these awards, were prepared by the chairman of the Committee on Contracts, approved by that committee and duly executed by the commission and the Culver Construction Company, August 20, 1904; and with the American Bronze Foundry Company, October 20, 1904. A copy of each contract and bond is hereto attached.

These contemplate the completion of the entire work on or before the first day of January, 1907, but it is hoped that this time may be shortened very materially.

AUDIT.

The expenditures of the commission, as shown by the Secretary's books, and the report of the Auditing committee, and for which the vouchers are on file in the office of the State Auditor, have been as follows:

To architects	$ 4,950.00
To expenses of Secretary's sundries.....	183.28
To models, maps, printing, engraving, furniture, stenography and services	2,010.08
To railroad fares, hotel bills and personal expenses of Commissioners	1,684.90
Total expended	$ 8,826.26
Balance available	141,171.74
Appropriation by the 43rd General Assembly on account.....	150,000.00

RECOMMENDATIONS.

It is estimated that under the contracts already let, with the entire sculpture work not yet provided for, the full amount contemplated in the Act of the 43rd General Assembly, creating this commission, $250,000.00 will be required. We, therefore, unanimously recommend that the additional amount of $100,000.00 be appropriated by the next General Assembly to enable this commission to complete the work contemplated and contracted for, and that the entire sum of $250,000.00 be kept available until the completion of the work.

Before closing this report, we, each for himself, and collectively as a commission, feel it both a duty and a pleasure to say, that no veteran of the volunteers from Illinois who served in that campaign, unequaled as it was in the far-sighted wisdom of its conception and the brilliancy of its execution, can ever forget or fail to appreciate the high sense of patriotism, the tireless energy, effective services, sincere interest and kindly sympathy displayed by your illustrious father during the days and months of that most arduous campaign and siege. Nor do we feel it less a pleasure to extend to your Excellency our sincere thanks, individually and collectively, for the timely co-operation and unselfish interest shown by you in the labors, committed by your partiality, to our hands.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THE ACT OF MAY 18, 1905.

AN ACT to provide for the re-appropriation of the unexpended balance of funds appropriated in and by an act entitled, "An Act to provide for the erection of monuments and markers to commemorate the services and mark the positions of Illinois Volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, and making appropriation therefor," approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903; and also to make additional appropriation for the completion of said monuments and markers mentioned in said act, and for the dedication thereof, and for the compilation and publication of a report thereof and of the acts and doings of the commission thereby created.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois represented in the General Assembly: That, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of an act entitled, "An Act to provide for the erection of monuments and markers to commemorate the services and mark the positions of Illinois Volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Miss., and making appropriation therefor," approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, so much of the said sum of one hundred and fifty thousand ($150,000) dollars appropriated in and by said act, for the purposes in said act specified, as shall not be expended on or before the thirtieth day of September, A. D., 1905, is hereby re-appropriated from the State Treasury of Illinois, for the purposes specified in said act, the same to be expended and paid out in accordance with the provisions of said act.

SECTION 2. For the purpose of providing sufficient funds for the payment of the total expenditures contemplated in and by said act, approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, mentioned in the first section of this act, there is now hereby appropriated the further sum of one hundred thousand ($100,000) dollars, to be expended by and under the direction of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, created by said act, for the purposes in said act specified, out of moneys in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same to be paid out in the manner specified in said act above mentioned.

SECTION 3. The Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission is hereby authorized, when the work contemplated by the act approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, is completed, to make an appropriate dedication of said State monument or memorial and such other monuments and markers, and for the compilation and publication of a report thereof and of the acts and doings of said commission in such behalf, and for such purpose there is hereby appropriated the sum of ten thousand dollars out of any moneys in the State treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SECTION 4. The Auditor of Public Accounts is hereby authorized and directed to issue his warrant on the State Treasurer for said sum of ten thousand dollars upon the certificate of said commission, signed by its president and secretary and approved by the Governor.

Approved May 18, 1905.

THIRD REPORT TO THE GOVERNOR.

December 13, 1906.

To his Excellency, Charles S. Deneen, Governor of Illinois:

The undersigned, the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, herewith respectfully submit the report of their acts and doings since submitting the last report on December 3, 1904, in accordance with "An Act to provide for the re-appropriation of the unexpended balance of funds appropriated in and by an Act entitled 'An Act to provide for the erection of monuments and markers to commemorate the services and mark the positions of Illinois volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Miss., and making appropriation therefor,' approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903; and also to make additional appropriation for the completion of said monuments and markers mentioned in said Act, and for the dedication thereof, and for the compilation and publication of a report thereof and of the acts and doings of the commission thereby created." "Approved May 18, 1905."

BREAKING GROUND FOR THE STATE MEMORIAL TEMPLE, DECEMBER 13TH, 1904.

REGIMENTAL MONUMENTS AND REGIMENTAL MARKERS.

The commission at Vicksburg, Miss., on Dec. 12th and 13th, 1904, after again carefully inspecting the field, determined to designate the firing lines of the sharpshooters of each Illinois command that served on the investment line during the siege, by a marker upon the site of its closest approach to the Confederate works. It also decided that the camps of Illinois commands that were during the siege, upon ground now located within the National Military Park should be designated by markers. The position occupied by Illinois infantry commands in their assaults upon the Confederate works on May 19th and on May 22d, 1863, it had previously been determined to designate by properly inscribed markers, and it had also been previously determined to provide a marker for each company of cavalry that served in a detached way from their regiments as escorts to general officers. The total number of markers that were thus determined upon and that have been erected is eighty-five; their design, inscriptions and distribution are shown in an exhibit hereto attached marked "A." The total number of regimental monuments required and erected is seventy-nine. The design, inscriptions and distribution of the regimental monuments are shown in an exhibit made part of this report marked "B."

After consulting with the national commissioners, and having obtained the views of the War Department with reference to the matter involved, our commission found it necessary to make much more extended inscriptions upon the regimental markers and the regimental monuments than we had contemplated when letting the contracts for the same. It had, however, been provided in the contracts for their construction that the average number of letters in the inscriptions should be the same as shown on the designs; and in the event that more or less than the number shown on the designs should be necessary they should be paid for in addition to or deducted from the contract price, at the prices for lettering of the different sizes according to a scale to be submitted by the contractor. The contractor in accordance with the stipulation had submitted the schedule of prices fixed by the stone cutters' union of the United States which had been accepted by the commission and the prices agreed upon for the addition or deduction was this schedule, plus ten per cent (10). Under this arrangement the commission had to pay the sum of two thousand two hundred and twelve dollars and twenty-four cents ($2,212.24) for additional lettering in the inscriptions upon these monuments and markers.

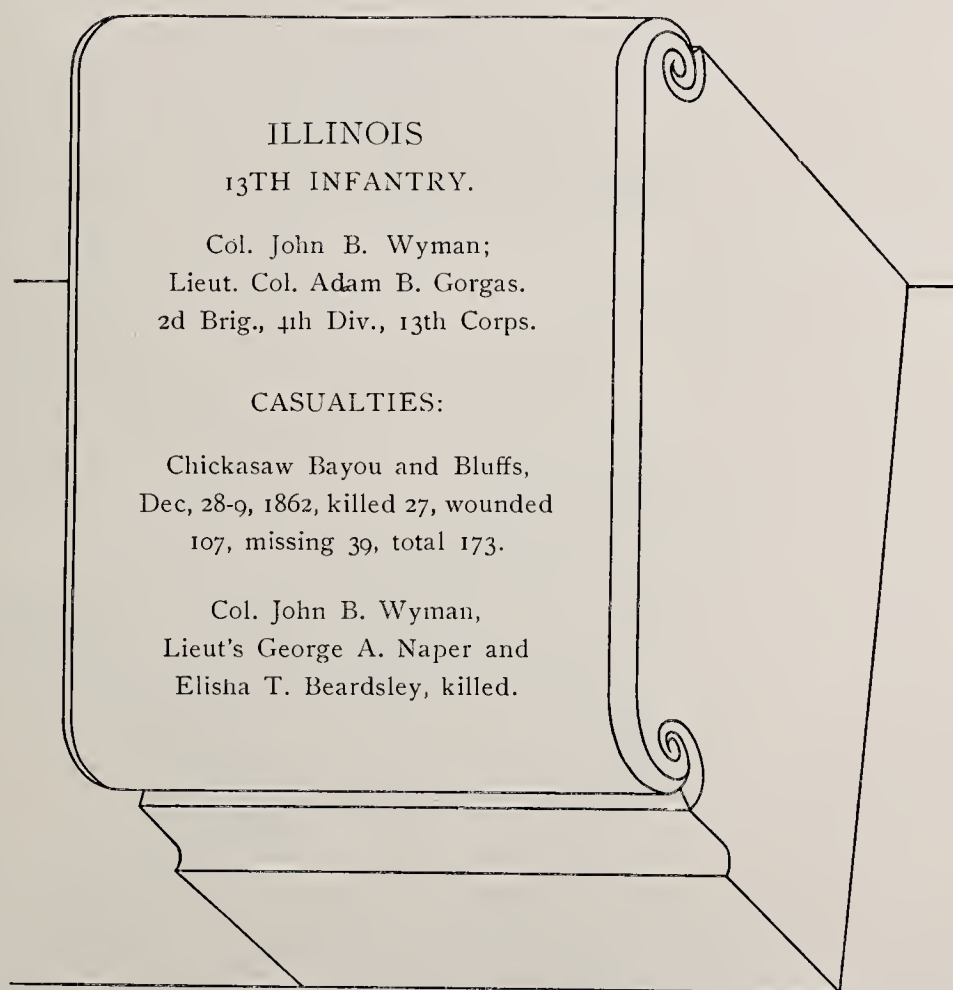

Upon a visit of our commission at Vicksburg we discovered that the regimental monuments already in position, due to the grade of the ground upon which they rested, had the word "Illinois" in raised letters upon the face of the base stone almost concealed from view by the growing grass. The commission determined to remedy this difficulty and requested the architects to prepare plans and specifications for additional bases for seventy-nine regimental monuments, twenty-seven of which had already been placed. Their design providing for placing an additional base eight inches high under these monuments, was accepted and approved, and the contract for constructing the same was awarded to the Culver Construction Company with the advice and approval of the architects, for four thousand nine hundred and eight dollars and fifty cents ($4,908.50), inclusive of all the work of re-setting. The changes were made under the provisions of their contract under the section providing for "extras." This has greatly improved the appearance of the monuments and has overcome the difficulty with the grass completely.

All the regimental monuments and regimental markers were completed and in position and accepted by the commission on April 19, 1906, when the final warrant for payment for the same in full was drawn in favor of the contractors.

The War Department has fixed the day of the beginning of the Vicksburg campaign as the 29th of March, 1863; General Grant in his memoirs fixes the beginning on Nov. 2, 1862. In December of that year General Sherman made an attack along the north line of Vicksburg upon Chickasaw Bluffs, which he had reached by water by way of the Yazoo river and Chickasaw bayou. In that engagement five Illinois infantry, three cavalry and four artillery commands participated with a total loss of 193 officers and men. The Thirteenth Illinois infantry sustained a loss in this action of its colonel and two other officers and 170 additional men. During the siege of Vicksburg this regiment occupied a position not very far removed from the place of their assault in December of 1862. Only one marker had been assigned to this regiment by our commission to designate its service during the siege, and we felt warranted in securing and placing a marker to commemorate this distinguished service of this Illinois regiment during the December campaign. A marker has been procured and placed, on ground purchased by Commissioner Noble, immediately contiguous to the National Military Park along Union avenue and nearly opposite to, and across the road from, the regimental monument erected by this commission to commemorate the service of the Thirteenth Illinois infantry during the siege.

The inscription on this marker is as follows:

NOTE: This marker is of the exact type and outline of the eighty-five markers erected along the investment line in commemoration of the specific acts of the Illinois commands upon the locations marked by them. These are not reproduced in this volume as the legends they bear are summarized in the inscriptions upon the regimental monuments placed along the avenues in the rear of the lines each command covered during the siege operations.

SETTING THE FIRST STONE, APRIL 8TH, 1905.

It is expected to tender this ground and marker to the national government to be embraced in the Military Park at an early date. The expense of this marker was only in part borne by this commission, from whose funds the sum of sixty-two dollars and thirty-one cents ($62.31) was paid for the same.

THE STATE MONUMENT AND MEMORIAL TEMPLE.

Ground for the building of the State Monument and Memorial Temple was broken on the afternoon of Dec. 13th, 1904. The commission accompanied by Capt. Wm. T. Rigby, Gen. Stephen D. Lee and Capt. James S. Everest, the National Military Park Commissioners, and a number of guests assembled on the site now occupied by the completed structure, and after prayer by the Rev. A. R. Morgan, a veteran of the Eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, each lady and gentleman present in the party turned a spadeful of sod. All commissioners were present excepting Francis A. Riddle, who had been detained at home by illness.

The government of the United States prepared and built the foundation for the exterior walls of this structure, and for the coping, upon which the super-structure was placed by the contractors, the Culver Construction Company, of Springfield, Ill. The building except the interior bronze work was completed about April 1, 1906.

During the progress of construction, the commission had several meetings at Vicksburg and members of it frequently inspected the work, watching carefully its progress under the direction and supervision of Mr. W. B. Mundie, the supervising architect.

When the contract for the State Memorial Temple was let, it was understood by our commission that the national commissioners would set the foundations for the entire work, including the filling in of the large interior space of the temple and the placing of the concrete foundation ready to receive the mosaic floor. After the ground had been broken for this monument and part of the foundation for the interior walls of it had been excavated, it seemed best to our commissioners, with the advice of the architects, to raise the base course of the monument five feet higher above the ground than it was at first intended. Our commission was informed, however, by the national commissioners that they had been misunderstood and that they could not possibly do the filling that this increased height would require nor place the concrete work upon it so that the mosaic floor might be placed thereon. Our commission was, therefore, forced to provide a proper foundation for the floor of the temple. Messrs. Jenney, Mundie & Jensen, the architects, were asked to prepare plans and specifications for this foundation and submit them to the commission. They recommended the construction of an arched re-enforced concrete floor with an estimate of its cost. The Culver Construction Company, the general contractors, were employed to do this additional work at a cost of two thousand and fifty dollars ($2,050.00) under the provision for "extras" as provided for in their original contract No. 3 with this commission.

When we submitted our report in December, 1904, to your predecessor, Governor Richard Yates, the designs for the eagle to surmount the pediment of the portico of the State Memorial Temple and for the group in the tympanum of the pediment of the portico and the sculptures for the three panels over the entrance door, under the portico, had not been determined and no contracts for the same had been let. Mr. Fred C. Hibbard, of Chicago, was engaged in February, 1905, to make a model of an eagle to the acceptance of the commission and its architect and to furnish a plaster cast thereof, ready for reproduction in bronze for the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250.00). Mr. Charles J. Mulligan, of Chicago, was invited to prepare a design and to model a group for the pediment of the portico, and he was also invited to prepare models of medallion busts of President Lincoln, General Grant and Governor Yates, the War Governor, to be set in three separate spaces left vacant for them in the outside wall of the temple, over the doorway and under the portico. After submitting many designs, the commission finally approved of one composed of three female figures in high relief, representing the north and south reconciled in peace leaning toward the figure of history sitting enthroned between them and recording their deeds. They also approved the medallion busts as now placed. They awarded to Mr. Charles J. Mulligan the contract for reproducing the group in selected white Georgia marble and medallion busts and the inscriptions on all in the same material for the sum of six thousand dollars ($6,000.00). The contract to reproduce the bronze eagle from the model furnished by and accepted from Mr. Fred C. Hibbard was given to the American Bronze Foundry Company for the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000.00).

On Dec. 9, 1905, the commission again visited Vicksburg and made a thorough inspection of the progress of the State Memorial, also inspecting in detail each regimental monument and marker on the field and compared and checked up the inscriptions thereon.

It had been planned to leave the doorway entrance space an open aperture, but the commission feared that to do so might expose the bronze inscription on the interior to defacement by vandals and tramps. The commission, therefore, authorized the architects to design a bronze gate or grill for the entrance so that persons might be excluded from this temple at night and during certain hours in each day. Plans for such gate were prepared by the architects and bids for its construction taken and an award made to the American Bronze Foundry Company for seven hundred ninety-one dollars and sixty-five cents ($791.65), they being the lowest bidders. The Brown Brothers Manufacturing Company offered to do this work for nine hundred and eighty dollars ($980.00) and the Winslow Brothers Company for fifteen hundred and ninety-five dollars ($1,595.00).

The names of Abraham Lincoln and twenty-two general officers and acting general officers from Illinois have been cut, together with the designation of their commands, in the marble tablets surmounting the bronze tablets which bear the names of the soldiers of the various organizations. This lettering was not covered by the original contract for the building, as the determination of how to place them and where to place them and the manner of doing the work could not be determined upon until the interior walls had been completed. The contract for this work was given to the Culver Construction Company for the sum of four hundred and sixty dollars ($460.00), this price being within the union schedule of the American stone cutters and it was included in the contract with said firm as provided for under the paragraph of "extras."

It was discovered that during certain conditions of light the sunken letters in the marble were not strongly legible. It was also found that the bronze eagle upon the apex, by reason of its dark color, presented too sharp a contrast with the pure white marble, and the commission, therefore, authorized the eagle to be covered with gold leaf, and the sunken letters of the names of the general officers and the inscriptions upon the medallion tablets of Lincoln, Grant and Yates to be lined with bronze gilt so that the same would be more easily readable. The award to do all this work was given to Mr. Charles E. French, of Vicksburg, for three hundred dollars ($300.00) for the eagle, he being the lowest bidder, and for one hundred dollars ($100.00) for gilding the inscriptions.

INSCRIPTIONS.

Around the medallion bust of Lincoln is engraven this text in sunken letters:

"The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battle field, and patriot grave, to every living heart and hearthstone, all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature.

A. LINCOLN."

The following text has been inscribed around the medallion bust of General Grant:

"We have but little to do to preserve peace, happiness and prosperity at home, and the respect of other nations. Our experience ought to teach us the necessity of the first; our power secures the latter.

U. S. GRANT."

These are the words sunken in the marble around the bust of Governor Yates:

"God forbid that I should say aught in malice against the south. I look beyond the blue waves of the Ohio and upon the green hills of Kentucky, and there is the grave of my mother.

RICHARD YATES."

Opposite to the entrance of the Memorial and occupying one of the dodeconal sections of the interior wall has been placed the dedicatory bronze tablet with the inscription in large bronze letters:

ILLINOIS ERECTS THIS MONUMENT IN GRATEFUL REMEMBRANCE OF THE SERVICES, THE SUFFERINGS, THE SACRIFICES AND THE DEVOTION OF HER SONS WHO PARTICIPATED ON LAND AND WATER, IN THE CAMPAIGN AND SIEGE OF VICKSBURG FROM MARCH 29 TO JULY 4, 1863.

THE NAMES ENROLLED WITHIN THIS STRUCTURE, IN MARBLE AND BRONZE, ARE OF THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF ILLINOIS WHO SERVED IN THAT MEMORABLE CAMPAIGN AND SIEGE AND WHO FILLED THE RANKS OF THE SEVENTY-NINE ILLINOIS ORGANIZATIONS IN GENERAL GRANT'S ARMY.

THE PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS, FREE OF MALICE, FULL OF CHARITY, DEDICATE THIS MONUMENT AS A MEMORIAL TEMPLE TO ENDURING HARMONY AND PEACE; AND AS A SHRINE AT WHICH ALL MAY AGAIN AND AGAIN RENEW THEIR CONSECRATION TO LOYAL CITIZENSHIP, AND GATHER INSPIRATION TO THE MOST UNSELFISH AND EXALTED PATRIOTISM.

NOT WITHOUT THY WONDROUS STORY
ILLINOIS, ILLINOIS,
CAN BE WRIT THE NATION'S GLORY
ILLINOIS, ILLINOIS.
ON THE RECORDS OF THY YEARS
ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S NAME APPEARS
GRANT AND LOGAN AND OUR TEARS
ILLINOIS, ILLINOIS.
A. D. 1906.

There are also arranged upon the other sections of this interior wall sixty bronze tablets, upon the face of which are displayed in raised letters the names of every Illinois soldier, so far as such names could be ascertained, who served with his command during the Vicksburg campaign or siege. Fifty-nine of these tablets are devoted to the names of the seventy-nine organizations from Illinois that participated in the campaign. These tablets begin at the left of the entrance with the staff, next the cavalry, then the infantry, in numerical order, and finish next to the right of the entrance, with the artillery. Fifty-three infantry organizations are displayed upon fifty-two tablets, fifteen batteries have three tablets and ten cavalry organizations and one infantry detachment cover four tablets. One tablet is devoted to the names of men from Illinois who served in the staff corps away from their commands which were not in this campaign and who could not, therefore, be commemorated with their commands.

The inscription upon the tablet of the staff is as follows:

"STAFF.

THIS TABLET CONTAINS THE NAMES, SO FAR AS THEY CAN BE ASCERTAINED, OF THE OFFICERS AND MEN FROM ILLINOIS, WHO SERVED UPON THE STAFF OF GENERAL GRANT, OR OF THE CORPS, DIVISION AND BRIGADE COMMANDERS, AND ALSO OF THOSE FROM ILLINOIS, WHO SERVED IN THE NAVY OR MISSISSIPPI MARINE BRIGADE DURING THE CAMPAIGN AND SIEGE OF VICKSBURG. THESE, AND THE NAMES INSCRIBED IN BRONZE ON THE INTERIOR OF THIS MEMORIAL, WERE COMPILED BY THE ILLINOIS-VICKSBURG MILITARY PARK COMMISSION FROM THE RECORDS OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS."

The inscriptions and names within this monument were prepared as the result of nearly four years of study and consideration and were adopted and approved from time to time and step by step. As our commission decided upon a point it was necessary to obtain the approval of the Secretary of War before its execution.

In this connection we beg to state that our commission had intended to place upon the staff tablet the name of Frederick D. Grant and Otto H. Matz. Frederick D. Grant, then a youth, was with his father, General Grant, throughout this campaign and on several occasions performed duties as a staff officer although he was not at that time a soldier mustered into the service. At the battle of Big Black River Bridge he was wounded and our commission would have been glad to have put his name upon the Illinois staff roll of honor. "Major Otto H. Matz, Illinois Volunteers," of Chicago, is referred to in the Rebellion Records published by the general government as performing valuable engineering service during the early portion of the Vicksburg campaign. Frederick D. Grant and he had not been mustered into the United States service and the War Department did not, therefore, permit their names to be placed upon this roll.

The compilation of the nominal record of Illinois men upon the interior wall of the Illinois Memorial Temple embracing the names of 32,345 infantry, 2,391 cavalry, 1,571 artillery, ten general and thirty-eight staff officers, in all 35,355, was made extremely difficult by reason of the fact that the only reliable and positive records of the men participating in the Vicksburg campaign are contained upon the muster and pay rolls for April 30th and June 30th, 1863, which our commission never doubted would be available for their use at the time they adopted this method of commemoration of the Illinois participants by name. We were greatly disappointed when informed by the chief of the Bureau of Records and Pensions of the War Department that these muster rolls would not be permitted to be used. A former Secretary of War had forbidden their further examination by reason of their physical condition. It then became necessary to prepare rolls for each company of the Illinois commands from the published Adjutant General's reports of Illinois. The name of each officer and each man who appeared from these reports to have been enlisted before the period of the Vicksburg campaign and discharged subsequent to it were enrolled upon triplicate company rolls. The posts of the Grand Army throughout this State were written to for the names of the surviving members of companies raised within their vicinity and the newspapers of the State were invited to print a circular letter asking surviving soldiers of that campaign to communicate with this commission. Some six months after the beginning of this system, it was found that no survivors had been heard from, from more than 250 companies. The commission then addressed Capt. L. M. Kelly, the Deputy Commissioner of Pensions at Washington, asking him for the addresses of at least three living survivors for each of these companies. We wish here to acknowledge our thanks for Captain Kelly's painstaking co-operation with us and the valuable information he gave us. Our commission after a thorough canvas prepared card indexes of more than 37,000 names, and carefully revised these before preparing the copy arranged for the use of the bronze foundry. We greatly fear that in spite of our labors and care, errors of omission and spelling may have occurred, but having been denied the only positive source of information available, this was the only resource open under the circumstances and our commission made the most of it.

LOCATIONS.

During the progress of our work we encountered some difficulty by reason of the uncertainty of the correctness of established locations, and also on account of the fact that in some instances commands from other states claimed positions which had been located for our own commands and challenged the correctness of our locations. In order to set at rest all doubt about these questions, we invited ten veterans representing the Eighth, the Eleventh, the Seventeenth, the Forty-seventh, the Ninety-ninth and One Hundred and Thirtieth Infantry and the Chicago Mercantile Battery to accompany the commission during some of its visits. The information obtained from these men greatly assisted our commission in the final establishment for the markers and monuments. The expenses incurred on account of their journeys amounted to $520.90.

DEDICATION.

The regimental monuments and markers and the State Memorial Temple, all having been completed, our commission after consulting with your Excellency, decided to dedicate the same and transfer them to the care and keeping of the national government. We were desirous of setting apart for this purpose a week in the middle of November, but the national commissioners informed us that that time would be occupied by the people from Iowa, who were to dedicate their monuments Nov. 14th and 15th, and we were, therefore, compelled to fix an earlier date for the ceremonies and chose Oct. 25th, 26th and 27th.

Forty-five hundred invitations were printed and distributed by mail to attend the dedicatory exercises. A copy is furnished herewith and marked "Exhibit C."

The people of Vicksburg and Mississippi having expressed a desire that the Illinois ceremonies of dedication should be attended by a regiment of the National Guard of Illinois, your Excellency gave consent that the First Illinois Infantry National Guard might perform escort duty to the State officials and commissioners on the occasion, and that the wishes of the southern people in this connection might be gratified, if the necessary funds for this purpose could be obtained in a private way, as there was no State fund available for that purpose. The citizens of Chicago being appealed to raised the necessary amount and placed the same in the hands of a committee of which Col. B. A. Eckhart was chairman, and on the morning of Oct. 24, this regiment left Chicago on two trains over the Illinois Central Railroad. Another train was also made up in two sections at Chicago and Springfield and joined as one at Mattoon. This carried the Governor of the State, State officials, members of the Legislature, the commission and a number of veterans and guests to the extent of 225. The troop trains and the official train made their first stop at Jackson Miss., where they were received by a military escort and conducted to the state capital. Here Governor Vardaman extended proper courtesies to your Excellency and the Illinois delegation and joined the party, together with his staff, from thence to Vicksburg. On arriving there in the evening of the 25th, the Illinois party was received with great cheering and demonstrations by the people and a salute fired by the Warren County Artillery. A reception was given in honor of your Excellency and Governor Vardaman, which was followed by a ball given by the people in honor of the occasion, in a pavilion especially constructed by them for that purpose.

On Friday, October 26th, the military and civic parade was formed in the streets of Vicksburg, the column moving to the Illinois Memorial Temple, where they arrived punctually at 12:30 p. m., the hour set apart for the beginning of the ceremonies. A copy of the program arranged for this day, and of which 2,000 copies were printed and distributed, is submitted with this report marked "Exhibit D."

Saturday, the 27th, was devoted to inspecting the monuments and visiting the National Cemetery and the battle ground. At midnight the official party and guests and First Infantry departed for New Orleans, reaching Baton Rouge at 6 o'clock a. m. on the morning of the 28th, where they were received with salvos of artillery and a most cordial welcome by all the people and especially by Governor and Mrs. Blanchard and the state officials. Governor and Mrs. Blanchard and his staff honored us by traveling on our train and with our party. At New Orleans the First Infantry made a parade on the 28th and gave an evening parade in the city park on the 29th. The guests on the official train tendered the commissioners a banquet at the St. Charles Hotel on the evening of the 29th; this very gracious compliment was highly appreciated.

Having enjoyed the hospitality of New Orleans, the official party and guests and the First Infantry departed for Memphis, where they arrived early in the morning of the 30th. Here they received boundless hospitality and attention. The party left in the evening of that day and reached their homes in Illinois on the 31st of October.

During the campaign of Vicksburg, the soil of Louisiana furnished the base for General Grant's operations before crossing the river into Mississippi on April 30th and the early days of May. During the siege, where now stands our State Memorial Temple, was placed, in the midst of a number of Illinois regiments, Battery D, First Illinois Artillery, which sent over 5,000 shot in the direction of the frowning Confederate fort immediately in its front. This fort was the center of strength of the Confederate lines commanding the gateway of the city along the Jackson road. One of Illinois' greatest chieftains, Gen. John A. Logan, struggled to get possession of this point, which we then called Fort Hill. On the 25th of June he blew it up with a tremendous charge of gunpowder, having undermined it previously. Throughout the siege the Confederates called this fort the Third Louisiana redan. It was commanded by General Herbert, of Louisiana, and defended principally by the Third Louisiana Infantry.

During the period of the siege four Illinois infantry regiments, an Illinois battery and an Illinois cavalry battalion were stationed on the Louisiana side of the river opposite Vicksburg to prevent supplies or reinforcements being sent to the beleaguered city from that direction, and also to prevent the Confederates from escaping should they determine to give up the city. Louisiana, Mississippi and Illinois were all factors in this contest, and as the people of these southern states expressed a desire to have the Illinois visitors at Vicksburg receive the hospitalities further south, our commission believed that it was incumbent upon them to reciprocate their tender of hospitality and friendly feeling towards us of Illinois.

These reasons prompted our commission to extend the ceremonies of dedication beyond the territory of the park and to visit Jackson, Miss.; Baton Rouge and New Orleans, La., and to accept an invitation from the mayor and people of Memphis to stop a day in their city on the return home.

It is the belief of the participants in the dedication exercises that the extension of the journey beyond Vicksburg and the exchange of friendly greetings by our people with those of Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee, and our acceptance of their hospitality, was an appropriate climax to the building and dedication of the Illinois Memorial Temple.

APPROPRIATIONS AND EXPENDITURES.

The total appropriation made available for the use of this commission by the 43d and 44th General Assemblies was.....$260,000.00

Expenditures have been made upon duly authorized and audited vouchers which are on file in the office of the Auditor of State, as follows:

RECOMMENDATIONS

As it will probably be shown that errors have been made in the compilation of the names on the bronze tablets, we recommend that authority be given to correct these, so far as possible, and that the expense involved in such corrections upon the bronze tablets be authorized and provided for.

We recommend the compilation and publication of a volume to be entitled "Illinois at Vicksburg," reciting what Illinois did during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg in 1863, and also what a later generation of Illinoisans have done from 1901 to 1906 to commemorate the deeds of her sons by monuments and markers within the National Military Park at Vicksburg. This volume should contain the names of all the Illinois soldiers displayed upon the bronze tablets upon the inner wall of the Memorial Temple and these names should be arranged in alphabetical order, and the place given from which the soldiers enlisted, so that it may become a work of easy reference not only to themselves but to their descendants in future years. It should be fully illustrated and gotten up in the best style of the printer's and engraver's art, so that it may assume the nature of a monument in the public and private libraries of the people of our own State, where it may be of easy access to them. It should be in full harmony with the spirit of the State Memorial Temple erected by our people in the National Military Park at Vicksburg. This volume should rank among publications of this sort as did the services of Illinois soldiers at Vicksburg, and as do Illinois monuments in the Military Park now located there. It should be to the Illinois soldiers who fought at Vicksburg and to the citizens of our State what the volumes published by New York and Pennsylvania are to their soldiers, who fought at Gettysburg, and to the people of those states.

We further recommend that the unexpended balance of appropriations made for the Vicksburg monument and markers be made available, and that in addition thereto an appropriation of $5,000.00 be made, to pay for the expenses of compiling, editing, printing, binding and distributing of this historical book, and that the bill prepared with this end in view may have the emergency clause attached to it so that the completed work may be in the hands of those interested at the earliest possible date.

Inasmuch as the State of Illinois has expended large amounts of money in the several National Military Parks, we suggest the propriety of the appointment by the Governor of an inspector of Illinois monuments, whose duty it shall be to visit and inspect the monuments erected by the State outside of its boundaries, at least once in each year, and to report on their condition to the Governor, to the end that steps may be taken looking to their especial care and preservation. Such inspector to receive his actual traveling expenses and $10.00 per day for each day actually engaged in this work. The total expenditure on this account not to exceed $600.00 in any one year.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

We desire to acknowledge our obligations to Capt. Wm. T. Rigby, Gen. Stephen D. Lee and Col. James G. Everest, the commissioners of the Vicksburg National Military Park, for their courtesies and coöperation extended to us during the five years of our labors in conjunction with this work, who did everything their position permitted to facilitate our labors and whose frequent assistance and continued sympathy with our efforts have been of great value to us.

To Mr. Wm. B. Mundie, the architect, who so efficiently put into execution and completed into practical reality the dream and conception of the design for the State Memorial Temple submitted to us by his senior partner, Major W. L. B. Jenney, we feel greatly indebted. He served with artistic zeal and professional skill, which was strongly reinforced by love for the work, patriotism and State pride.

Our thanks are also extended to Gen. J. S. Culver and the Culver Construction Company, the builders of the monuments; the American Bronze Foundry Company, who furnished the bronze tablets and other work; and to Mr. C. J. Mulligan and Mr. Fred C. Hibbard, sculptors, for the faithful and conscientious manner in which they executed their contracts. Each and all of them seemed inspired to do things that should redound to the honor and glory of Illinois and of her soldiers. They appeared to consider their contract price stipulations as only secondary in their efforts.

To Governor Vardaman and the people of Mississippi, and to Mayor B. W. Griffith, Mr. Harry K. Johnson and Mr. Frank Andrews, and to all the citizens of Vicksburg, we wish to extend our thanks and acknowledgments for their generous hospitality, and especially for their enthusiastic support and assistance during the days and in the ceremonies of our dedication. We are also indebted to the school children and Mr. J. P. Carr, the superintendent of schools, for their singing of patriotic songs.

To Governor and Mrs. Newton C. Blanchard, our commission and our guests at the dedication are particularly indebted for distinctive marks of their hospitality, and we also desire to express our appreciation for the kindly greeting and warm welcome given us by the people of Baton Rouge, New Orleans and the State of Louisiana.

The dedication exercises were greatly enhanced by the presence and services of the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard. We desire to acknowledge our thanks to the citizens of Chicago whose generous contributions made it possible for this command to perform this tour of duty. To Col. J. B. Sanborn and the officers and men of the regiment and its magnificent band, we desire especially to extend our deep sense of obligation. Pride swelled the heart of every Illinois veteran at Jackson, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Memphis as they looked upon this splendid body of young soldiers. Their discipline and training when under arms elicited plaudits of approval everywhere, and their gentlemanly conduct when off duty, and in the streets of these cities, was commented upon by citizens generally. Their conduct was worthy of all praise and has added another laurel to the garland of Illinois soldiers.

The commission feels that they were fortunate, indeed, when they obtained the consent of the Hon. Wm. J. Calhoun to become the orator of the Dedication day ceremonies. They desire in this public manner to acknowledge their deep sense of obligation to him for his magnificent oration.

We desire to express to your Excellency our appreciation of your coöperation, sympathy and support in the work intrusted to us, and to particularly thank you for your presence and participation in the exercises of dedication.

Very respectfully,

A. C. MATTHEWS,

THE ACT OF MARCH 19TH, 1907.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That, for the purposes of the compilation, editing, publication and distribution of a commemorative and historical volume, to be entitled, "Illinois at Vicksburg," showing the services of Illinois troops during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, in the year A. D. 1863, and also showing what a later generation of Illinoisans have done, from 1901 to 1906, to commemorate the services of the sons of Illinois in and during that memorable campaign and siege, by the erection of regimental monuments and markers and a State monument, or memorial temple, in the National Military Park at Vicksburg, Mississippi, and to pay the expenses and cost thereof, the following provisions and appropriations are hereby enacted and made:

2. That for carrying out the purposes of this act, the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, created and appointed by and in pursuance of an act entitled, "An Act to provide for the erection of monuments and markers to commemorate the services and mark the positions of Illinois Volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, and making appropriation therefor," approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, is hereby authorized and empowered to compile, edit, publish and distribute, or cause to be compiled, edited, published and distributed, the said commemorative and historical volume mentioned in the first section of this act; the said volume to contain the names of all Illinois soldiers and sailors appearing upon the bronze tablets, or carved in stone; upon the inner walls of the Illinois State monument, or memorial temple, erected in the National Military Park at Vicksburg, Mississippi, arranged in alphabetical order, as nearly as shall be practicable, and stating the places from which said soldiers and sailors enlisted, so that the same shall be a work of easy reference for them, and for their descendants in future years; the said volume to be so illustrated that it will be in the nature of a monument, in harmony with the spirit of the State monument, or memorial temple, erected by the people of Illinois in the National Military Park at Vicksburg, Mississippi; and the same shall also contain all the acts of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois authorizing the erection of said regimental monuments and markers and State monument, or memorial temple, together with a substantially complete statement of the proceedings of said Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission in the erection thereof, and of the amounts of money expended in that behalf; and the same shall also contain such other historical facts, information, matter and things, relating to the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, in the year A. D. 1863, during the civil war, and connected therewith, and relating to the services of Illinois soldiers and sailors therein, as said commission shall deem desirable to be inserted in said volume.

3. The said commission, mentioned in the second section of this act, are hereby authorized and empowered to contract for the compilation, editing, publication and distribution of said commemorative and historical volume, mentioned in the first section of this act, with such competent and responsible persons as said commission may select for the several respective parts of said work; and the person or persons employed to do the work of the compilation of the matter to be contained in said volume, and the editing and distribution thereof, may, or may not, in the discretion of said commission, be a member or members of said commission, any law of this State to the contrary notwithstanding. And said commission shall make full report to the Governor of its acts and doings under this act.

4. That, for carrying out the purposes of this act, so much of the appropriations made and provided in and by the said act mentioned in the second section of this act, and in and by another act entitled, "An Act to provide for the re-appropriation of the unexpended balance of funds appropriated in and by an act entitled, 'An Act to provide for the erection of monuments and markers to commemorate the services and mark the positions of Illinois Volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, and making appropriation therefor,' approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903; and also to make additional appropriation for the completion of said monuments and markers mentioned in said act, and for the dedication thereof, and for the compilation and publication of a report thereof, and of the acts and doings of the commission thereby created," approved May 18, 1905, in force July 1, 1905, as shall not be expended on or before the thirtieth day of September, A. D. 1907, is hereby re-appropriated from the State treasury of Illinois, and devoted to and for the purposes specified in this act, after the actual expenses incurred by the members of said commission in the performance of their duties shall first be paid out of the same, and the same shall be expended and paid out in accordance with the provisions of this act; and for the purpose of providing sufficient funds for the payment of the total expenditures contemplated in and by this act, there is now hereby appropriated the further and additional sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000), to be paid out of moneys in the State treasury not otherwise appropriated; and the said moneys hereinabove mentioned and appropriated, shall be expended by and under the direction of said commission, and paid out in the manner hereinafter in this act specified.

5. The Auditor of Public Accounts is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrants on the Treasurer, on the presentation of proper vouchers certified by said commission and approved by the Governor, for the payment of the cost and expenses of the compilation, editing, publication and distribution of said commemorative and historical volume, in accordance with the terms and provisions of such contract or contracts as shall be made by said commission in pursuance of this act, and also for the payment of the actual expenses of the members of said commission incurred in the performance of their duties under this act.

6. All laws, and parts of laws, in conflict with the provisions of this act, or with any of the provisions hereof, are hereby repealed.

7. WHEREAS, An emergency exists, therefore this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

APPROVED March 19, 1907.

The Illinois Central Railroad moved three special trains from Chicago between 12 and 2 o'clock P. M. on Wednesday, October 24th; the first two trains carried the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard, eight hundred men, rank and file, as escort of honor. The last train carried a number of State officials, Members of the Legislature, invited guests and the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commissioners. To this train was attached, at Mattoon, the cars bringing Governor Deneen, his staff, other State Officials and distinguished guests who had started from Springfield; this train moved thence, with the troop trains in advance, to Jackson, Mississippi. American Tourist Association's Dining Cars will be attached to this special train of Pullman cars and remain with it throughout the journey. Three meals will be served every day, and it is expected that the members of the party will live upon the train, unless they prefer to leave it at Vicksburg or New Orleans.

At the capital city of Mississippi, the entire party debarked, having been re-received by the Governor's Staff. Under a military escort furnished by the Mississippi National Guard, a short parade, lead by the 1st Infantry, Illinois National guard, took place, terminating at the magnificent new capitol of the State, where the party was received by Governor James K. Vardaman and State Officials and escorted through the building. The trains having been late in arriving at Jackson, the visit there had to be shortened. All re-embarked, and accompanied by Governor Vardaman and his Staff, consisting of Brigadier-General Arthur Fridge, Colonel Walter Weaver, Colonel W. T. Bolling, Colonel J. D. Money, Colonel R. V. Rachford, Colonel C. C. Wyatt, Major Frank Craddock, Major W. L. Smith, as the guests of Illinois, proceeded over the A. & V. Railroad to Vicksburg.

THE RECEPTION.

Upon arrival at this famous City, salvos of artillery and a most enthusiastic gathering of people greeted the Illinois visitors. The City was gaily decorated in their honor, and the old Court House steeple, which during the days of the Campaign and Siege had been a conspicuous point of interest to the Union soldiers, who looked longingly toward it from afar, was most beautifully illuminated with electric lights, which shone a glad welcome of the people of the Gibraltar of the Mississippi, upon their new, but now welcome, invaders.

In the evening Governors Vardaman and Deneen received a most happy assemblage at the Elk's Club, and then all adjourned to the pavillion nearby, which had been erected by the generous and hospitably disposed citizens of Vicksburg for that occasion, where the dedication ball was already in progress.

THE BALL.

The charming young ladies of Vicksburg and vicinity and their special guests upon this occasion soon took command of the young soldiers of Illinois and Mississippi, and the ball, a most charming and long-to-be-remembered social event; but the affair was also honored by stately dames and grizzly veterans of Mississippi and Illinois. The Illinois Commission felt particularly honored in having present on this occasion, and, in fact, throughout all of the functions of the dedication, Mrs. M. M. Champion, the lady of the Manor of Champion's Hill, upon whose plantation, during her residence there, was fought the great battle of the Vicksburg campaign, and the Commission was equally honored to have present with them Mrs. John A. Logan, whose husband, the great Illinois chieftain, did so much to contribute to the Union victory upon the field this plantation furnished.

THE PARADE ON GROVE STREET—TO BALDWIN'S FERRY ROAD.

THE PARADE.

The parade was formed and moved punctually at the hour appointed, led by Commissioner C. H. Noble as Marshal, and his staff. Governor Deneen and his staff, consisting of Generals Thomas W. Scott and E. C. Young, Colonels E. R. Bliss, H. S. Dietrich, B. A. Eckhart, B. M. Chipperfield, Randolph Smith and Captains Frank S. Dickson, J. H. Lewman, Ogden T. McClurg and A. I. Simmons rode at the head of the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard, which was followed by companies A, B and F, 3d Infantry, Mississippi National Guard, and by several hundred invited guests in vans and carriages. It proceeded by way of Washington, Monroe and Grove Streets to the Baldwin's Ferry Road, thence along Confederate Avenue to the Jackson Road, arriving at the Illinois State Monument ten minutes before the time announced for the beginning of the ceremonies of the dedication. A detail of the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard, had preceded the parade, as had also the Warren County Artillery, Battery "E" of the Mississippi National Guard.

As the parade entered the Jackson Road, the Governor's salute was fired by the Warren County Artillery. The Illinois soldiers had maintained clear spaces for the occupation of the official party and distinguished guests. Punctually at 12:30 o'clock the assembled throng was called to order, and the ceremonies of dedication proceeded in accordance with the Program.

BENEDICTION

Immediately after this song, the guests will enter and inspect the Memorial Temple, while the Warren County Light Artillery fires the National Salute.

At 4:20 p. m. the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard, will hold a regimental parade and review near Confederate Avenue, and south of the surrender monument, on the ground occupied by the First Ohio in 1904, as their camp.

*Governor Blanchard was prevented by imperative official duties from being present.

ENTERING CONFEDERATE AVENUE

THE PARADE ENTERING ILLINOIS MEMORIAL CIRCLE—FIRST ILLINOIS INFANTRY—ESCORT OF HONOR—AFTER THE MARCH.

THE DEDICATION.

The President: That portion of the audience located on the steps had better be seated. Make yourselves as comfortable as possible.

If the audience will now be at attention, the exercises of the day will be commenced by prayer. The Reverend A. R. Morgan of Illinois will invoke the divine blessing.

Mr. Morgan: Let us pray! Eternal ever-living God, our gracious Heavenly Father,

We bless thee for that spirit of patriotism and profound gratitude which moves the heart of the people of our great State, Illinois, to meet in commemoration of the personal sacrifices which were made here more than a generation ago, that Government by the people, for the people, might not perish from the earth.

We meet this day in special service to commemorate the lives and deeds of the men, living and dead, who by their courage and valor have made conspicuous their names in history and enshrined them in the hearts of their grateful countrymen, and we bless thee for them and for what they did.

We would honor them in these services of dedication of this monument, erected by the munificence of the people of our State, where we trust it will stand for ages to come as the finger of God pointing to the paths of peace and prosperity.

We pray thee let the benediction of thy love rest upon those who originated the plan, and upon those who have so successfully carried it forward to its completion.

Bless those who shall take a part in these exercises and those whom they this day represent.

Bless, O God, our country, the President of the United States, the Governors of the various commonwealths.

So long as there shall be men upon this earth, so long may this Republic endure, and grow richer in intelligence and morality. May war never again desolate the land, but may all our people, north, south, east and west vie with each other in their efforts to show who best can serve and best can live. We ask all in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

REV. ALANSON R. MORGAN.

The President: The school children of Vicksburg will now favor us with a song.

Song: "We are tenting tonight on the Old Camp Ground."

The President: The law under which these monuments and these regimental markers were constructed requires the Commission to render an account of what we have done. The Secretary will report a resume of our actual doings on the part of the Commission for the information of all concerned. Secretary Koch will have the attention of the audience.

The Secretary: Mr. President, since having completed the sketch of the work of our Commission, I received a letter from "Private of Company K, First Infantry, I. N. G." in which were enclosed lines written by him "in the hope that they would be accepted and used in the dedicatory services at Vicksburg." I regret that he writes anonymously. The sentiments he expresses fit the place and the occasion admirably. I will take the liberty of giving to a prosaic official report a poetical prologue. While I cannot claim authorship of the words I am about to read, the sentiment expressed finds a responsive chord within my own heart:

"The scene is fair; on every side Vistas of beauty break in view:
The Light, the Sun, the Sky, the Clouds, the Hills bathed in the sparkling dew;
The Forests, spreading o'er the Slopes to River, Bayou and Ravine, Tossing their branches high in air, clothed in their dress of vivid green, Till, in the distance far away, the blue sky joins the misty grey.

"In days gone by this beauteous scene gladdened the eyes of other men.
The same blue sky and changing clouds spread over forest, field and fen.
But with the perfume of the flowers mingled the sulph'rous Battle smoke.
And 'mid the ranges of the hills the Cannons' mighty echoes broke,
While in the distance far away was seen the host of Blue and Grey.

"On that dread day, where now is peace, the God of Battle had his throne,
And where his mighty glances turned, was heard the Battle's shock and moan.
The volleys crashed in quiet dells, the rushing Charger shook the ground,
While Hell and Furies seemed to rage, and Foemen strove to kill or wound;
Till, when the field in moonlight lay, 'twas heaped with bleeding Blue and Grey.

"Rest to the Brave! Aye, let them rest amid these noble hills in peace.
Their courage sanctified the land and caused all bitterness to cease.
Their blood has washed this Nation clean, and made us great and wise and free.
Honor the Brave and let their name be spread abroad from Sea to Sea.
In honoring them we stand today as Brothers of the Blue and Grey."

On May 11, 1901, an Act passed the General Assembly of the State of Illinois which authorized the appointment of a Commission to ascertain and mark the positions occupied by the Illinois troops in the siege of Vicksburg, and appropriated Two Thousand Dollars for this purpose. This Commission consisted of eighteen members, each of whom was a participant in the siege of Vicksburg.

In compliance with this Act, Governor Yates on November 14, 1901, appointed John C. Black of Chicago, A. C. Matthews of Pittsfield, John Frith of Watseka, J. A. Edmiston of Clinton, Patrick A. Galvin of Pana, J. M. Vernon of Chicago, Charles R. E. Koch of Chicago, John H. Robinson of Cairo, Carroll Moore of Benton, T. B. Orear of Jacksonville, John B. Reid of Greenville, Leroy L. McKinley of Ottawa, C. E. Bassett of Austin, C. H. Noble of Dixon, Harvey M. Trimble of Princeton, Francis A. Riddle of Chicago, Geo. S. Durfee of Decatur and W. L. B. Jenney of Chicago, and convened them to meet at the State House, Springfield, November 14th. Only eight members were present at this meeting. They effected a temporary organization with Charles E. Bassett as chairman and Geo. S. Durfee as secretary.

The next meeting was held at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, November 23, 1901. General John C. Black was elected president; Captain Geo. S. Durfee, secretary; Colonel A. C. Matthews, vice-president, and Colonel Charles R. E. Koch, assistant secretary and treasurer. The Commission made its first visit to Vicksburg on April 17, 1902, and established a number of locations for regimental monuments and markers with the assistance of the National Commissioners. They also selected the site upon which the State Memorial Temple now rests and memorialized the Honorable Secretary of War to confirm this selection which he did on December 17th.

The Commission finding the Shirley House in a terribly dilapidated condition, and believing that its preservation was desirable as a historic landmark in the Park, called the attention of the War Department to the fast decaying structure, and made the request that a proper appropriation for its restoration should be made. Secretary Root authorized the expenditure of Three Thousand Dollars for its restoration in response to this request.

The Commission also urged upon the Secretary of War not to permit the deflection of Confederate Avenue from its proper position in the rear of the Confederate lines. The engineer officer at that time contemplated running the lines of Confederate Avenue without reference to the line of the Confederate defenses, but with a view of shortening the road and saving expense of construction. This recommendation of the Commission the Honorable, the Secretary of War, confirmed, it also having been advocated by the National Commissioners.

This Commission having completed the work contemplated in making preliminary locations, recommended in their report to the Governor the creation of another Commission and an expenditure of Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars for the purpose of erecting Regimental Monuments and Markers and a State Memorial within the National Military Park at Vicksburg.

The total expense incurred by this preliminary Commission was $1,995.21, leaving $4.79 to be covered back into the Treasury.

On April 9th Governor Yates sent a special message to the two Houses of the 43d General Assembly, strongly urging the appropriation on the line recommended by this Commission. On May 6, 1903, a law was enacted to provide for the erection of Monuments and Markers to commemorate the service and mark the positions of Illinois Volunteers in the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, and make appropriation therefor. Under this act nine Commissioners were appointed who were to serve without pay; they were authorized to enter into contracts involving the amount of Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars. One Hundred and Fifty Dollars of this was appropriated and made available at once.

Governor Yates appointed as such Commissioners, John C. Black, A. C. Matthews, Geo. S. Durfee, Carroll Moore, T. B. Orear, Francis A. Riddle, H. M. Trimble, C. H. Noble and Charles R. E. Koch. On August 6, 1903, these Commissioners assembled at Springfield, Illinois, and organized by electing John C. Black, president; A. C. Matthews, vice-president; T. B. Orear, treasurer, and Charles R. E. Koch, secretary.

On August 18th in Chicago, by-laws and rules for the conduct of the business of the Commission were adopted, and standing committees to take charge of specific portions of the work were selected. Commissioner Riddle was chosen chairman of the Committee on Designs; Commissioner Koch, chairman of the Committee on Locations and Inscriptions; Commissioner Trimble, chairman of the Committee on Contracts, and Commissioner Durfee, chairman of the Auditing Committee, and the committees were completed as published on the invitations issued for this dedication.*

The Committee on Designs were authorized to employ Major W. L. B. Jenney to prepare designs for the monuments to be erected, and that such designs be submitted for the consideration and approval of the Commission without incurring any expense to the Commission unless they should be accepted, and in that case the cost should not exceed the sum of Two Hundred Dollars.

Major Jenney, an architect of great skill and reputation at once proceeded with his task in which he was greatly aided and even inspired by the zealous efforts of Commissioner Francis A. Riddle, the chairman of the Committee on Designs. To Commissioner Riddle, probably almost as much as to the genius of W. L. B. Jenney we are indebted for the beautiful Memorial which Illinois today transfers to the care and keeping of the Government of the United States. Many designs were drawn, only to be discarded. The suggestion having been made that it would be desirable to preserve all of the names of the soldiers from Illinois, who participated in the Vicksburg campaign in bronze upon, or within the Memorial that was to be erected, the architect and the Committee on Designs were led to adopt a style of architecture for the State Memorial that should accommodate such an enrollment of names. On November 16th the committee convened in Chicago and adopted the design for the State Memorial substantially as it is before us today. They also adopted the designs for the regimental markers and monuments as they now are in the Park. The Commission confirmed the action of the committee on December 15, 1903.

Commissioner Black having been elected Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and having received an appointment that necessitated his attendance in Washington, which prevented him from attending the meetings and participating in the work of the Commission, tendered his resignation as a member of the Commission in January, 1904. Commissioner Florus D. Meacham was appointed in his stead.

The firm of Jenney, Mundie & Jensen of Chicago were retained to prepare detail plans for all the monuments and to superintend their construction, on January 23, 1904.

The design and purposes of the State Memorial were explained and submitted to the War Department and duly approved by Secretary Root January 11, 1904.

Proposals for bids were sent out to more than fifty prospective bidders and on May 23d, the bids were opened at Springfield, Illinois, and an award for the construction of all of the monuments was made to the Culver Construction Company of Springfield, Illinois, they being the lowest responsible bidders. The contract on the bronze work was at the same time awarded to the American Bronze Foundry Company of Chicago, they being the lowest responsible bidder for their work.

On December 13, 1904, during one of the meetings of the Commission at Vicksburg, ground was broken for the Illinois Memorial Temple which we now face, with simple and informal ceremony. The Reverend A. R. Morgan, a veteran of the 8th Illinois Infantry, invoked the blessing of Almighty God upon our undertaking.

In January, 1905, Governor Richard Yates in his final message to the Legislature of our State recommended an appropriation of One Hundred Thousand Dollars for the completion of the work of our Commission in this Park, and he also recommended an additional appropriation to provide for the expenses of the present ceremony.

The last Legislature in May, 1905, passed an Act appropriating the sum of One Hundred and Ten Thousand Dollars which was promptly made into law by the signature of Governor Charles S. Deneen.

When the general contracts were let they did not include the eagle which surmounts the pediment of the portico of the State Memorial Temple, neither did it include the figures in the marble group of Peace, representing History, recording the deeds of the reunited North and South; nor the medallion busts of President Lincoln, General Grant and Governor Yates under the portico. These were accepted and adopted May 15, 1905, Mr. Fred Hibbard of Chicago was the sculptor of the eagle, and Mr. Charles J. Mulligan of Chicago modeled and executed the group and medallion busts.

Aside from this State Memorial Temple, which is now before us, the Illinois Commission has erected within this Park seventy-nine Regimental Monuments. One for each Illinois command that participated in the campaign or the siege. Those that served on the investment line are found along Union Avenue, the Jackson Road, Wisconsin and Illinois Avenue and the Warrenton Road, according to the place occupied in the deployment of the besieging army. There are 56 of these. The Illinois Commands that served in the line exterior and east of Vicksburg, along the Yazoo and Big Black river, which was commanded by General Sherman and opposed by General Joseph E. Johnston, have their monuments erected along Sherman Avenue. There are 15 of these. The commands from Illinois that served on the Louisiana side of the river, those that served on the gunboats, that were unassigned, and those that were attached to General Grant's headquarters are commemorated by monuments along Grant Avenue. There are eight of these.

Markers are erected in honor of commands only that served in the investment line. These are placed on the exact spots where the events they commemorate occurred. There are eighty-five of these.

Upon the marble within the interior wall of the Memorial Temple are engraven the names of Abraham Lincoln and twenty-two general officers or acting general officers from Illinois, who commanded the army, a corps, divisions and brigades. There are also upon sixty bronze tablets the names of 36,290 officers and soldiers from Illinois whose names were borne upon the muster rolls of the Illinois commands during the period of time officially announced as covering the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, namely from March 29th to July 4th, and of those who participated at some time or other during the campaign or siege.

When the Commission decided to preserve and perpetuate the names of all the soldiers from Illinois upon bronze tablets within the Temple now before you, they fully relied upon the free use of the records and muster rolls, for the period covered by this campaign and siege, on file in the War Department at Washington as an easily available source from which to obtain the necessary data. But under a ruling of the Department, access to these rolls and information for this purpose was denied and the Commission was forced to resort to a very laborious method of ascertaining these names. This involved a voluminous correspondence with more than two thousand survivors, and a recompilation and verification of the Illinois Adjutant General's report concerning the troops engaged here. This consumed more than three years of constant work, care and investigation.

It is not presumed that the work accomplished is without errors but to make this enrollment of men upon these rolls as nearly correct as it is possible, after a lapse of forty-three years, has been our effort and ambition.

The accounts are not yet entirely settled but with a reasonable forecast of the amounts still due and to be provided for we feel assured that our work will be completed in its entirety, within the amounts placed at our disposal by the generous people of Illinois. Our Commission has labored earnestly and constantly for more than five years, and let us hope that our accomplished work may meet with the approbation of the people whose stewards we have been.

Permit me now, Mr. President (turning to Colonel Matthews), as the executive officer of the Commission, to present to you the key to the Illinois Temple of Fame this great gathering of patriotic people are about to dedicate.

The Vicksburg school children then sang "Illinois."

The President: Ladies, gentlemen and comrades—The report of the Secretary of the Commission, upon the facts connected with the incipience and erection of this Temple, and these monuments, has been so full that I deem it altogether unnecessary to allude to that matter further. Hence, what I had intended to say, or would have said, I will not now say. I claim the right, under such circumstances, being the presiding officer, to "cut out" my speech.

A few words, however, I feel I ought to say. My heart is full toward all these people who have assembled here today, both the blue and the grey, the people from Illinois and the people from Mississippi, and on the part of the Commission—I thank them for their presence and support. We from Illinois are the people from the upper valley, who live on the banks of the great river. Illinois desires to live in the greatest possible good will and commercial intercourse with Mississippi; there is a bond of water and a bond of steel which unites us. No one can ever move the Mississippi river, and I take it from the efforts we have made to move the Illinois Central as we wanted it moved on our journey to this city, that no one can ever move that great road out of its established course, and its fixed rate of speed.

When I came here with this Commission a few years ago, we went up and down these hills hunting the graves of our comrades, hunting out the lines where the Confederates fought and fell, and where the Union dead fought and fell. We had a little meeting at the Carroll House and outlined what we wanted to do; some of the people said "you can never do it"; we said we could and we would, and all we asked of them was, when our work was done, to match it, and beat it if they could. We proceeded with this Temple and these monuments and markers, and we wish to say to you, ladies and gentlemen, who live in Mississippi, we hope they may prove objects of beauty and grandeur which will endure for all time. We then said that these monuments would be dedicated directly to the memory of the soldiers and sailors from Illinois who fought on this field, and indirectly to the chivalric men who fought and fell here, from all the States.

We thank you, Governor Vardaman, and the friends from your State, who have honored us with your presence today. This gathering is a speech that will ring round the world, and will be recognized wherever civilization is known, and wherever civilized laws are upheld. Americans, once enemies, jointly met to erect monuments to their fallen on a great battlefield, itself makes a notable page in American history; it repels the fallacy of eternal distrust and ill-will.

The Regiment I was with, the 99th Illinois, was the second to cross the river at Bruinsburg; the 21st Iowa was the first. Major-General Eugene A. Carr commanded that Division, and he and his wife are here today. He retired from active service after a long and useful career in the Army. He wanted to come here today and see those who fought with him, and those who fought against him.

There never was a more brave or chivalric people than were to be found in those two armies that met here in 1863. I live in Pike County, Illinois; right across the river from us, in Missouri, is the City of Louisiana, in Pike County, Missouri. Our friends and neighbors from there, were here under the Confederate flag. We met after the surrender over there (pointing southward) on that day, and we took a drink—of water—together, and had quite a reception. We felt that friends were leaving us when they marched out, and we went on and on fighting and contending until Lee and Grant met under the apple tree at Appomattox.

There was a peculiar condition after our strife ceased; you want to study it; you want to learn it; it was made by two great commanders; it was made by men who understood the relations of civil life to civilized war. They said: "We will stop this war, this murder of the country's useful men," and Grant said to the Confederates, "Take your horses and go home and go to ploughing—let us have peace." Lee went back to Virginia, and the war ended. By men of less broad views the war might have been indefinitely continued.

There was no personal ill-will or bad blood between the men in the Confederate Army and the men in the Union Army. The personal ill-will, what there was of it, was gotten up by the men who had never fired a gun. These men who had "stood behind the gun" had a good deal of respect for each other "after they had seen each other's guns."

As we are growing older, we see the young men growing to manhood; the young men are now Governors of the States—a young man of Illinois, the son of a Union veteran, and a young man of Mississippi, son of a Confederate veteran—both are with us today and participating in these ceremonies; their people are proud of them. The young men of the country are filling the halls of Congress, and our high judicial places. A man who believes a principle politically, and has been taught to believe it for a lifetime, will fight for that principle. We go back to the position of the South—excuse me, Governor Vardaman—which was that the United States was a Confederacy, and not a permanent Union, from which any State might withdraw at will. The Southern States withdrew and established a new Confederacy. We of the North combatted that contention, and never supposed they would reach the overt act. They fought for their belief, they died for that belief, and the American manhood which fought, struggled and suffered for principle as they saw it, should command the respect of the people. The South believed what they did was right; we, of the North, knew and believed what we did was right, and the war came on; you know the result. That war settled the legal proposition: "War is the greatest Court on earth"; from its judgment no Writ of Error or appeal is ever allowed. Men who believe they are right, always make a good fight, whether they are right or wrong.

I believe that the erection of these monuments on this field and the erection of like monuments at Gettysburg, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Shiloh, will have a tendency to bind us closer together, and renew the ties of friendship of those that fought against each other, over forty years ago, and bind closer these ties in their descendants. Every monument that is built here is evidence of the high position the United States intends to take among the nations of the world. The time is here when there should be no North and no South, but wherever we go we should be able to say with the approval of all: "We are American citizens." To be a citizen of the great Republic is to be greater than a King. We have but one flag, one constitution, one destiny. We are the great Republic. The Spanish-American War, in its personnel, furnished the best evidence of the patriotism of all our people, South as well as North.

Governor Deneen, with the report of the Secretary, and what I have said, I turn these monuments over to you, with the key of the Temple.

Ladies and gentlemen, it is my pleasure to introduce Charles S. Deneen, Governor of Illinois.

Governor Deneen: My Fellow Citizen: We are met here to-day to dedicate to the soldiers and sailors of Illinois these enduring memorials of their participation in the campaign which culminated in the siege and capture of Vicksburg. Upon these stones has been written the history of the part they took in the prolonged and stubborn contest of soldiery, bravery and military skill and strategy. The outcome of this struggle marked the turning of the tide of battle in favor of the northern arms; but these monuments are erected in no narrow spirit. They are the chroniclers neither of victory nor of defeat, but stand as an everlasting testimony to the heroism of the Illinois soldier.

In all ages and regions of the world mankind has accorded to deeds of valor the meed of praise. The feelings which prompt the observance of these ceremonies lie deep in the wellsprings of the human heart, and it is in deference to sentiments as old as the race and to a custom hallowed by the usage of the centuries that we have gathered here to-day.

To the exalted admiration of mankind for that high patriotism which offers itself as a sacrifice upon the altar of the common welfare, have been raised the world's most splendid memorials. Upon the adornment of the arch of triumph, the column of victory and the statues and mausoleums of the heroes who have offered up their lives in the service of their country, the sculptor has lavished the finest efforts of his genius. To the achievements of the soldier the poet has dedicated his most inspiring verses and the historian his most fascinating pages. All history records the admiration and esteem in which the nations of the world have held the virtues of the soldier—the virtues of obedience to command, of unwavering courage, of fortitude in suffering and of fidelity to country even unto death.

To this sentiment the Greeks, more than twenty-four hundred years ago, elevated upon the battlefield of Marathon a funeral mound, beneath which were buried the soldiers of Athens who fell in the great battle which a handful of Greek patriots there waged against the hosts of the Persian invader. Around it ten columns (one for each of the Athenian tribes) were erected, and six hundred years later on those columns the historian and antiquarian could still trace the honored names of those whose glory it was to have fallen in the struggle for Greek liberty and independence. The columns have long since perished, but the funeral mound still marks the spot where these noblest heroes of antiquity repose.

Strangely close is the parallel between the dedication in which we are engaged to-day and that which was engaged in so long ago upon the old Greek battlefield. Here, as there, to each military organization has been erected its separate memorial, while for all stands this magnificent monument, in which, secure from the ravages of the seasons, the name of each soldier hero is graven, to remain his epitaph for all time.

Nor is the parallel confined to the method of the dedication, but extends to the results which flowed from the events commemorated. Just as the triumph of Greece at Marathon was fraught with momentous benefits to mankind, securing for future ages the intellectual treasures of Athens, the growth of free institutions, the liberal enlightenment of the Western world and the ascendancy of the great principles of European civilization, so the triumphs of the federal arms upon this battlefield powerfully contributed to the final victory at Appomattox, which for all time established this nation as one and indivisible, and secured to our institutions a full realization of the truths which our Declaration of Independence declared to be self-evident: "That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

And not by America alone were to be harvested the fruits of this victory. Though but forty-three years have elapsed since the soldiers of the North and of the South engaged in this struggle, this nation, then riven from center to circumference by the shock of contending armies and hanging perilous upon the verge of disruption, has become in the providence of God a glorious example to the world of the blessings of free institutions, and has carried beyond its own confines a message of peace and good-will to the uttermost parts of the earth. So that surely we may say the blessings which have come to us and to mankind from the suffering and death which were here endured are worthy of even so great a sacrifice.

Toward the accomplishment of this result our State freely gave of her best blood, and it is altogether fitting that as representatives of Illinois we here record for all time the part which Illinois had in this achievement.

In the Northern army there were engaged in this siege 199 regiments of infantry, 19 cavalry and 46 batteries of artillery. Of these Illinois furnished 54 infantry, 15 battery and 10 cavalry organizations, a total of 79. Of the total Union losses, killed, wounded or captured, which aggregated 9,962, the losses of Illinois were 2,403. These simple figures more eloquently proclaim that here the soldiers of Illinois gave to the Nation "the last full measure of devotion" than could any eulogy pronounced by the orator or recorded by the historian. Whether in the weary march through swamp and forest, in the perilous assault, or in the patient labor of the siege, the soldiers of Illinois were conspicuous for endurance, for daring and for steadfastness. The Silent Commander, himself an Illinoisan, bore testimony to the gallantry of their services, and Illinois will always hold in proud and grateful remembrance the fact that the Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, of the division of the brave and lamented Logan, the Black Eagle of Illinois, had the honor of being first to enter the fallen city and to raise its colors upon Vicksburg Court House.

But I am not here to deal with the fascinating details of this memorable siege. Others are here who will tell more vividly and at greater length the story of the famous victory.

So I must close. To you, gentlemen of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, I desire to tender the thanks of our State, and I may add as your due the thanks of the Nation, for the work you have performed in preserving for all time upon the field of Vicksburg itself this indestructible record of the military movements constituting the siege. These monuments will perpetuate, as no other form of memorial could, the deeds of those who were participants. The flight of time will but serve to magnify the value of your labors. From these monuments those who come after us will learn the priceless offering which Illinois here laid upon the altar of National unity. The blood of her sons was Illinois' gift to the Nation. And as in the dark days of the war Illinois gave her soldiers to the Nation in peril, so we are here to-day to give to the Nation they preserved this monument to their patriotism and devotion. Their fame, we know, will thus be forever preserved as a precious national possession. And yet as Illinoisans we feel that in a more familiar and intimate sense it still belongs to us. They were our neighbors and our friends. Their homes dotted our prairies. We have looked into their faces and have shaken them by the hand. We rejoiced in their triumphs as reflecting glory upon our Commonwealth and we mourned their losses as a personal bereavement.

And to us who are the heirs of the dear-bought but glorious legacy of honor which they have bestowed upon our State and Nation this occasion is fraught with solemn thoughts of gratitude to the dead and living heroes who bequeathed to us this heritage of freedom and of union, and of the obligation which is ours to hand it down, unsullied and unimpaired, and made more glorious with the passing years, to our posterity.

It is now my duty in behalf of the people of the State of Illinois to transfer to the United States the title of these monuments. May the memory of the soldiers whose names are written thereon remain forever enshrined in the hearts of their grateful countrymen.

The President: The audience will now be addressed by Mr. Scofield of the War Department, to whom we will give attention.

ADDRESS OF MR. JOHN C. SCOFIELD.

Ladies and Gentlemen: One hundred and thirty years ago, two million people scattered along our Atlantic seaboard in thirteen separate and distinct groups, acting under the impulse of a great natural law, established a Confederacy under the name of "the United States of America." The articles of confederation upon which this general government was based solemnly declared, in express terms, that the Union thus formed between the States should be perpetual; but a few years' experience proved that the government founded upon these articles of confederation and perpetual union lacked the power and vigor necessary for Federal Government, and in order to form a more perfect union the better to promote the general welfare of all concerned, the people of the United States, again impelled by the same great law of self-preservation, established and ordained the Constitution, which ever since has been the highest law of our land. In the letter, signed by George Washington and unanimously approved by the Convention which framed that great charter of the people, it was stated that it was "obviously impracticable, in the Federal Government of these States, to secure all right of independent sovereignty to each, and yet provide for the interest and safety of all." It was further stated that in all their deliberations the Convention had kept steadily in view that which appeared to them the greatest interest of every true American—the consolidation of the union—which the fathers believed involved the prosperity, happiness and safety of the people, and perhaps even their existence as a nation. Not many years later, upon withdrawing from the service of the country to which the best years of his life had been devoted, that same great man, whom we delight to call "First in peace, first in war, and first in the hearts of his countrymen," in his farewell address to the people of the United States—an address which we of to-day ought frequently to read and ponder—earnestly entreated them to cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to the national union as the palladium of their political safety and prosperity; "watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can, in any event, be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts."

More than half a century passed. The young nation, occupying at the time of its birth only a narrow strip of land stretching along the Atlantic coast, had extended its territory three thousand miles westward to the Pacific Ocean. Its population had increased to thirty million people. Forests had been cleared, orchards planted, swamps transformed to grain fields; and where the wilderness had been, farms, villages, towns and cities flourished. The progress that had been made by the United States in all the elements of civilization was great absolutely, and relatively it was amazing. Its commerce visited every ocean, its merchant marine had grown to be the largest in the world, and America now disputed with England the proud title of mistress of the seas. The new experiment that was being tried on this continent of a people governing itself, contrary to the confident predictions of European statesmen, had become a glorious success, surpassing in reality the fondest dreams of the founders of the Republic.

Upon these fair conditions of our growing civilization came the devastating blight of civil war. The right of a State to separate from the Union had been a disputed question from the beginning, sincere and able men holding opposite views upon the subject. Threats of secession, peaceable if possible, forcible if necessary, had been often made, sometimes in the North, sometimes in the South, but not till 1861 was the assertion of that right translated into action. Discussion in the forum having failed to settle the question, the appeal to arms resulted. Upon the issue of that contest the preservation of the Union depended, and for four terrible years the life of the nation hung trembling in the balance.

We are assembled to commemorate an event connected with that mighty struggle, the result of which made the United States a nation in reality as well as in name. Memorable as the most gigantic and costly war in history, its vital consequences have not been confined to the limits of our own territory, but have extended to the uttermost parts of the earth. It was a war not of aliens, but of brothers—not of enemies, but of friends; a war of principles and not of aggrandizement or conquest; and when the awful struggle was ended the men who fought on either side, accepting the results and facing the conditions that surrounded them like true Americans, wrought sincerely and effectively to heal the wounds and remove the scars that war had made, to revive and strengthen those natural ties of affection and interest between the North and the South, and to restore the harmonious and cordial relations that make for their mutual well-being. The work of reconciliation, impossible but for the high nobility of character which men and women of the South brought to its accomplishment, was long ago complete. Occasions like these illustrate it in full measure, pressed down and running over. And so Illinois, journeying a thousand miles to do honor to her sons, living and dead, who on this battlefield forty-three years ago fought bravely for the Union cause, is received with true southern hospitality by Mississippi, whose sons fought not less bravely for the Confederacy, is welcomed with royal courtesy in its pilgrimage to this shrine of American valor, this battlefield dedicated by the Federal Government to southern courage as well as to northern prowess.

The Civil War was but a stage in the evolution of our national life. It was indeed an irrepressible conflict; the circumstances conspired to make it inevitable. The wide differences of climate, occupations and social conditions peculiar to the opposing sections; the comparatively limited facilities of transportation and communication of that period, and the prejudices and passions that sprang from misunderstanding—these all combined to prevent that better acquaintance between the people of the North and the people of the South which surely would have ripened into friendlier relations, mutual respect and forbearance, and a knowledge of the absolute interdependence between all sections—the utter hopelessness of separation. If the people had known each other better the cruel strife that desolated so many hearts and destroyed so many homes, North and South, might possibly have been averted. But it was not to be. Pride of opinion and conflicting interests, which found manifestation from the earliest days of the Republic, prevented that more perfect union which the fathers, for the welfare of the nation, endeavored to accomplish. Compromise after compromise was made, but all in vain; and finally we were brought in the fulness of time to the deadly arbitrament of the sword, that last argument of kings.

Thus was the nation born again, baptized in the blood of brothers shed by the hand of brothers; thus was the nation consecrated and sanctified anew to its great destiny; thus was the North to learn the fire and spirit of the South; thus was the South to learn the strength and vigor of the North; and thus the world was made to know that North, South, East and West, we are one people, united and inseparable for evermore.

The war taught valuable lessons to North and South alike. The men who fought on either side grew to feel for their opponents that respect and fellowship which brave and manly men always entertain for a brave and manly foe. The barriers sections, passions and resentment had erected between the North and the South fell under the trampling feet of mighty armies. The expression "Mason and Dixon's line," losing its sinister meaning, no longer passed current in daily speech, but gradually faded from the minds of men except as an historic boundary line between neighboring States. The interrupted streams of travel between the two sections resumed their flow with growing volume, and both sections were benefited by it. The southern soldier, brave as he was in battle—and the world has never seen more gallant men than those who wore the gray—was even braver, was infinitely greater, when he faced the desperate situation in which the war left him, and with fortitude and unconquerable courage set about to repair his fallen fortunes. How well he bore himself in those hard and trying times the prosperity of the New South testifies in ways innumerable. Brought into closer contact and more intimate relations, the people of the North and the people of the South came to see as never before that, differ as they might in opinion, in habits and customs and manner of living, their purposes, their hopes and their aspirations were essentially the same—that in the evolution of our government they were and of right ought to be one people, with one country and one flag.

And what a country it is! Are we not justly proud of it? In all the recorded history of mankind there is no example of a Republic comparable with ours in stability, permanence and magnitude. There has never yet been its equal as a government of the people, by the people and for the people. Our progress and development, without precedent or parallel in history, is to all thinking minds the marvel of the world. It is but one hundred and seventeen years—a brief period in the lifetime of a nation—since we adopted our Constitution, that instrument which a great English statesman has described as “the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man.” In that short time we have outstripped all other people on the globe in wealth, both in the aggregate and per capita, having 130 billions of dollars against the 65 billions of dollars of Great Britain, our richest rival, and nearly $1,700 per inhabitant against $1,600 in that country. The capital of our banks is 800 millions of dollars—nearly 50 millions more than that of our closet competitor, France. The money stock of the United States is 2,400 millions of dollars, more than double the money stock of any other nation except France, and half again as much as France, which has 1,600 millions.

The United States produces more wheat and more corn than any other nation, and more cotton than all the other countries on the globe combined. We raise more cattle than any other country, and more horses than any other country except Russia, and our meat production, our catch of fish, and our dairy products far exceed those of any other country on earth.

In the field of manufacture the United States stands pre-eminent, contributing 34 per cent, or more than one-third, of all the manufactured goods produced in the world, while Great Britain, Germany and France together contribute but 38 per cent.

The greatest development of our material resources has come since the Civil War, and all sections have shared in the benefits. In the five years that followed Appomattox more capital was sent to this country for industrial investment than in any fifteen years before, and the number of immigrants landed in the United States since the war is nearly three times as great as in all the previous years from Washington's first inauguration. But perhaps the surest index of that stupendous industrial and financial growth that commenced when peace began is to be found in the increase in our railway mileage from 31,000 miles in 1860 to 215,000 miles in 1906, the railroads of the United States now exceeding in mileage the railroads of all Europe.

While the general welfare of the whole country has been promoted since the Union was re-established for all time, in some respects the South has been the gainer beyond all other sections. Its immense resources in coal and iron, practically unthought of before the war, have in the past twenty-five years been enormously developed, and it is due largely to this fact that our pig iron production has risen from less than 4,000,000 tons in 1880 to 21,000,000 tons in 1905, and that the United States, from a position far down on the list of coal-producing countries, has come to lead them all, supplying nearly 40 per cent of the world's coal. In the production and manufacture of iron and steel the United States far exceeds every other country on the face of the earth. More than a third of the world's product of iron ore, pig iron and steel comes from our mines, furnaces, crucibles and converters. We have risen since the war from an inconspicuous position among the ironmakers of the world to be now the foremost nation in this most important branch of manufacture. Three-fourths of the world's supply of cotton is raised in the South, and of the 4,000,000 bales of cotton retained for home consumption more than 2,000,000 are now manufactured in the mills of the South, where as late as 1880 only 221 bales were manufactured.

Important facts and figures like these, of immense significance to the material prosperity of the South and of the whole country, might be multiplied indefinitely.

The record of our progress and development in every decade since peace was declared and in every avenue and field of human endeavor, has made the Census reports and statistical abstracts of the United States read like fairy tales. What a splendid story of ambition and achievement these cold, dry figures tell, of enterprise, industry and frugality, of a prosperity marvelous in its magnitude and not confined by sectional lines nor limited to the few, but diffused through all the land, widespread among all the people. Between the lines how plainly it can be read, over and over again, that the Republic is opportunity! Here lies the proof, beyond all questioning, that in union there is strength.

Governor Deneen and Gentlemen of the Illinois Commission: Other duties have prevented the Secretary of War from accepting at your hands this magnificent memorial erected by the great commonwealth which you represent and dedicated to her brave sons for their services at the siege of Vicksburg. Acting in his behalf here today, I accept this temple to patriot soldiers of Illinois. Never forgetting their devotion in the nation's hour of direst need, the Federal Government will forever cherish and preserve this enduring monument to their sacrifices. Long after every stone shall have crumbled to dust, may the union of hearts and minds and hands for which they contended, growing ever stronger, ever closer, still bless our people everywhere throughout all this fair land of liberty.

"Land of our Birth, our Faith, our Pride,
For whose dear sake our fathers died;
Oh, Motherland, we pledge to thee
Head, heart and hand, through the years to be."

"America" was then sung by the school children, in which all the great concourse joined, led by the First Illinois Infantry band.

The President: It is my great pleasure to introduce to this vast audience the Governor of the great State of Mississippi. I am sure we shall all delight to hear Governor Vardaman.

Governor Vardaman: Mr. Chairman, Governor Deneen, fellow countrymen—Speaking for a people whose men are brave, chivalrous, loyal and true, whose women are faithful, pure as the light which beats above your heads today, beautiful too, it affords me more than ordinary pleasure to accord to the visitors to this great commonwealth a most cordial welcome.

My countrymen, it is not expected of me that I should enter into the discussion of the causes which brought about that unfortunate conflict in which men fell to whom this magnificent monument is erected. That has passed. If the south was in error, if secession is error or wrong she learned the fateful and unfortunate lesson from Massachusetts.

There is one thing certain, her men and her women believed that they had a constitutional right to do what they did. The time had come, differences had arisen, when this difference of opinion could only be settled in the Court of war. The southern men and southern women gave up their all in that terrible conflict. The Court decided it against us, and when the stars and bars trailed in defeat at Appomatox every southern soldier on that day accepted the arbitrament of that Court as irrevocable, and from that time there has never been a moment when they themselves and their sons and daughters were not ready to lay down their lives in defense of the stars and stripes. I do not believe there is a man in America today, as was said by our distinguished lawyer from the State of Illinois, who can impartially read the contemporary speeches and literature of this country with the adoption of the Federal Constitution who will doubt the constitutional remedy for which our fathers of the south fought, but the country had grown too big for it, and it is a question as to whether or not it is better for us all, this depends how the government in the future shall be conducted.

My friends, as I said in the beginning, we are not here—I am not here to ask for a re-argument of this case before that Court of Man. It is settled and settled for all time.

I am glad to see you here today my countrymen of Illinois, paying tribute to the brave men who fell and fought in this historic spot in defense of what they believed to be right. You do not only honor the men who fought and fell for an honest cause by the erection of that magnificent Memorial, but you honor yourselves. You rear in the hearts of posterity a monument more illustrious, a monument which will live as long as heroism is a factor and as long as God is in the human heart.

I want you, my friends from Illinois, to understand that the Confederate soldier and the sons of the Confederate soldiers join with you in words of commendation and words of praise of your brave men. You can sing the praises of the great Grant, you can sing the praises of the memorable Lincoln, and you can sing the praises of the boys in the trenches who fought and fell for what they believed to be right, and you can sing the praises of the sons and daughters of the Confederates who reserve the right also to sing the praises of the men who wore the blue; and I want you to distinctly understand another thing, that we are going to sing the praises of Jefferson Davis, Stonewall Jackson and the boys who wore the grey; it matters not whether it pleases anybody excepting us.

This monument represents a great cause, one of those things that go to enrich the history of this country; it teaches a lesson which contributes to the building of character, the making of strong men and good women, and I want to say to you that the greatest product of any country is not the great steel products of the steel mills; it is not the great railroad; it is not the great manufacturing enterprise, but the greatest product of any country is the men and women, particularly the women.

I don't think we will be able to build a monument, Colonel, to match yours in size. You know we have had a great deal of trouble in the last forty years since you boys were down here paying some attention to us. There are a great many places left that we have had to supply. The changed condition made our people refer to things before the war, which another distinguished gentleman from Illinois told me about on one occasion, when he was describing an old Confederate which he met down here on the coast of Florida. There is something peculiar about these old ex-Confederate soldiers; they are most charming, interesting men, but they are inclined to look back for everything excellent beyond the sixties. He said this old fellow had saved enough out of the wreck from 1861-1865 to last him for the evening of his days; they were each enjoying a splendid Havana cigar and he suggested that they take a walk on the beach. He said that as they walked the moon was rising, and the waves were rolling and dashing on the beach; just at the right was a beautiful grove of oranges. He said he turned to this Confederate Colonel, and said: I have looked upon the magnificent scenery of the Rockies; I have enjoyed the scope of the Alps, but do you know this is the most beautiful of all; it seems to me that the Infinite painter is unrolling his choicest gem for the joy of fallen man. The Confederate listened, a tear came in his eye, and he said: This is, Mr. Smith; it is mighty pretty, but you ought to have seen it before the war.

We have had a great deal of trouble here, Colonel, since the war and we have not recovered altogether from the shock yet, but we are going to build a monument here—the best monument we can and we are going to present in the proper way the idea and the cause for which the southern soldier fought. It will be a monument that will also embody the great principle for which you fought. We would not have had that trouble here after the war; we would not have gone through that horror of reconstruction of which you know nothing except through the newspapers, if the men who wore the blue had been permitted to settle the difference between them and the men who wore the grey. It is the men who never heard a gun shot who took advantage, grew rich and humiliated the southern people.

I was very much impressed about what you said of the character of men who fought under the banner of Illinois on this battle field. My friends, of course we people of the south, we boys who came along just about the time of the opening of hostilities; about the first light was the light from the cannons and the first noise was the rattle of musketry between the contending forces; I used to think that one Confederate was worth at least a dozen Yankees, and in some instances they were, but you met an American where you found a soldier who came from the broad plains, who lived close to nature, who studied God through nature, who lived in the country and who was to the manor born. I do not care whether he came from Massachusetts, Illinois or Mississippi, he would scrap whenever you called upon him, and that is why you boys made the record here that you did. They were not fighting for $12.00 a month and running whenever the opportunity came.

After all, my friends, we build monuments like that to men. My attention was called a moment ago to the sentiment expressed there by Governor Yates: "God forbid that I should say aught against the south. I look beyond the blue waves of the Ohio and the green hills of Kentucky and there is the grave of my mother." Strange, indeed it is, that monuments have not been built to our mothers. The greatest battles that ever were fought—shall I tell you where and how? On the maps you will find them not; they were fought by the mothers of men who bravely sighed and bore their part.

If it had not been for the women on the Confederate side the war would not have lasted eighteen months. God Almighty made her to do those things. To women the greatest tribute was paid by the great creator in the morning of creation, when he sent the sun coursing through space; when he chiseled from the face of this earth and sent gushing from its side, until at last it became a majestic river; when he took an inventory and found that there was something lacking, borrowing suggestions from the blue of the Heaven and borrowing suggestions from all nature; he then gave to the world the beautiful and true, in the form of an American woman.

My friends, I am not going to speak to you longer; there are others to speak, but I want to say to you that I am glad to welcome you to Mississippi. I want you to stay just as long as you can; if there is anything here that you want that you don't see; if the people of Vicksburg and others know about it, they will tell you where you can get it. If there is one thing that I am proud of above everything else, it is the character of the men and women of Mississippi and their hospitality. It is as boundless as space; it is as generous as the climate; if you have any doubt about it, live here and you will find it out.

We want you to come among us, because, my friends, as it is already said by Mr. Scofield, all of this fuss, all of this trouble, all of this quarreling and snarling of the north and south since that little fuss was settled, is due to the fact that you do not know each other as you ought, and if you will permit me, I will say that you people of the north know less of the people of the south than the people of the south know about you. You neglect to read our newspapers, unless it is some unfortunate crime that is committed down here; then some of you put on your glasses, you first read us a lecture, then read your Bible and pray for the savages down here. Now, I will tell you this, I don't agree with my friend, the Governor of Illinois, on one proposition. I don't believe in the inherency of that quotation of the Declaration of Independence, that all men are born equal. I believe that all Caucasians and all Anglo Saxons should be given equal opportunities in the government of this country.

No people were ever confronted with a more serious and difficult problem than the people of the Southern States are confronted with. It is one you ought to study, you who have the same hopes, and you ought to help us in the settlement of this great question because you are as much interested in it as we are, and you ought to help us; I want you to know that we will be glad to have you here, and I want you to understand that you are welcomed to the hearts and homes of our people; after you have understood it as we understand it, you will give up appointing committees to come down here and investigate us.

It affords me great pleasure and I again welcome you to the State of Mississippi, and assure you as you return to your homes you carry with you the best wishes of all the people in this great commonwealth of ours. God bless you.

PEACE.

The President: If the audience will give attention we will introduce the next speaker. He is from Illinois, he represents the highest office of that great State upon this memorable occasion. He was recognized by Mr. McKinley as being the safest diplomat to send to Cuba. He was recognized by Mr. Roosevelt as the safest man to send to Venezuela, and we have thought he was a very safe man to bring here as the Orator of the day. It is now my distinguished pleasure to introduce to you the Honorable William J. Calhoun of Illinois, who has honored the Commission by accepting our invitation to address you.

Mr. Calhoun: Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—The siege of Vicksburg began May 18, 1863; it ended with the surrender of the city on the following fourth of July. For forty-seven days and nights it was one continuous battle. These hills, now quiet in the solemn stillness that broods over the dead, were then cut and scarred with the long lines of entrenchments that encircled the beleaguered city.

Behind those entrenchments crouched more than one hundred thousand armed men, wild and fierce and clamorous men, filled with the passion of war. Some thirty thousand of them were Confederates, who courageously defended the city and successfully resisted every charge made on their lines. Some seventy thousand of them were Federals, who slowly crept nearer and nearer to the defenses of the doomed city. Not until it had reached the end of human endurance did the Confederate army surrender. Worn with the strain of continued service by night and by day, weakened by hunger, disease and death, it could no longer defend its lines against the assault which it knew to be inevitable.

It is not my purpose to discuss the military operations incident to what is called the Vicksburg campaign. History has fully recorded them; reference thereto on this occasion is neither necessary nor appropriate. It is not improper, however, to say that the courage, fortitude and discipline displayed by both armies reflected honor upon the American soldier, whether he wore the blue or the gray.

To the Federal army, Illinois contributed more men than any other state. Of the 199 infantry regiments here present, Illinois had 54; of the 46 batteries of artillery, Illinois had 15; of the 19 cavalry organizations, Illinois had 10. Illinois also furnished the commander-in-chief of the Federal army, General U. S. Grant. Of the five corps commanders, Illinois furnished one, General John A. McClernand. Five division commanders out of seventeen were from Illinois, among whom was that distinguished volunteer soldier, Major-General John A. Logan; also General John Mac Arthur, who died in the city of Chicago but a few months ago, and Major-General Eugene A. Carr, just retired from the regular army. Of the 45 brigade commanders, 15 were from Illinois, among whom was General Green B. Raum, an honored citizen of the state, who is here today to pay his tribute to the memory of his dead comrades.

In the entire Vicksburg campaign, extending from May 1 to July 4, 1863, the Federal loss in killed, wounded and missing is reported to have been 9,362. Of this number 2,043, more than twenty-five per cent of the total loss, were from Illinois.

Illinois, then, played a leading part in the great tragedy here enacted. Her people felt the wounds of this battle. Many homes were darkened, many hearts were made desolate, and many hopes for future years were blasted by the sacrifices made on this bloody field. Illinois remembers Vicksburg with deep emotion. She remembers the living who suffered here; she remembers the dead who are buried here. In recognition of her part in this battle, Illinois has erected this beautiful and imposing monument. In her name and at her bidding we have come to dedicate it.

But to whom, and for what, shall we dedicate it? Nothing we can say, nothing we can do, will affect the dead. Their work is done; they have gone long since to their eternal rest; "and the rolling and the tramping of ever new generations passes over them and they hear it not any more forever."

For what does this monument stand? What thought does it express? What lesson does it teach? We may praise the generosity that paid for it, we may admire the genius that designed it, and we may appreciate the fidelity that constructed it; but after all it is a mere pile of granite, of marble and bronze. Of itself it means nothing, yet it may symbolize everything.

Does it represent the passion of War? Does it express the mere pride of victory? Does it stand for sectionalism—for the glorification of one part of the country and the humiliation of another? If it does, then, my countrymen, instead of dedicating it with songs of praise, it will be better for us, for our country, and for coming generations, if we tear it down, block by block, and scatter its fragments wide and far, so that no trace of it shall remain. But this monument stands for no such sentiment. I know the brave and generous heart of Illinois too well to ascribe to her so unworthy a motive.

The true meaning of this memorial involves some of the seeming contradictions which make life so hard to understand.

What can be more cruel, pitiless, more horrible than War! It means the slaughter of great throngs of men with crashing volleys of musketry, with shot and shell. It means to mangle, maim and cripple scores of others; to fill the air with the odor of blood and the stench of hospitals; to break the hearts of women; to inflict suffering upon the feebleness of old age and the helplessness of infancy; to destroy homes, burn villages and pillage cities; to devastate farms, fields, gardens, and to lay waste whole sections of country; to let loose the fiercest of passions, the worst of vices, which degrade, bestialize and dishonor men. War is a demon who rends and tears, who mangles and crushes, whose jaws drip with blood and whose eyes blaze with the fires of hate.

Every precept of Christianity, every impulse of civilization is a protest against war. Men dream of the day when there will be no war; when the battle flags will be furled and laid away; when all the armies that tramp the earth will be disbanded; when all the navies that ride the seas will be dismantled; when international disputes will be settled by an international court, where justice will preside and equity will determine the rights of nations.

But notwithstanding its horrors and miseries, war has been one of the great factors in shaping the destiny of nations and in developing the character of men. Emerson, in writing of the conflicting ideas and ideals which affect the conduct of men, says: "Our geometry cannot span the huge orbits of the prevailing ideas, behold their return and reconcile their opposition." Much as we may hate war, the fact remains that no nation has ever made a permanent place in history that was not of a warlike temper. The people who have done the most for science, for literature and art, and for the advancement of society, have been, at the same time, the great warriors of the world.

Among the ancients it was only while the war spirit was strong that much was achieved in peace. When this spirit subsided, their descendants became weaklings; they declined mentally and morally; they became fit subjects "for treason, stratagems and spoils." If there had never been a Thermopylæ or a Salamis, if the souls of the Athenians had never been stirred with the high resolve that won Marathon, would Grecian thought have made so deep and lasting an impression upon the life of the world? Would Athens have given to philosophy its Socrates, to oratory its Demosthenes, to art its Phidias? The modern Greek has no martial spirit; he tamely feeds his flocks amid the ruins of his country's greatness. "The best act of the marvelous genius of Greece," according to Emerson, "was its first act; not in the statue of the Parthenon, but in the instinct which, at Thermopylæ, held Asia at bay, kept Asia out of Europe. * * * The statue, the architecture, were the later and inferior creations of the same genius."

The Anglo-Saxon has ever been a migratory, adventurous spirit. He has sailed all seas, explored every wilderness and crossed the farthest mountains. He is said to be a builder of nations, a founder of states, a maker of constitutions and a writer of laws. But wherever he has gone he has kept step with the beat of the war drum; wherever he has stopped the battle flag has floated over his encampment.

The Puritan of old—stern-faced, resolute of spirit—carried a Bible in one hand and a rifle in the other, and he was as ready to use the one as the other. The Cavalier of Virginia, the Scotch-Irish of the Carolinas, pushed their way from the Atlantic, through forest, brake and glen, fighting step by step, until they stood on the bank of the Great River. They joined the Puritan of the North, and together they established, in the wilderness of the new world, a new society. They laid its foundations broad and deep; they cemented them with their blood and tears, and raised thereon a government, which, with all its imperfections, has come nearer than any other has done to the realization of the best and dearest dreams of humanity.

China has the oldest civilization in the world, but its development stopped centuries ago. The gloom of the Past darkens the soul of the Chinaman; he is content with the inertia of peace; he will not fight. And because he will not fight, other nations for years past have lurked like wolves around his domain, ready to seize and devour it.

On the other hand, there is Japan, a little island in the sea. Within the memory of men now living her gates were barred against the outer world. In recent years the light broke in upon her. She has astonished the world by the avidity with which she has absorbed the science, thought and even some of the fierce brutality of modern civilization. Her chariot is almost abreast of the leader's in the race. In the last few months, with something of the spirit of the ancient Greeks, she fought and defeated one of the greatest of nations, the terror of the North, which for years has overshadowed Europe. And Japan therein demonstrated that her people are among the fiercest warriors this age has produced. Men are now wondering what will be the limit of her power and the extent of her ambition.

I am not an advocate of war. I recognize its evil, I deplore its cruelty. I do not claim that the flower and fruit of our civilization grow only in the hotbed of war. It is probably true, if the sum of all the direct benefits derived from war were offset with the resulting evils, the balance would be largely against war. It is also true that in private life there is exhibited as much heroic sacrifice, courageous devotion and patience in suffering as was ever shown in battle; and that, too, without the exaltation which the associations of war bring to the soldier.

The scientist, however, tells us that life is a struggle for existence in which only the fittest survive. If one finds a place on which to stand, he must fight for it and fight to hold it. The law of nature seems to be unrest, struggle and conflict. It is true of individuals; it is true of nations, a nation being but an aggregation of individuals. The mental and moral characteristics of a people are reflected in the history of the nation to which they belong. The time may come in the growth, expansion and development of civilization when there will be no war, but not until the individual life is lifted to a higher plane of thought and action.

In the convulsions of Nature, in the Vesuvius and Mt. Pelee eruptions, the San Francisco earthquakes and the Galveston tidal waves, and in the wrath of the aerial storms, the presence of some great law, the operation of some irresistible force is recognized. The trembling of the mountains, the bursting of the rocks, the flames of fire, the clouds of smoke and poisonous gases, the streams of burning lava, the rain of hot ashes, the rending and cracking of the earth, the roar of the winds, the scream of the sea, the crash of falling temples and the burial of cities are the manifestations of some awful power, in whose presence the human soul is filled with fear and trembling, with unspeakable awe, with the consciousness of utter helplessness.

What shall we say of those great racial movements which have controlled the destiny and made the history of nations—" * * * their national wars, with their Moscow retreats and sanguinary, hate-filled revolutions!" What impulse prompted the migration of the Aryans, who swarmed like bees from their Asiatic hives? What sent the hordes of barbarous Huns sweeping over Europe, their long hair streaming in the wind, and their war cries ringing through the forests? What set in motion the great mass of Goths to beat against the walls of Rome like the waves of the sea? What were the Crusades, the Saracen invasion, and all the wars that have drenched Europe with blood, but the manifestation of the same law which rends the mountains, which rides the storm, which lashes the sea? Men may think that these great social upheavals are of their own initiative, of their own volition. But they forget, as Carlyle says, they forget "Him, the Unslumbering, whose work both Dream and Dreamer are;" whom "we see not—except in rare half-waking moments suspect not."

We have all wished that the Civil War, which is so much in our minds today, could have been avoided, and wondered why it had to be. I was born and reared in the North; my convictions and my sympathies were all on her side. But in recent years I have read much on both sides of that unhappy controversy. I have read the arguments made in and out of Congress, I have studied the issue involved. Although not yielding my convictions and not abating my sympathies in any degree, yet, with more mature judgment, I can now better understand and more clearly see the southern point of view. I can better understand the argument which appealed to the judgment and conscience of the South, and the sentiment which aroused her sympathy. If the issue had been submitted to some forum, wherein the argument on both sides could have been made, and the strict rules of construction and interpretation applied to constitutions and laws, supported by declarations of states and by the long-accepted teachings of certain schools of political thought, the question might have been decided either way. It is frank and it is fair to admit that the South believed she was right. No people could have fought so long, so bravely and so hard, could have sacrificed so much in life, blood and treasure, could have drunk so deep of the cup of grief, as the southern people did, had they not believe with all their souls in the cause for which they fought. The North was equally sincere, equally strong in her convictions, and in their support she lavishly poured out the blood of her dearest and her best, like rich red wine, at that bacchanalian feast of Death.

We will not discuss the merits of that controversy. It is long since settled. We will not discuss the war. It, too, is ended. The clamor, the passion and the pain of that hour have passed into the dead and silent Past. But, studying the war, and the controversies which led up to it and entered into it, in the light of the world's history, the thoughtful, impartial student must be convinced that above and beyond the clamor of controversy, above and beyond the roar and clash of conflict, there was an inexorable law of destiny which had predetermined the result—which had decreed that this nation should not be split asunder, that its ruins should not mark the failure, the defeat of democracy; that its people, united, but chastened and purified by suffering, should go forward to still greater achievements for liberty and justice, for God and humanity.

Through all the varied changes in life, in whatever form or color they appear, through all the seeming contradictions of "free will and fate, destiny and chance," through all the wars, revolutions and sanguinary struggles which have stained the history of the world with blood and tears, there may be recognized the presence of the immutable, the eternal law of God, which men, for want of a better name, call evolution.

What is the attraction in war which appeals with so much force to the heart and sympathy of men? In this question is involved another of those contradictions which confuse the mind. The work of the soldier is to kill, to destroy, to devastate. Why, then, does the beat of the drum and the call of the bugle quicken the blood and thrill the hearts of men? Does the spirit of the savage, of the barbarian, still lurk in the human heart? Is it the desire to destroy life, to imbue one's hands in the blood of his fellow? Is it to rejoice in the devastation, the suffering and the carnage of war? Is it to some such passion that we dedicate this monument?

The contrast is vivid between the peace that lies before us and the battle we celebrate, yet the one has grown out of the other. Peace has its victories and its blessings, and war its brutality and misery, but a protracted peace sometimes results in moral stagnation. It begets luxury, and luxury begets corruption. Men become so intent on their individual ends, on accumulation of wealth, on securing place and power, or on the enjoyment of idle pleasures, that they unconsciously, perhaps, become selfish; they forget their duty to their country, to their fellow man, and sometimes to their God. They are disposed to measure success and the value of a man's life by the amount of money he has made or by the power he has secured.

It may be that war is a whip of fire, with which God sometimes lashes men and beats and bruises them until they cry out in agony and fear, in order that they may be aroused out of their moral stupor, that they may be cleansed and purified, and that they may be animated by more unselfish aspirations, by higher ideals of life and duty.

The Civil War was a great awakening. It stirred the soul of the people with the deepest emotions. To those who lived in it, who labored and suffered in it, it is the one great, overshadowing experience. That is why the old soldier of either side never forgets it, never grows weary of talking about it. It is not the passion of the war that he remembers; it is the solemnity, the consecration and the sacrifice of it that fills his soul; he cannot forget it. And it is this that glorifies the soldier and the nation for which he fights. To fight, perchance to die, for others, for liberty, for home and country, for the right, as God gives us to see the right:

“Derives it not from what we have,
The likest God within the soul?”

Herein is found the idea which this monument symbolizes and to which it is dedicated—patriotism and courageous sacrifice. It is erected in honor of the dead. In honoring them we do honor to a sentiment which, next to the love of God, is the dearest and best that ever thrilled the human heart. These men responded to the call of duty. They may not have been the best or wisest or most virtuous of men, but they believed that the integrity of their country could not be otherwise preserved than through their service, and all their faults and frailties are lost in the sacrifice they made. They did not want to die. The opportunities, the aspirations and the rewards of life were as dear to them as to other men; yet they had the courage to obey the command and march to their death. It was the exemplification of the highest civic virtue, the manifestation of the loftiest patriotism. I wish there had been carved on this monument those noble lines of Emerson:

“So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When Duty whispers low, thou must,
The youth replies, I can.”

Phidias, the sculptor, carved the beautiful monument which was erected on the field of Marathon in honor of the Athenian dead who were buried there. The monument has long since passed away. No trace of it remains. More than 2,000 years have come and gone since that battle was fought, but the memory of it still illuminates the history of the world. The wind, the sun and the rain may in time disintegrate and destroy this monument. It too may pass away; but the memory of the sacrifices here made, the glory of the deeds here performed, will live in song and story to inspire the hearts of coming generations with the love of country which these men proved by their death.

The spirit of self-sacrifice is a heritage of the war which belongs equally to the North and the South. The recognition that the dead on both sides were for the most part of the same race and blood, and inspired by the same history and traditions, that each displayed the courage, devotion and high resolve that belong only to the highest and best manhood is our common pride. They are ennobled alike, whether they wore the blue or the gray; and in fostering a spirit of love and veneration for them we serve our common country. For we have need now, perhaps more than ever, of patriotism, of the spirit of self-sacrifice.

As society advances, our civilization becomes more complex. New conditions are constantly arising, and with them come new problems, for the solution of which the past furnishes no precedents. Today in the North we have many serious questions which must be answered. There is the great industrial development which has taken place since the war, largely brought about by the more extended introduction and use of machinery, which has involved capital and labor in a controversy that threatens the peace of society. There are great masses of foreign-born people who are centered about our large cities, who know little or nothing about the history of our country, the spirit of our laws, and the ideals which have always inspired American life. To assimilate, educate and guide these masses is a task, the difficulty of which is only equaled by its importance.

You in the South have your problems, which in a larger sense are peculiar to your own section. Some of these problems come to you as a heritage of the war, growing out of the new economic and social conditions produced thereby. The importance of these problems is appreciated by the North, but they can best be solved by the intelligence, the high devotion to duty, the love of justice and right and the fear of God which are a part of the mind and heart of the South.

All over the land there is a growing restlessness, a breaking away from old precepts and principles. The red flag of anarchy is sometimes seen on the streets of our cities, and its hoarse cry is heard in dark places, where the light of intelligence is the dimmest and where the love of country is the weakest. But no American, with the blood of the revolutionary fathers in his veins or with the spirit of self-sacrifice born of the Civil War in his heart, has ever marched under that flag. The seed of socialism is sown broadcast. It threatens the social structure which our forefathers erected, for the maintenance of which so much blood and treasure have been spent. Wealth is increasing beyond the dreams of avarice, and its attendant vices, luxury and corruption, break out every now and then in hideous sores, until the timid and the distrustful fear that the life blood of the nation is infected with disease. That changes in our social organization will take place we may be assured. That our social institutions are not perfect is apparent. They partake of the evils that belong to the individual life of which they are composed. But the great law of development is still at work. It never sleeps. Its operation cannot be obstructed or suspended. But in what manner it will make itself felt, and what its manifestations will be, no man can now tell.

The Civil War was the close of one chapter in human life in which it was demonstrated that Democracy is the true theory of government, and that it has the power to preserve its national integrity, not only against invasion from without, but against revolution within. We are entering upon another chapter in which that theory will be enlarged and its application extended. Already the public mind is occupied with the study and discussion of many new and startling theories. Some of them appear to be vagaries of superficial minds, others the expression of honest thought and sincere purpose; but all of them are illustrative of a growing tendency to advance in new paths which lead into wider but unknown fields of endeavor. The fact that a proposition is new, or that it is a departure from old precedents, is no sufficient argument against it, though a wise and healthy conservatism will not adopt it until after careful study and serious reflection. But as new conditions arise, it is certain we must advance to meet them. We cannot stand still, even if we prefer to do so. The impelling force of our destiny will push us forward in spite of protests, hesitation or fear.

Amid all my doubts and apprehensions I have an abiding faith in the future of this great country. That faith is inspired by a belief in God, and in the destiny he has marked out for us, and by a belief in the patriotism of the American people. Give them but light to see the way in which they are to travel, and, though it be with naked, bruised and bleeding feet, they will go that way as their fathers did before them—for God, for country, and for humanity.

To the spirit of patriotism and its sacrifices, and in honor of the dead, who exemplified that spirit in life and death, we dedicate this monument.

Great and prolonged applause.

General Green B. Raum, of Illinois: Mr. President—I desire to offer a resolution.

The President: Will General Raum please read his resolution?

General Raum: Resolved, by the citizens of Illinois assembled in the National Military Park of Vicksburg, on October 26, 1906, that they extend their sincere thanks to the Governor of Mississippi and through him to the people of his State, and particularly to the citizens of Vicksburg and their school children, for their magnanimous expression of courtesy and respect to the people of Illinois.

The President: Friends, you have heard the resolution; all those in favor of it say aye and those on the platform will please rise. The resolution was adopted unanimously and three cheers were given for the people of Mississippi.

The President: After the chaplain has pronounced the benediction, the military guard on the steps of the Temple will make room for the friends to enter and inspect the building. The people will please permit the official party and guests from this platform to enter first. All are invited to see the interior of this building, and there will be plenty of time for all.

The chaplain will now pronounce the benediction.

Rev. Mr. Morgan:

And now may grace, mercy and peace, rest upon this vast assemblage; and the blessing of Almighty God, the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, abide with each evermore, Amen.

Governors Deneen and Vardaman, followed by their staffs; the National and the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commissions, and the people generally then successively ascended the steps of the State Monument and inspected its interior.

AFTER THE CEREMONIES.

5, GEN. SCOTT; 6, MRS. CHAMPION.

After this, promptly at 4 o'clock, the First Infantry Illinois Guard moved to the position occupied by Stevenson's Brigade, during the assault on May 22, 1863, and gave there, to the delight of a great concourse of people; who gathered on the slope of the former Confederate works, the imposing ceremony of a regimental evening parade.

THE STATE MONUMENT AND MEMORIAL TEMPLE.

Immediately after the benediction, while the Warren County Light Artillery Company fired the National Salute, the guests of the day, led by Governor Deneen and Governor Vardaman and their staffs, Mrs. Logan and her daughter, Mrs. Champion, and her granddaughter, the Commissioners and their families ascended the grand flight of steps to view and inspect the interior of the Temple. In this they were joined and followed by the great throng of people that were attracted to the scene. The First Infantry Illinois National Guard acted as police escort.

The site upon which the Illinois State Monument and Memorial Temple has been erected was selected not only with a view of giving it prominence of position, but also to have it placed where it could at once symbolize and commemorate the hardest struggle of the greatest number of soldiers from Illinois. Fortuitously the ground it occupies meets both these requirements. It is the highest point of land from Cairo to New Orleans and it stands in the center of the position of the 17th Army Corps and of Logan's Division. Within three-quarters of a mile of this position to the right and left served during the siege twenty-one regiments of infantry and nine batteries of artillery from Illinois. The exact place upon which it stands was occupied by Battery D, First Illinois Artillery, from which it sent forth over five thousand shots in the direction of the fated city, and here its commanding officer, Captain Rogers, met his death on May 29, 1863. The site also was the beginning or entrance point of General Logan's sap that resulted in the undermining of the strong Confederate fort in its front, then known as the Third Louisiana Redan, which was blown up by a terrific charge of gunpowder on June 25th. The sanguinary struggle, on that day and the two days following, for the possession of the crater, which resulted from the explosion, was almost entirely carried on by Illinois troops. The site is also historically attractive because it is located close by the Shirley House, which was, during the siege, known as the White House and was then a famous landmark for both armies.

To create a State Memorial that should be commemorative of the Soldiers from Illinois and their sacrifices who filled the ranks of the regiments and served in that campaign and siege and should typify their services during those days in a fitting form, was not a simple task. The suggestions offered to the Commission were of great variety and numbers. These finally crystallized around the idea of giving personal recognition to each individual Illinois soldier by name who served in that campaign, without regard to rank. This became the basic purpose, and the magnificent outer structure was created and erected with this utilitarian object in view.

Above these, upon the apex, with wings outspread, is a solid bronze eagle, gilded with double gold leaf and lacquered to preserve its color. This eagle is 5 feet high and its wings spread 8 feet 6 inches; it weighs nearly a ton. It typifies that North and South, now again indissolubly reunited in peace, are beneath the ægis and under the protecting wings of our great Nation. The entrance to this Memorial Temple is 11 feet high, with a width of 7 feet, which is closed at night by bronze gates. Above this doorway are three large marble panels, each 4 feet high and 7 feet long, containing bas-relief busts of Lincoln, Grant and Yates, the War Governor. Appropriate texts from the utterances of each are carved around these marble wreath-framed portraits.

The interior of this structure is 50 feet 6 inches in diameter. From the floor to the eye of the dome is 55 feet in height. It is lighted in a unique way by one opening at the top 11 feet in diameter, through which the light of the blue heavens above has unrestricted entrance. The floor is a mosaic of imported marble, the center forming the great seal of the State of Illinois, 6 feet in diameter. The interior walls, to where the curve of the dome begins, are of gray Tennessee marble, with white Georgia marble panels. The interior of the dome is entirely of white Georgia marble. Around ten of the twelve sides of the wall of this Temple are set in handsome bronze frames, with laurel designs upon them, 60 bronze tablets; these begin at the left to the entrance door and continue until the entrance door is reached again on the right.

These ten sections each contain six tablets, bearing in bronze letters the names of the Illinois soldiers who served on the staff, or detached from commands which were not in the campaign, and those who composed the regiments, battalions, detachments and batteries from Illinois that participated in the campaign and siege from March 29 to July 4, 1863. The center panel, immediately opposite the entrance opening, is devoted to a large bronze tablet in massive marble and bronze setting. The lettering upon this tablet states in brief form the purpose of the Temple's being, its dedication.

Upon the marble above these bronze tablets are cut in sunken letters the names of the Generals from Illinois that participated in the campaign and siege, and also of the Colonels commanding brigades. These begin in the center, over the tablet of dedication, with the names of Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant, and then continue, with the other names, to the right and left, to the space over the entrance door.

As each Illinois soldier who served here gave in full measure and to the extent of his capacity, such service as was required of him, and as each took the same risk of health and life in performing this service, his commemoration upon these tablets is typified on a plane of equality, without regard to rank.

The white canopied dome of the Illinois Monument, which is fashioned somewhat like the Pantheon at Rome, is tendered to posterity as a Temple of Fame and of peace. It stands sparkling in the sunlight in all dignity and grandeur, silhouetted against the blue, warm southern sky; the greatest soldier's memorial in the world. It honors and perpetuates, not the power and pomp of kings, but the sovereignty of the highest type of American citizenship.

REUNION OF VETERANS OF 72D ILLINOIS ON THE OLD CAMP GROUND AND BATTLEFIELD.

NOTES OF THE CAMP-FIRE.

The camp-fire of the Union and Confederate veterans assembled in the Illinois pavilion and was called promptly to order at 8 o'clock P. M. by Colonel A. C. Matthews, the President of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission. Every seat in the spacious hall was filled, and the standing room was densely packed by a most enthusiastic audience. The pavilion had been beautifully decorated by the people of Vicksburg with the National colors and illuminated with electric lights carrying out this same color scheme, to all of which had been added numerous Japanese hanging lanterns, giving a peculiar mellowness of light which was in sympathy with the inspiration of the hour. After the band had given the audience several inspiring airs, Colonel Matthews announced that all the speeches would be short and that Judge H. M. Trimble, Vice-President of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, would act as the presiding officer of the occasion. Judge Trimble said:

Comrades, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I deem it a high honor to preside at a camp-fire of American soldiers—soldiers who fought on opposing sides in our great civil war—than whom the world never produced better, nor braver. Say what you will, and say it when you will, and believe what you may, the fact still remains that, judged by results and practical achievements, the world has never produced the equal of the American soldier. From the days of the Revolution until now, at every stage and in every period of our history, he has written a new page of high hopes, and set it in the skies, brighter than ever before, illumined with enduring light, to show the world the way to Freedom's holy shrine. And from here to-night, looking to the North and to the South, to the East and to the West, all alike, we hail them, living and dead, as heroes!

What has been done in the National Military Park here at Vicksburg, by the northern states, by the erection of monuments to commemorate the services and sacrifices of their soldiers, we most sincerely hope will be done by the southern states, in equal measure, for theirs. But let it all be done in the right spirit, and for the right purpose. The past is gone. It is not best to live too long in the contemplation of what it was. I would rather live one day in the active and progressive present, and in the contemplation of the glories of the future of this Nation, than a hundred years in the dead past. What is needed now in this Republic is honest citizenship and every-day practical patriotism. If each individual citizen shall be honest, the Nation will be honest. If each individual citizen shall always be patriotic, the Nation will never lack heroic defenders. And so, to-night, we look to the future of our Country with high hopes, and with glad and loyal hearts salute the Flag of the Free.

It is now my great pleasure to present to you, Comrades, Ladies and Gentlemen, the only surviving Lieutenant-General of the Confederate Army. He commanded a Division during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg. The fort just south of the railroad that leads to Jackson was under his command, and the greater part of his division front was south of that point. You know pretty well, Colonel Matthews, what sort of proposition it was to go up against that division; and there are a number of others present who received considerable information about it in 1863. As good as that division might otherwise have been, it was certainly better by reason of its commander. He was wise and able, fearless and resourceful, energetic and heroic. He was every inch a splendid soldier, a true gentleman, and a man of great nobility of character. And since that mighty struggle ended, he has been a patriotic citizen of the great Republic. All his admirable qualities, and his great learning and accomplishments, have been employed in patriotic service, repairing and brightening the places made desolate by war, and leading in the onward and upward march of our progress and civilization to the higher planes of useful living and patriotic citizenship. It is particularly appropriate that he shall speak to us on this occasion, and I know that we will all be delighted to listen to General Stephen D. Lee, who will now address us.

General Lee: The civil war did more to make Illinois famous than any other State in the Union. At that time a country lawyer went forth from Illinois to sit in the seat of Washington and preside over the destinies of a conflict which made the revolution seem like a skirmish. He died, leaving a name to be, like Washington's, an everlasting sign to the American people. On one occasion, upon the site of what has become another battlefield park, perpetually set apart to the memories and tears of Americans, he spoke some words which are likely to outlive all other literature of his age. What he said is so appropriate to this hour I would like to read some of these familiar and touching words to your memories:

"But in a large sense we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from those honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

The time has come, my countrymen, when North and South can read these words together, with swelling hearts, and together mourn the untimely loss of the man Southern born, Northern bred, who loved his whole country and was cut off in the hour when he might have saved the South a reconstruction, the horrors of a policy more terrible than war.

From Illinois came, also, the silent man, the tanner of Galena, the simple-hearted, fearless soldier, who never knew defeat, although the rest of the army recognized the acquaintanceship. He was a man, who, when he was beaten, fought on and on until at last the enemy gave up the field. According to all conventional standards the life of Grant had been a failure until the war began. But his greatness was of an elemental order, which the mighty opportunity revealed and developed, until the Army of the Union became in his hands, like the club of Hercules. The man who wrestled triumphantly with defeat at Shiloh had grown to mastery in the art of war at Vicksburg. Here on hills where we have stood to-day his hand was heavy upon the Confederacy. Here he won the triumph that opened this noble river from the Ohio to the sea. Here he developed the powers which made him the necessary commander to meet and at last overcome the most gifted military genius which the English-speaking race had produced, the incomparable Lee.

Time would fail me to tell of all the distinguished soldiers of Illinois—of Yates, her great war governor. Illinois sprang at a bound from the position of a comparatively unknown frontier state to the front rank in the annals of her time. On these bloody hills, Illinois was represented by almost twice as many commanders as any other state, and when she erects to her dead and living heroes the peerless monument we unveiled yesterday, her liberal and patriotic pre-eminence is peculiarly fitting and appropriate. If any northern state should be honored more than her sisters on the field of Vicksburg, that State should be Illinois, and no monument she could erect would be too white or too enduring a memorial for the glory which her sons have purchased with their blood.

We are come to-day under happy auspices. The descendants of the warriors of North and South are met together to praise the patriotic devotion of the men of Illinois. You won your glory from a glorious foe. America has no Ireland to perpetuate memories of strife and discord. We of the South give you no grudging praise—there is glory enough for all. Our bitterness has melted in the sunshine of liberty, and our mutual hate has been consumed in the love of our common country! To this place we will bring our children and grandchildren—from Springfield and from Beauvoir—from Bunker Hill and from the Alamo; here we will teach them the deathless courage of faithful service, of unflinching fortitude; of patriotism without price and without fear; of love of country, pure and stainless. Let them stand in the trenches where brave men died for duty's sake! Let them mount the ramparts, which only American soldiers could have taken, and here let them be dedicated anew to the love and service of their country, to the dreams of Abraham Lincoln, to the ideals of Robert Lee, to the faithfulness and fidelity of Jefferson Davis—to the forgiving mercy of Ulysses Grant. Then, indeed, shall the blood of the patriot be the seed of a rich and everlasting harvest, fragrant as the memory of their lives, fruitful forever for the glory and permanence of the republic..

Mr. James D. Thames, the next speaker presented, said in part: There could be no greater distinction conferred upon a young man than to participate in the gathering of veterans, once estranged, but now comrades. The soldiers of the civil war had bequeathed to posterity a heritage more durable than bronze or marble. The young men of the South still keep green in their hearts the memory of their heroes of the civil war, they have cheers for the living veterans and tears for the dead. The young men of the South also have been taught that if their fathers were great in war, they were great in peace also. The young men of the North would never know the sad return of Southern men to their homes; of the horrors of the reconstruction period; the terrors of black supremacy and carpet bag government. These things did not come from the fighting men of the North, but from the camp followers.

Let the young men of Illinois and the young men of Mississippi clasp hands and carry the stars and stripes to the very heights of greatness. The past has been buried in the sepulchre of forgiveness and reconciliation, and the future is full of promise and opportunity for the young men of the North and South in the greatest country of the world.

Gen. Green B. Raum of Chicago, the only living survivor of Illinois Brigade Commanders who served during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, was the next speaker introduced.

He said that he had had the great honor, years ago, of addressing one of the first meetings in which the survivors of the blue and the grey assembled, and that ever since that time he had been glad to observe the kindlier feeling growing up between the survivors of the great contending hosts. When the Southern people decided that the Constitution made simply a compact of states, and the Northern people that it made an indissoluble union, there was a question of law raised which could not be adjudicated in the regularly constituted course, and it was therefore submitted to the arbitrament of the sword, from the decision of which no appeal can be taken.

He stated that he was in the convention that nominated Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency, and that Douglas told him at that time that he saw clearly that a civil war was inevitable.

The people of the West, Gen. Raum said, had no feeling of hostility to the South then, any more than now. With them it was simply a question of the preservation of the union, and this not only for the benefit of the people of the North, but also for the benefit of the people of the South. The speaker further said that he had learned a great respect for the Confederate soldier, early in the war. The struggle is all over now, and there is nothing left but to make this country the greatest that the world has ever seen. This war that caused so much loss of treasure, lives, health and suffering has made the influence of the United States foremost in the family of nations.

Colonel A. C. Matthews, the next speaker, said: He wished to address his remarks particularly to the survivors of the two great armies who had a joint discussion on the firing line encircling the City of Vicksburg in May and June, 1863. That was a discussion of giants of that period. The Northern soldiers contended and said that they had been taught that the preservation of the union of the States was necessary to uphold the flag of liberty of this country. The Ship of State had been well-nigh foundered in many a hard-fought battle, and at one time it looked as if it would go down forever. The soldiers from the West, however, came to the rescue, and saved the day by the help of the loyal people of the whole country.

Over 16,000 Union soldiers lie buried in the National Cemetery here as a testimony of their devotion to the cause. Their good faith can never be questioned. In the several engagements around this city they gave up their lives that the Union might be preserved. On this field they found foemen worthy of their steel; men who also believed that their cause was just, and men who willingly surrendered their lives in the hope that their efforts might be a success. Their remains are buried in these hills, near the Union dead, all "awaiting the Judgment Day."

He spoke in a very generous manner and gave full tribute to the manliness and soldierly qualities of Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Albert Sidney Johnston and Pickett, comparing them with such soldiers as Grant, Logan, McPherson, Wilson and Merritt of the Union side, and said that English-speaking people everywhere admitted their valor, and that their lives shed glory upon American arms and manhood everywhere. He, himself, knew that the reconciliation had come, when the Southerners came forward under the leadership of Fitz-Hugh Lee and "Fighting Joe" Wheeler, so gallantly in the Spanish-American War..

The Chairman of the meeting then introduced His Honor, Mayor Griffith, who, after having made some humorous remarks which elicited great laughter, said among other things that each soldier fought for right as God had given him the power of seeing the right. The men of the North fought to preserve the Union, the men of the South to maintain the Constitution. He thanked God that slavery had passed away and he was thankful that the Union had been preserved, but he held sacred in his heart the memory of the lost cause and the men who fought for it.

Judge Richard S. Tuthill of Chicago was the next speaker. He said that throughout the State of Illinois, the people in every station of life feel and express the kindest sentiments for the people of the South. It had been his honor and pleasure to know General Grant personally, who always expressed the kindest regard for the people of the South. During the whole war the great General had always been most courteous to the people on the opposing side. Superior numbers conquered the South, an equal number of men could never have done so.

No man ever heard President Lincoln speak unkindly of the people of the South. These representative men of Illinois uttered the sentiments of her people. The Judge then in a beautiful, soul-stirring peroration appealed in the name of Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses S. Grant, John A. Logan and Robert E. Lee to let the dead past bury its dead and to look to a united rising generation with unmarred hope to the future.

Judge Trimble next introduced Captain D. A. Campbell, the commander of the Vicksburg camp of the United Confederate Veterans, who had been a very efficient aide to the Marshal of the Parade during the dedication ceremonies of the Illinois monuments, and to whom the Illinoisans present felt particularly indebted, for having worked as faithfully as one of our own folks.

Captain Campbell said that he had an especially tender feeling for the ladies of Illinois. One of them had returned to him a flag of the Rankin rifles which must have been a great sacrifice to her as it deprived her of the possession of a dearly prized relic. He then told the story of the flag in a very interesting manner and informed his auditors that it is now in the possession of one of the Brandon ladies who assisted in its making many years ago.

Captain Campbell admonished the young men to remember that this is one country and that there never could again be drawn between the sections a line of demarkation. As I look on the faces of you Northern men before me, he said, I surely feel that I am in the presence of my brothers.

During the struggle between the States, we were controlled largely by our environments. Had you been in the South you would have been with me, had my home been in the North I would have been with you; with you the preservation of the Union was supreme. I believed in autonomy in government, I believed in the sovereignty of my state, and for final recourse, I believed in the right of secession. My first knowledge of secession was the suggestion that came from Massachusetts, and at that time a Mississippian (Mr. Poindexter) stood up in the halls of Congress and demanded the preservation of the Union.

The Chairman then introduced as the last speaker Governor Charles S. Deneen of Illinois.

He said that he very much regretted that imperative business compelled him to leave for Illinois at once. It was then late, and he had but a few moments in which to catch his train, and that therefore what he would like to say would have to be very brief.

He endorsed all the sentiments that had been so ably expressed by his brethren from Illinois, and congratulated the Illinois visitors upon the hospitality extended to them and upon the generous speeches delivered by our Southern brethren. He assured the audience that the people of Illinois felt as Lincoln felt, that the Northern and Southern people should be friends. He referred to his own southern descent, and stated that while the members of his family had been enlisted on the Union side and fought under the Union flag, he had never heard one of them say an unkind word against the Southerners, notwithstanding the fact that during his childhood days it seemed to him that tales of camps and battles was the topic of general conversation among them. At a reunion of his father's regiment held not long ago he heard the same fraternal sentiments expressed in Illinois that had been uttered in his presence this evening. The Governor then, before withdrawing, invited all to come to Illinois, and said that he was sure the Illinois visitors would frequently return to the hospitable city of Vicksburg and bring their friends with them.

After the Governor's remarks the audience rose and sang "America," and the camp-fire was over.

BATON ROUGE AND NEW ORLEANS.

The special trains bearing the guests of the occasion, the Commissioners and the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard, left Vicksburg at midnight on October 27th and arrived at Baton Rouge at six o'clock A. M., on Sunday, October 28th, where they were received by a salute of artillery and a cordial reception by Governor and Mrs. Blanchard, the staff of the Governor, officials of the state, the Honorable Ben R. Mayer, mayor of the city, and all the people.

Governor and Mrs. Blanchard entertained a small party, representing the Governor of Illinois and the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, and Mrs. John A. Logan and her daughter in the executive mansion, at a charming early morning breakfast, in a most cordial and hospitable manner.

The First Infantry Illinois National Guard paraded through the streets of the capital city of Louisiana and all departed for New Orleans about half past nine in the morning, Governor and Mrs. Blanchard, his private secretary, Mr. Thomas O. Harris, and the Adjutant General honoring the Illinois guests by making the journey with them on the official train.

A reception was tendered the official party at the St. Charles Hotel by the citizens of New Orleans in the afternoon. The First Infantry Illinois National Guard, as the special guests of the Famous Washington Light Artillery Battalion of that city and escorted by it and other troops of the Louisiana National Guard paraded through the streets of New Orleans while this reception was going on. This parade was reviewed from the balcony of the St. Charles Hotel by the Governor of Louisiana and his staff, distinguished people of Louisiana and the guests of the Illinois Commission.

The guests from Illinois arranged for a complimentary dinner, to be given at the St. Charles Hotel in honor of the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commissioners, and then served the same on the evening of the day of arrival at New Orleans, October 28th.

GEN. JOSEPH STOCKTON.

General Joseph Stockton of Chicago presided. After coffee had been reached and when fragrant Havanas were perfuming the air he arose and said:

Governor Blanchard, friends and comrades from Illinois—We are gathered here tonight to congratulate our friends who have labored for several years as Commissioners from our State, to erect suitable monuments to commemorate the deeds of Illinois soldiers during the great campaign and siege that bears the name of that city, in the National Military Park of Vicksburg. We are all proud of the work they have done and we have chosen this time and place to thank them for it. I will now introduce to you our distinguished friend, Major E. A. Blodgett, who will act as Toastmaster for the evening.

The Toastmaster: We are gathered here this evening in this historic city because we have been, while on our trip the guests of the Illinois Vicksburg Military Park Commission and participated in the dedicatory service incident to the transfer of our temple and monuments, erected upon that battle field, to the care of the Government.

This evening the members of the Commission are our guests, but before we proceed further I will ask Col. Koch to make a statement with reference to our stay here and the time of our departure.

Colonel Koch: I thank you, Mr. Toastmaster, for calling for this announcement now, before the gentlemen become too much intoxicated with the flow of soul and feast of reason. Life is real and life is earnest and we are a thousand miles away from home, and I suppose that we shall have to consider the way of getting there. We will move homeward at 8:00 o'clock tomorrow night, and please don't think there is a troop train, which will accommodate you, in case you miss our special official train. Your transportation will not be honored on any other train.

Now there is another thing. You cannot travel on this train unless you make your peace with the Illinois Central, and their office is across the street from this hotel. There are two things you must do tomorrow: have your tickets gazed at and your signatures O. K'd, and be at the train at 8:00 o'clock tomorrow night. You can cut up just as much as the Government of New Orleans and of the State of Louisiana will permit in the meantime.

The Toastmaster: On occasions of this kind it is proper to divide the good things between the stomach and the head. We have cared for our stomachs and now we will turn our attention to the good things which we will be privileged to listen to in the way of toasts and responses. We are fortunate in having with us the Governor of the State of Louisiana—a state that was so rich in territory and generous in spirit when it came into the Union that it gave of its abundance the land out of which have been carved Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas, and still has enough left to stand up and be counted in the front line of States which go to make up this great American Republic.

To the Governor has been assigned the first toast of the evening, "The President of the United States." I take great pleasure in introducing Governor Newton Crain Blanchard.

Governor Blanchard: Mr. Toastmaster and fellow citizens—I realize that I am addressing an audience of northern men. I am, I believe, the only Louisianian at the banquet, except ex-Governor Warmoth, and he, originally, was an Illinoisan.

It is a very great pleasure to me to have the opportunity of addressing so distinguished a body as the one I see before me from our sister State of Illinois.

Before giving attention to the subject assigned to me by the Toastmaster, I beg indulgence to make a digression, promising to return to my subject later.

You have come down here from Illinois, and on your way to this city you stopped at Vicksburg (the objective point of your journey), to perform a sacred duty, one for the discharge of which every true southern man honors you. Your State did the right thing when her Legislative Assembly appropriated $260,000.00 to build a great mausoleum on the battlefield of Vicksburg to commemorate the valor of her soldiers. We from Louisiana expect in due time to erect there a monument, not so costly as yours, perhaps, because our State is not yet as financially able as Illinois. We are just now coming again to the wonderful prosperity that was ours prior to 1861. But we are going to erect at Vicksburg in the near future a monument to commemorate the fortitude and courage of the heroic sons of Louisiana who contended with you on that historic battlefield.

Louisiana furnished more troops in defense of Vicksburg than any other State of the South, and it is the wish of the people of the State that there should be done for the Louisianians who fought and fell at Vicksburg just what Illinois has now done for her sons who fought and fell there.

Our General Assembly did recently pass a measure appropriating $100,000 for a monument to be built now, but, before so acting, bills had been passed appropriating money for other purposes far in excess of the revenues of the State, and, under the circumstances, the Governor felt called upon most regretfully to veto the monument bill. But the measure is only postponed; it has not been defeated. We wanted to and did appropriate $300,000 for pensions for the ex-Confederate soldiers of our state still surviving. We could not do this and also appropriate $100,000 to erect a monument to our dead soldiers at Vicksburg. So we arranged to care for the living first and the dead afterwards.

And, in this connection, I want to say a few words to this distinguished assembly of Northern men about the State that you are now visiting, and of which it is my great honor to be the chief executive officer.

Louisiana is one of the states of the American Union that has a great future ahead of it. A rapid development is going on here. The State has advanced prodigiously and the possibilities of future development here are simply immense. The last census of the United States shows that Louisiana heads the list of the States of the Union in the money value per acre of her crops. There are grown here on these broad, fertile lands of ours four great staple products, each in equal luxuriance, cotton, corn, sugar cane and rice. When the sugar cane crop fails, the cotton and rice make up for it; when the cotton crop is not good, the sugar crop comes in to supply the deficiency; and so it is with the rice. The rice and cotton crops are abundant this year and will make up for the sugar cane crop, which is not as good as we would like.

We have in Louisiana the most extensive tracts of long-leaf pine to be found in the United States. The long-leaf pine is one of the kings of lumber trees. And here in the swamps grows the cypress, considered the most valuable for lumber purposes of any of the trees grown in the South. The lumber industry alone is making the State great, rich and powerful.

We have been able to discover several valuable minerals. It was formerly thought that this low country of ours, bordering on the gulf, had no pretensions to becoming a mineral-bearing State, and yet we rank as such high on the list. We have no gold, iron, silver, copper or lead, but there is in Louisiana a vast deposit of pure rock salt, and it is being mined to a large extent, and the possibilities of its being further mined are immense. This is blasted out as you do coal in the Pittsburg regions and it is 99 per cent pure. All you have to do is to bring it to the surface and crush it and it is ready for the market.

Louisiana also has a great sulphur mine within her borders—the greatest in the world. All you have to do is to bring it to the surface and it is ready for market. Like our salt it comes pure from the bosom of the earth.

We can supply the world with sulphur for years to come, and undersell all competitors.

In southwestern Louisiana, we have a wonderful field of fuel oil of good quality. The capacity has been from forty to seventy thousand barrels a day, making Louisiana the second oil-producing State in the Union, excelled only by California.

In northwestern Louisiana, some three years ago, a remarkable field of natural gas was discovered. They were boring for oil and found the gas. It is very abundant and of fine quality. Two of the wells became wild, caught fire and threw a column of fire nearly a hundred feet high, roaring like Niagara. You could see the burning well at night for twenty miles. The gas is being piped into Shreveport and is sold at 31 cents per thousand cubic feet for domestic purposes and at 10 cents for manufacturing purposes, the cheapest fuel in America.

These are some of the things that are making the State a rich commonwealth.

The people here have caught the spirit of progress and they are up and doing. They are no longer inert; if the climate in times past has had that effect, they have overcome it. They, perhaps, have taken the cue from you who live further North. They are abreast with you.

Largely through the construction of the Panama Canal, New Orleans is destined, we think, to become one of our great cities. The eastern end of the Panama Canal is six hundred miles nearer to New Orleans than it is to New York, and that difference is likely to have tremendous effect upon the commerce of the country, in shaping the direction it takes.

Nature intended that the traffic and trade and commerce of North America should move on lines of longitude, and so she made the rivers to run from north to south. But man came along and constructed great railroads across the continent on lines of latitude and reversed the order of things. But we believe the construction of the Panama Canal will restore it in great part. The commerce of the country will, in large part, come up and go down the rivers and the railroads that parallel them, seeking the nearest port to the entrance of the canal, getting in to the great highway of the trade of the Orient, and the result of this will be that New Orleans, the nearest port to the eastern end of the Canal, will become one of the greatest of American cities.

Southern ports have not for a generation been receiving their just share of the export and import commerce of the United States; but, gentlemen of the North, our day is coming, and it is near at hand. Not that there is going to be any diminution of what you have now; you may hold to it and increase it, and ought to. But this country of ours is growing greater all the time. It is now leading all the nations of the world and so there is going to be plenty for all. Your city of Chicago will be even greater than she is; she will some day jump over on the Indiana side of the line and, continuing her marvelous growth and development, is destined to take a leading place among the world's greatest cities.

Now, gentlemen, I want you to carry back with you pleasant impressions of the State in which you are to-night. The latchstring for you is always on the outside of our doors. We want men all over the country to visit us as you have, because we feel satisfied that all that is needed to unite us in the closest bonds of friendship and brotherly love is to know each other better.

America to-day is looked up to by the other nations of the world. They wait to see what position the great Republic will take on the great questions of the day.

When the Republic was in its infancy, the first President of the United States, in retiring from public life, wrote his memorable Farewell Address to his countrymen. In it he advised that the American Republic stand aloof from international complications and entanglements. That was wise and salutary advice to the youthful Republic. It fitted the situation then, and for fifty years of our national life thereafter. But in the nature of things, as we grew stronger and assumed a leading position among the nations of the earth, it was hardly possible to continue the position of aloofness and strict neutrality.

And so it was that a few years ago we went to war with Spain. It was not a war waged for the aggrandizement of our country. It was not a war of conquest. Nor did we take up arms for the sake of winning military glory or renown. We entered upon that war to free a people struggling for their liberties, even as we struggled for ours in the Revolutionary period. We did for Cuba what France did for us in the years following 1776.

We assisted the Cubans in achieving their independence. We had announced to the world that that was our only object; that we did not intend to annex Cuba to the United States; and that if the war resulted in Cuban independence our armies would occupy the country only so long as was necessary to maintain order until the Cuban people could get themselves in position to adopt a constitution and form a government of their own. Cuba was freed. The Cuban people, in due time, adopted a constitution and organized a government, and when all was ready the American army of occupation evacuated the Island and the flag of our country, with the approval of the American people, was lowered and that of the Cuban republic raised in its stead.

We had made good our word to the world. We had kept faith. We had turned Cuba over to the Cubans.

It was a wonderful example of forbearance and magnanimity. It enormously increased the influence and prestige of the American Republic. The war had cost us a hundred and fifty millions of dollars in money and many precious lives. Yet we asked no recompense.

Turning Cuba over to the Cubans was not all we may claim credit for in that war.

We had made no promises in regard to any of the other colonial possessions of Spain. There were the Philippines. We did not want those islands. But when Dewey's guns in Manila Bay flashed defiance to Spain and destruction to her fleet and forts, we found ourselves in possession of the archipelago. We had not contemplated that conquest; it was merely an incident of the war. Still it was ours by right of war. We did not know what to do with it. We did not want to hold on to it and yet we did not see our way clear to turning it loose for fear some one or more of our commercial rivals—England, Germany, Japan, Russia—might seize the islands, and this would not suit us and our idea of the "open door" for American products and goods.

And so—no lens, volens—we held on to the Philippines.

Just there we set another example of magnanimity to the world. By right of conquest the islands were ours. But we did not, as we might have done, rest on that title. We entered into a treaty with Spain for the recognition of Cuban independence, and in that treaty stipulated to pay Spain, and did pay her, twenty millions of dollars for all claims she had to the Philippines.

This act added to the renown of our country among the nations. America had taken the lead in war; she had taken it, too, in forbearance and generosity to a fallen foe.

Whether we want it or not our destiny has forced us to depart from the advice given by the Father of his Country in the early days of the Republic, and, willing or unwilling, it seems we must take our part in international affairs arising and to arise.

When foreign complications develop the question is asked by the nations: "What does the government at Washington think? What will be the position of the United States?" This is well, for the voice of the great American Republic may, I think, be relied upon to be cast always on the side of the preservation of the peace of the world. America should take the lead in this. Her voice demanding peace, her influence cast on that side, should be heard and heeded by the nations. When the President of the United States puts his hand down and says that there shall be no war between contending nations on the verge of it, we want it so that the voice of America will prevail and war will not be waged. We want a great navy, not as a preparation for war, but as a guaranty of peace. The voice of the strong crying the right is more potential than the voice of the weak crying the right.

Now that is the kind of American I am and there are thousands of such throughout the South.

When the President of the United States speaks on international questions he gives utterance to the voice of 85,000,000 free people.

This is more true of America than of any other nation.

There is no position on earth—among nations, or men—more proud, more powerful, more commanding than that of the Presidency of the great American Republic.

No potentate wields a vaster power than the man who fills it.

He comes by the office not in virtue of hereditary descent, privilege or prerogative; not through lineage or blood royal. It is not his by the accident of birth; the doctrine of "the divine right of kings" is scouted and utterly denied in America.

The President of the United States comes to his high office by the free choice of the people whom he governs. The great principle upon which free institutions are based is that "all government must rest upon the consent of the governed." That principle finds its fullest exemplification here with us in America.

No new, untried, inexperienced man is ever elected to the Presidency. The man who aspires to that position must be "somebody;" must have proven himself in some way equipped for the satisfactory discharge of its duties. He must be known to his countrymen; he must have acquired reputation somewhere in some line of honorable service. He must be regarded as a representative man—representative of the thought, ideas, sentiments of the American people, or of a large portion of them. He must stand forth as the exponent of the principles, policies, purposes of those who elect him.

As for the man—the present occupant of the Presidential chair—he stands forth a splendid representative of sturdy, capable, vigorous, progressive Americanism.

This is thought of him by his countrymen without regard to politics.

And we of the South, as much as you of the North, are proud of the high position he has taken among the rulers of nations; of the exalted esteem in which he is held by the people of the world.

Through him our country has earned for itself the proudest of all titles—that of Peacemaker among the nations.

We of the South have come to know the President much better than we once did and he has come to know us better. He has done a good many things that have brought him pretty close to our hearts. His trip through the South a year ago demonstrated this to him.

He was here in this city and never before had I witnessed a grander ovation given to man than was accorded him here.

No President has done more to obliterate sectional lines in his country, and to restore between the people of the North and the people of the South, in their attitude one towards the other, the true spirit of equality and fraternity, than has Theodore Roosevelt.

The Toastmaster: I am sure every person here has most heartily enjoyed and cordially endorsed the remarks made by Governor Blanchard. Nothing could be added to the hearty welcome he has given us.

The next toast upon our programme is "The State of Louisiana"—to be responded to by a learned Judge and true Gentleman, Judge Richard S. Tuthill.

Judge Tuthill: Mr. Toastmaster, I suppose one is not expected to say very much about the toast assigned to him. That suits me to-night exactly.

I crave your permission, sir, for myself and on behalf of those situated as I am, to thank the Illinois Commissioners in whose honor this banquet is spread, to thank and congratulate them for their courtesy to us and for the magnificent success that has crowned their work. They were trusted and honored by the State of Illinois to expend in behalf of the State the princely sum of a quarter million dollars in the erection of a fitting memorial and monuments in the Vicksburg National Park to commemorate the heroism and faithfulness of her soldiers and sailors who participated in the memorable siege of Vicksburg and in the battles which preceded it. To honor you gentlemen, Commissioners of the State, this banquet is given. We thank you one and all for the delightful trip we have enjoyed through your consideration, thoughtful kindness and excellent management.

As a resident, a native of the State of Illinois, who saw service at Vicksburg, not in an Illinois regiment, yet under the command of that great Illinoisan, General John A. Logan, I here and now tender my thanks to you for the manner in which you have discharged your high duty to the State, the nation and the cause of patriotism and peace. Every lover of his country, whether he wore the blue or the gray in the Civil War, can look with pride and satisfaction upon the beautiful temple erected by you, which from almost every point of the historic field can be seen, white as the Dove of Peace and dedicated to the fraternal union of all the citizens of our reunited land. May it ever stand, dropped as from an approving Heaven, an evidence of a perfect and lasting reconciliation. Upon its walls in enduring bronze are the names of the men, privates and generals, who in the companies and regiments of the State took part in the siege of Vicksburg. Upon its walls are the words of the great sons of Illinois, Lincoln, Grant and Yates, suggesting not pride and exultation, but rather a profound feeling of sympathy and brotherly love.

"Comrades"—may I not call all those who took part in the great struggle, whether they fought under the stars and bars of the Confederacy or under the beloved stars and stripes of the Union, such? Did not all by offering life and all that men held dear for the cause they fought for give the highest evidence that they were inspired by love of home and country? Were not all Americans our brothers whose valor shall be the heritage of all the brave and patriotic men of our beloved country who come after us?

"Comrades," we have heard here in the beautiful city of New Orleans, and especially from the lips of the eloquent chief executive of the state of Louisiana, from many prominent gentlemen who received us at Baton Rouge, the capital, and from all the men of the South whom it has been our pleasure to meet, especially at the great Union and Confederate Camp Fire night before last in the City of Vicksburg, no sentiment which was not marked by kindly feeling and a sincere regard for our common country and its welfare.

"Comrades," we approach the sunset of life, not many years are left to any of us for services to our beloved land. Shall we not devote what remains to promoting in every way within our power the wiping out of all past differences and bitterness? The grass, the flowers, the beautifully foliaged trees of your lovely southland have covered the ground and earthworks where brave Americans, our brothers, fought, as only the citizens of a free country can fight. Can we not see here that in nature which is indicative of the will of Him who makes the grass to grow, the flowers to bloom and the trees to spread their welcome shade over all, that in our hearts should grow forgetfulness of all that divided us in the past and that the sweet flowers of mutual regard should take the place of the bitter herbs of which we all tasted in the days of our youth? To us, sir, who come from Illinois, it has ever been easy to extend sympathy and charity to men of the South, for we have had great teachers, who felt and spoke of the South as children feel and speak of parents whose memory they love and cherish. The mother of John A. Logan was a southern woman, as was also the mother and father of his noble wife, who honors us with her presence here. Governor Yates was born in Kentucky,

General Grant had intimate associations with the people of the South, lived among them in his earlier life, and up to the day of his death counted among his dearest and most trusted friends many men who served with great distinction in the armies of the Confederacy. Our greatest and best, the chief, the beloved apostle of Freedom, Abraham Lincoln, was southern born. His great name and fame will to the latest hour of recorded history cast an imperishable luster, not only upon the State which gave him to Freedom and its cause, but as well upon the State of his birth, Kentucky. From the lips of these and many others, the youths of Illinois who filled up her regiments, in numbers a quarter of a million men, at no time even in the midst of the strife heavy words of bitterness and hate towards the people of the South, but always words of respect, of admiration and of love. Some of these utterances, fair and true samples of what were said by these and many other such men in Illinois, future generations, the historians of this grand period in our national existence, shall read inscribed upon the walls of the Temple you gentlemen of Illinois have caused to be there preserved in bronze and granite. That the representatives of all the people of our State should by an almost unanimous vote in the General Assembly take from the Treasury more than a quarter of a million of dollars and expend it in the heart of the South in the erection of a memorial of Peace and Good-Will, is the strongest proof that the generations following the era of the Civil War entertain the same feeling towards the people of the South that their great teachers did. That this feeling may last and be reciprocal is the wish and prayer of the patriotic, North and South.

My toast, sir, is "Louisiana," a noble sentiment, which should call forth the eloquence of a great orator, and has it not? For has not the distinguished gentleman upon whom the people of Louisiana from his youth up have heaped deserved honors and who is to-day her Governor, in eloquent words, which have delighted and instructed us all, told of the wealth, prosperity and greatness of this splendid Commonwealth?

The subject of my toast is fraught with interest, not only to Americans, but to the student of history as well. Not far from where we sit passed De Soto when he made his discovery of the Father of Waters. Here in the century in which were made the settlements at Jamestown, and further north at Plymouth Rock, the puissant Frenchmen came. Their discoverers made their long travels from the Gulf of St. Lawrence on the north to the Gulf of Mexico on the south. From Louisburg and Quebec by way of the Great Lakes and the rivers they came. LaSalle, Joliet and the great priest, Marquette, in the service of his Master, led, and the latter struck his tent where now stands the imperial City of Chicago. Thence they passed down the beautiful Illinois to the Father of Waters, in the canoes of the red man, down the turbid stream past St. Louis, St. Genevieve and old Kaskaskia, where they established posts, until her flood washed the ancient hills of Vicksburg and Natchez, and thence on until at Baton Rouge and New Orleans again were heard the soft tones and polite phrases of the sunny land of France.

Through Louisiana and its transfer to the United States by the great Napoleon in 1803, our country came to have a direct and important connection with the great wars which in the latter part of the 18th century and the first part of the 19th convulsed all Europe and left an indestructible impression upon the governments of the whole world. France was indeed most intimately, potently and honorably associated with the establishment of this Republic. Without her aid independence must have been long delayed, if ever realized.

Grateful America delights to cherish the memory of that ancient friendship and has pleasure in seeing preserved the landmarks left by France on the soil of America. This is done in the names of rivers and towns now grown to be great cities, and in a thousand other ways. We of the profession of the Law are pleased, sir, that here in Louisiana has been preserved, to have its wholesome and ameliorating effect upon the Common Law of England, the body of the Civil Law and the Code Napoleon. As to-day in Canada the descendants of the early French settlers have preserved the language, traditions and habits of their ancestors just as they were before Wolfe gained an English victory over Montcalm and France on the plains of Abraham, so here at one of the great entrances to our country we find, and are glad to find, not only the sterling traits of character which are to be found elsewhere in our land, but the pleasing vivacity, the genial warmth and hospitality which so greatly add to the pleasure of existence.

But I am not one, who if able, as I am not, would attempt to "gild refined gold." You will pardon me if I do not essay to repeat what Governor Blanchard has so well said. His eloquence, his strong, clean cut and unequivocal utterances, abounding in national and patriotic sentiments, breathing the courageous and progressive spirit of the present time, and full of hope for his beloved State and Country, gave me a pleasure greater than I can tell. I shall, we all shall, Governor Blanchard, carry back with us as a most inspiring and happy memory of your words heard here to-night. For myself, I hope to live to see the time when another man from the South shall sit in the chair once occupied by great men, truly representative, not only of their States, but of the United States, by Washington and Jefferson, by Madison and Monroe, by Harrison and Tyler. I should be pleased to have the distinguished guest of this evening, Newton Crain Blanchard of Louisiana, that man. (Great applause).

If I have not said much on the subject of the toast, sir, you must allow that I have spoken with feeling of one of the most admirable products of the State of Louisiana. I propose the prosperity, health and happiness of Louisiana, her people and her Governor.

The Toastmaster: We are all proud of the fact that Louisiana is a State in our Union, so is Texas, Mississippi and New York on the list and also the State of Illinois, and

"Not without her wondrous story
Could be writ the Nation's Glory."

We are all sorry that the Governor of our State could not be with us on this occasion and respond to the next toast on our programme. He was called home because of urgent business, but has left with us his representative, our friend, the Secretary of State, the Hon. James A. Rose, who will not disappoint the audience when he responds to the toast "Illinois."

Mr. Toastmaster and Gentlemen:—I was informed this afternoon that, in the absence of Governor Deneen, I was to respond to the toast "Illinois."

It would be difficult to conceive of a greater subject than this. It would take the entire night to tell you of the wondrous city on the lake which, in the memory of nearly everyone here, has grown from a mere village to be one of the greatest commercial centers the world has ever known.

The time allotted to me is too short to tell you of the broad fields of the great State of Illinois that produces grain enough to feed the world. Or, of that great southern Illinois fruit country.

It would be enough for one speech to tell you of the countless millions of tons of black diamonds which are annually taken from the ground of Illinois, enough to keep the furnace fires of the world glowing for ages to come.

SECRETARY OF STATE ROSE.

I will not take up your time to tell you of the men of renown that the State of Illinois has produced. I might speak to you in bated breath of the immortal Lincoln, of Grant, of Logan, Palmer and Oglesby, and of the great war governor, Yates. I might proudly speak to you to-night of the great number of citizens of Illinois who went forth to do battle in the civil war on the side which they considered to be right.

If I had the gift of speech I might make your bosoms swell by speaking to you of the noble, loyal women of Illinois, who stayed at home and by their self-sacrifice encouraged the men at the front, and made the living for those who remained at home.

What a wonderful story it would be if I could tell you of the rapidity with which Illinois has accumulated capital, until it rivals the richness of Wall Street.

If I had the time I might speak to you of our magnificent free school system, which has put Illinois in the front rank of all the states.

I might speak of all these things and yet it would be saying what might be said in part, at least, of this entire country of ours. While we are proud of Illinois we are also proud of Louisiana; we are proud of Maine and we are proud of any other great state in this union of ours, and the greatest thing that can be said of Illinois, with its five millions of free people, is that it is one of the forty-five states of this great National Union.

The Toastmaster: The next toast on our programme is the "Illinois Vicksburg Military Park Commission," and I doubt if our gifted orator and genial friend, the Judge of the Supreme Court of our State, can say more than the truth about the splendid work they have done and the high esteem in which we hold them.

I have the pleasure of introducing Judge Wilkin.

Judge J. W. Wilkin: Mr. Toastmaster—In selecting me to respond to one of the sentiments of the evening, I must still insist that you have made an unpardonable mistake, and yet if you had permitted me to select my topic I could not have chosen one more agreeable to me. If, therefore, I shall fail to say anything suitably complimentary to the Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission, it will not be because I do not fully appreciate the splendid manner in which it has discharged its duty.

We love Illinois for her bountiful fields of grain and meadows, for her splendid herds of cattle, her inexhaustible mines of coal and stone, her beautiful forests and her flowing streams, and we say to Governor Blanchard tonight that from our wondrous city on the northern lakes, we hail the great state of Louisiana, with her fields of cotton and sugar cane and all her splendid resources so beautifully and eloquently described by him, and Chicago extends her hand of greeting to this beautiful city on the gulf. And most heartily do we thank the people of New Orleans for their splendid hospitality.

We are proud of Illinois, not merely for her material resources, but for the men she has produced in peace as well as in war.

JUDGE J. W. WILKIN.

Not without thy wondrous story,
Illinois, Illinois.
Can be writ the Nation's glory,
Illinois, Illinois.
On the record of thy years,
Ab'ram Lincoln's name appears
Grant and Logan and our tears
Illinois, Illinois.

And when we add to these names Palmer, McClelland, Oglesby, and the hundred others who participated in the great Civil War, and who both before and since that period wrought in the councils of the state and nation in the marvelous development of the government of the United States, making it the pride of every true citizen and the envy of all the nations of the earth, we claim the right to foster a just pride in our great prairie state. But more to my subject! When we were told that a National Park was to be established at Vicksburg, naturally as Illinoisans, we felt an interest in the great enterprise and a strong desire to do something in honor of the men from our state who participated in the battles preceding the siege, and final capture of the Gibraltar of the Confederates. Fifty odd regiments of infantry, ten of cavalry and fifteen batteries of artillery, numbering in all over thirty-five thousand men from our state, took part in that historic campaign. Whatever feeling of chagrin or disappointment may be felt in the South by a reference to the surrender of that city, and its dire consequences to the Confederacy, we know its people are generous enough and brave enough to accord to us, as we do to them, the great privilege of honoring the graves of our citizens who fell in that memorable conflict.

I do not care tonight to even remember the causes which led to the Civil War, much less to discuss the question as to who was to blame, who was right and who was wrong in that conflict. These are questions upon which I have heard more or less expression of opinion during our delightful excursion to the "Sunny South." To me it is a matter, now of no consequence. One thing I know, and that is, that the men who stood behind the guns from the North and from the South were not the men who made the mistakes or were responsible for that war, and I further know that the men who fought the battles of the Civil War on either side were honest and conscientious in their convictions that the cause for which they fought was right. That men could have so fought and died for a cause which they did not religiously believe in, is preposterous. Of course they were honest.

Illinois did not stop to count the cost of properly honoring her soldiers in the Vicksburg campaign and cherishing the names of the living, who formed a part of that great army. A quarter of a million dollars was promptly appropriated by the legislature for the erection of a suitable Illinois monument in the park and a commission was appointed to locate our troops and decide upon a suitable monument on the line in the rear of the city. The unsurpassed success of their work stands on that line in the shape of a temple or mausoleum, said by those competent to judge, to be the most beautiful on this continent, and of which General Stephen D. Lee, who fought under the Confederate flag at Vicksburg, said to me on the day of its dedication: "Illinois has, in my judgment, the most unique and beautiful monument that exists in this country, and one which is not surpassed in the world. Its exterior is simply splendid and the interior in its design is unsurpassed by human skill and ingenuity." The commission was first composed of eighteen members, all of whom had participated in the campaign. They visited the lines, assisted in locating the regiments and batteries, and selected the place where the monument should be erected. It then being ascertained that the number was too great for ready and prompt action in the details which were to follow in the completion of the work, by common consent the number was reduced to nine, who faithfully, without compensation, have given their time and their energies to the accomplishment of the work assigned them. I venture the assertion that no nine men could have been found in the state of Illinois who would have done their work better, if as well. They are present with us to-night, and we venture nothing in saying on behalf of all the people of Illinois, "well done, good and faithful servants." I cannot pause now to attempt a description of the temple, nor to even allude to the incidents of that campaign.

Men of Illinois! as we return to our homes let us not forget the words of patriotism which we have this night heard from the lips of the Governor and let us cherish the spirit which we have witnessed everywhere in the South on this trip, looking to the permanent and speedy reunion of the hearts and sentiment of the South and North, which is so sure a harbinger of a permanent and everlasting Union.

The Toastmaster: The next toast is the "Army and Navy." We are fortunate in having with us a representative of that arm of the Government who has stood for and represented us in every port of the civilized world for the past forty years, and who has done it with such dignity and force as to compel the respect and approval of all the people of this country.

I have the pleasure of introducing Admiral Bowman H. McCalla.

Admiral McCalla: Mr. Toastmaster, your Excellencies, Comrades, Companions and Gentlemen:

I am very glad to have this opportunity to express to the Illinois Military Park Commission the appreciation of Mrs. McCalla and myself for the honor done to us by the invitation to visit the Capitals of the States of Mississippi and Louisiana and to take part in the important and interesting ceremonies attending the dedication of the Memorials erected by the State of Illinois in honor of all of her sons who took part in the operations culminating in the siege and surrender of Vicksburg.

We are greatly pleased to have seen the beautiful, classical Temple, in which the names of the 36,000 officers and men who served in that campaign are inscribed on bronze tablets.

B. H. McCalla Reunited Army & Navy

I also desire to thank the Toastmaster for assigning to me the honor of replying to the joint toast of the "Army and Navy."

It was my good fortune to have successfully co-operated with our army, or, with its Cuban ally, during the recent Spanish War, and again during the Insurrection in the Philippines. It is, therefore, a very great pleasure for me to do honor to our brothers of the sister service. It is only necessary to state that in both campaigns I had the greatest admiration for our Army, and for the detachment of Cubans from Garcia's Force stationed about Guantanamo City, which so successfully co-operated with the naval and marine forces under me while I commanded the naval base in Guantanamo Bay. At daylight on the 7th of June, with the "Marblehead" and the "Yankee" under my command I entered the Bay of Guantanamo and reconnoitered it and its several channels and inlets under instructions from Admiral Sampson. As the "Marblehead" steamed into the Bay, two shells from her six pounders passed through the small cable house on the beach (a mile within the entrance), destroying the splices connecting the two heavily armored outside French cables leading to Cape Haytien on the Island of Hayti and westward to Santiago, with the two smaller and unarmored cables, leading to Caimanera, four miles up the Bay, and thence extending inland 14 miles to Guantanamo City, the Headquarters of the Spanish General in command of the District. Cable communications between Guantanamo City and Santiago and Europe was thus completely destroyed early on the 7th of June.

Before 8 o'clock of the same day, Captain Goodrich, then in command of the Auxiliary St. Louis, had found and cut the westbound, or Santiago cable, outside the Bay, and about 5 in the afternoon found and mutilated the eastbound, or Cape Haytien Cable, just within the entrance. A boat's crew from the "Marblehead" had before noon dragged for, found, and cut the smaller inside cable connecting Cape Haytien with Caimanera. As there were no land lines, but the one I have mentioned, leading into or out of Guantanamo City, all telegraphic communication with the Spanish force of 7,000 men was destroyed and not renewed until after the surrender of Santiago.

A 5-inch shell from a gun on the "Marblehead" set fire to a house in the village, a mile inside the Bay, destroying the ammunition for two small field guns used in the Block House on the hill above the cable house and village. This Block House was set fire to later in the day by shells from the "Yankee" and about its ruins a Battalion of Marines afterwards intrenched upon joining my command a few days later.

On the 7th of June I first came in communication with the command of General Perez (the Cuban detachment previously mentioned) of about 1,000 officers and men. They were starving, some were naked, but few had rifles, all, however, were brimful with patriotism and with the enthusiasm natural to the knowledge that at last the United States had intervened in their behalf and that Cuba would surely be free. This force was supplied with food, shoes, clothing, rifles and ammunition, and with the most efficient co-operation from its officers and men, 7,000 Spanish troops stationed in and about Guantanamo City were prevented from falling on Shafter's rear in front of Santiago, but 38 miles away, over a good road.

Between the 7th of June and the 15th of July, the Cubans about Guantanamo, with whom I was in almost daily communication, captured fifteen (15) Spanish couriers or spies. On the last-mentioned date I had the great gratification to communicate with the Spanish General, Pareja, under a flag of truce, and to inform him that he and his force had been surrendered and that the formal ceremonies would take place at Santiago on the 17th of July, two days later.

During the period I have mentioned the Marblehead's boats had captured two sailing sloops coming toward the Bay from the eastward. They were from Baracoa on the north side of the Island, nearly opposite Guantanamo Bay. The first sloop came ostensibly for oil for use in the Light House on the eastern end of Cuba, but as oil was then manufactured and shipped from Baracoa and never issued from Guantanamo and as those in the sloop had had an opportunity to destroy despatches before their capture, it was assumed that the men in the sloop were sent to direct the Spanish General to march to the relief of Santiago. Similar instructions had been sent to the General at Manzanillo, 90 miles west of Santiago, who with 3,000 troops did reach that place on the day that Cervera sailed to defeat. Those in the second sloop stated that they came from Baracoa to look for the first sloop, and they, too, had sufficient opportunity before capture to destroy any written papers.

Of the fifteen couriers or spies captured by the Cubans attempting to pass the Cuban lines, ten were sent out from Guantanamo by the Spanish General, four came from Santiago, and one was taken coming from Baracoa with a cipher despatch from the Captain General at Havana, sent along the north coast to Baracoa. The courier from Baracoa and one of the four from Santiago confessed that in addition to the cipher despatches they carried, they had verbal messages urgently directing General Pareja to march on Santiago with his force. The fifteen couriers or spies were all justly shot after being courtmartialed, because it was of the utmost importance to us that the Spanish force "contained" in Guantanamo should have no communication with or from any source outside their lines. After the surrender the Spanish General sent to the Cuban Camp and obtained information as to the fate of each of the ten couriers he had sent out with despatches. I afterwards learned that shortly before the cables were cut on the 7th of June, instructions had been received by Pareja directing him to hold Guantanamo at all hazards, without doubt, because the English, two centuries ago, had based their land campaign on Guantanamo Bay and had advanced to Santiago by way of Guantanamo City. I also heard that no information of any kind had reached either the Spanish or the citizens of Guantanamo after the cables had been cut on June the 7th, until I personally notified the General of his surrender on the 15th of July following. Without the exertions of the Cuban force about Guantanamo those 7,000 Spanish troops would have surely marched to the relief of Santiago in rear of General Shafter's force.

The remarkable success attending the establishing of civil government in Cuba was due to our Army. And for this remarkable and most satisfactory work the Army has never received sufficient credit. At the end of four years of a just, honest and most efficient administration, our Army Officers on their departure from Havana on May 1, 1902, left the Government machinery of Cuba in perfect working order, under the Cuban chiefs of Departments who had, after being trained as understudies, actually been administering the Government of the Island for six months. It was a great achievement in Peace, and I mention a most wonderful result in providing for a public school system by which the attendance of pupils was increased from 4,000 on the breaking out of the war to 394,000 on May 1, 1902. The following year in the Philippines I was, with the force under my command, blockading the north and west coasts of Luzon equally fortunate in co-operating with that part of our Army under General Young, who was most successful in his campaign on the west coast of that Island. The navy, proceeding along the coast in advance of the Military forces, which marched by the valleys paralleling the sea, captured cities several miles inland, thus affording sea bases for Young's troops. The naval Brigade from the Oregon captured the City of Vigan, of 40,000 inhabitants, three miles from the sea, while a similar force from the "Wheeling," with one field piece from the Army, the whole under a Lieutenant from the Navy, took and occupied Loag, a City of 50,000 people, four and one-half miles inland.

The very wonderful march of two Battalions of the 33d and 34th Regiments of Volunteers, recruited in the great Mississippi Valley and Arizona, Colorado and Wyoming, across the Cordillera of Northern Luzon, without guides, over unknown paths, in an unproductive region, experiencing untold hardships and suffering great privations, but successfully rescuing Lieutenant Gilmore and a party of American prisoners after crossing the summit, has never received sufficient praise nor adequate reward. This force from our army was unfortunate in having no correspondent to exploit their exertions, their skill and endurance, nor to tell of their sufferings.

I was able to supply Young's forces with food, shoes and clothing, thus enabling his men, away from the military base, to move with celerity and success, for which help he was most generous in acknowledging officially and at all times in private conversation.

The force under my command received in Aparri, at the mouth of the great Cagayan River of the North, the surrender of all the Philippine Military Force in the Provinces of Cagayan and Isabella and in the group of Batan Islands to the north of Luzon. The surrender was made to me personally by the Military Governor, who was Aguinaldo's representative in Northern Luzon. I at once despatched a small stern-wheel steamer, with the commander of the "Helena" and twelve men up the River, to show the flag and to relieve Major Batchelor, whom I knew was on his way down the valley of the River. At Tuegugarao, 90 miles from Aparri, Commander Moore met Major Batchelor, who, with a Battalion of the 24th (colored) Infantry, had cut loose from his base in the vicinity of Manila Bay and had crossed the Cordillera at the sources of the Cagayan River, marching down the valley of that river and doubtless expediting the surrender to me of all the Philippine Military forces, which had fallen back toward Aparri. This equally gallant force of officers and men from our army also suffered incredible hardships, and when they reached Tuegugarao, the day on which my force relieved them, they were greatly in need of the medicines, food, shoes and clothing which had been sent from Manila in my flagship. I am sorry to add, that so far as I know, neither public praise nor official reward was ever given to this gallant force.

I am confident that you gentlemen all believe that we must have a large Navy. Of this I believe there can be no doubt. But I am anxious to express the opinion that we must also have a large army as well. A country of such great extent, with such vast sources of wealth, and with so much exposed sea coast, on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, needs an army in proportion to its interests; and one that is equal in efficiency to that of any army in the world. We have neither a large enough army, nor is the one we have equal in any way to the best in other countries. The measure of our military strength and effectiveness in 1898 is fortunately well known, for it required two months after the declaration of war before we were able to land 14,000 officers and men on the Island of Cuba, but 700 miles from the United States. And this force had but a paper organization, the Companies of the regiment and the regiments of the so-called Army Corps had never been together for drill and instruction. The newspaper of that day and the official reports and investigations which followed the war showed too clearly the unpreparedness and inefficiency of the force formed as a small army. The deaths among the Volunteers in the camps within the United States from typhoid fever and dysentery exceeded the number of those killed in Cuba.

When the Panama Canal shall be opened San Francisco will still be nearer to Tokyo than to New York, and I ask you gentlemen to carefully and seriously consider these facts and to use your exertions to have our army increased.

We have heard with pleasure from Governor Blanchard that the Legislature of Louisiana will appropriate $100,000 for a Memorial to the Confederate force from that State engaged in the Vicksburg Campaign, and I hope very much that Louisiana will follow Illinois and engrave the name of every officer and man upon imperishable plates of bronze.

The Toastmaster: The next toast is one which appeals closely to the heart of every gentleman present—

“The Blue and the Gray.”

I have the pleasure of introducing ex-Governor H. C. Warmoth of this city, who fought with the blue, but ever since the war has lived with the gray.

Governor Warmoth: Mr. Toastmaster, Governor Blanchard, Comrades of the Army of the Tennessee, Illinoisans, Ladies and Gentlemen, I think you have been very unfortunate in your selection of me to respond to the toast just announced. I have never quite recovered from the scare I received during the war, and when I am told that I must make a speech or respond to a toast, my nervous system gives away entirely, my feet and hands become as cold as ice, my heart goes like a triphammer and my mind becomes a misty blank.

If your committee had said nothing to me about it, but had sprung the toast on me, I could have gotten along much better. But I have sat here all evening by my good old friend, General Eugene Carr, who has been as happy as a boy without a care, while I have been suffering the tortures of the damned.

I have felt like we used to feel around Vicksburg, when we were detailed for some especially dangerous service and had to lie in the trenches for several hours awaiting the signal that was to send us to victory, to prison or to death.

But the time has come for me to do my part, and I can say with a full heart that I am glad to see my old comrades of the Vicksburg campaign again before the curtain falls.

Although a native of Illinois, I was a soldier in a Missouri regiment. I was the Lieutenant-Colonel of the 32d Missouri Infantry, which formed a part of General Frank P. Blair's brigade. During the campaign against Vicksburg, I was detailed for staff duty with Major-General John A. McClernand of Illinois, commanding the 13th Army corps. I was with him in all of our fights around Vicksburg, from the march from Milliken's Bend to Grand Gulf, Bruinsburg, Port Gibson, Champions Hill, Big Black and the assaults on the Vicksburg works on May 19th and 22d, when I was wounded and sent home. The events of that campaign are as vivid to-day as they were forty-three years ago.

I can see you marching through the rain, wading the water that inundated the country down to Smith's Plantation, back of New Carthage, from which point we were obliged to transport our troops by barge and skiff, two and a half miles to the levee, on which we marched down to Judge Perkins' Plantation, where we found dry land, and then arranged for our campaign against Grand Gulf and across the Mississippi River.

General Grant had caused a number of steamboats and gunboats to run the batteries at Vicksburg, so we could cross the river on them. It was my duty to superintend the crossing of our troops over the water from Smith Plantation to the levee. It was a nasty job. It rained continually, and the broken levee at New Carthage poured torrents of water through, flooding the whole country. You all remember General Osterhaus and his flat boat, on which he had a small gun, which he called the "opossum," with which he used to protect our fleet of skiffs and boats.

This reminds me of an incident which none of you ever knew. General McClernand was informed that a number of gunboats and steamboats would attempt to pass the batteries at Vicksburg on a certain night. We had succeeded in getting the Forest Queen and a number of Admiral Porter's fleet through several nights before, and Admiral Porter was pounding away at Grand Gulf every day. General McClernand ordered me to go down to New Carthage one night and send the Forest Queen up the river to Vicksburg to catch any disabled boats that might run by the batteries. It was raining hard and was as dark as Egypt. I had a good boat, with four good boatmen, and so I started off on my six-mile trip. I took a good fellow with me, who was a Brigadier-General, he had with him a full gallon keg of good whisky. This served to keep us from getting wet, if it did not keep us dry. After giving my orders to the Forest Queen we met at the landing an officer from Admiral Porter with a message for General McClernand, that if he could have four regiments of infantry, he could take Grand Gulf the next morning. I promised to deliver the message to General McClernand. My Brigadier and I started back about midnight to headquarters with all speed. The keg was between us, and under its inspiration we planned the campaign for the next morning. My Brigadier told me that he was the man to command that expedition and, after another drink, I concluded he should do it. I remember he told me he felt there were few men who understood how to write the English language better than he could. That he knew how to write a report and that if I would make General McClernand give him the command of that expedition he would take me along as his Chief of Staff. After another drink he told me that he would write a report that would make him a Major-General and me a Brigadier. I seized his hands and assured him that General McClernand always did just as I said about everything and that he should command that expedition. We sealed our pledge with another drink and by that time we were at the landing and were soon at the General's tent. Just as we, wet, muddy and drunk, stepped into his tent, boom, boom, went the batteries at Vicksburg. The General was hard at work at his desk; turning upon us, with his fierce eyes, he demanded to know if I had sent the Forest Queen up to Vicksburg. I assured him between hics that it was all right, but that I had something very much more important than that; that Admiral Porter had said that he would take Grand Gulf the next morning if he could have four regiments of infantry and I had arranged that General Benton should command the expedition and that I would go with him as his Chief of Staff and that the General would write a report that would make him a Major-General and me a Brigadier-General. That is as far as I ever got with my expedition. Most of you know McClernand. You know with what contempt he looked upon a drunken officer and how little he proposed to allow any expedition to go from him without his being on hand to command. His language was spectacular and perfumed, and my Brigadier and I reeled out of that tent to find sleep and repose, hats, boots and all, in my cot, till daylight found us with headache and heartache and in disgrace; so I never got to be a Brigadier-General.

It is a long time since 1863 and the Vicksburg campaign. Most of the men who were campaigners in these days have gone beyond, Lincoln and Davis, Grant and Lee, Sherman and Joe Johnston, Logan and Longstreet, Thomas and Bragg, McClelland and Pemberton, McPherson and Bowen, Hood and Schofield and the hundreds of great men who led the forces on either side have gone. But few of us remain to talk over the great deeds and great times in which we were active. I have lived in Louisiana for the past forty-four years. I helped the boys to reconstruct the state and bring it and them back into the Union. I know pretty near every man in the state who is worth knowing. I have seen some pretty hot times in the last forty-four years. We have groped and quarreled and fussed with each other, but the boys of gray and boys of blue get along now as well as anybody in this great big world. There is nothing but good feeling and patriotism among our people here. We are all for the old flag and the new nation. Governor Blanchard voiced the sentiment of his people perfectly to-night. I am proud of Governor Blanchard. He is a good American and he is all right. When he goes to Illinois I know you will give him a big time, not only on his own account, because he represents the old men of the old South, but he represents the young men and young women of the new South. All honor to them and to you, my comrades of the old Army of the Tennessee.

The Toastmaster: This closes our list of toasts for the evening, but it has been suggested that it would be a pleasure to everybody present to hear from the Commission—so without restricting him to any topic, I will call upon the President, Col. A. C. Matthews, who is at liberty to say anything which comes to his mind. Colonel Matthews needs no introduction.

Colonel Matthews: Mr. Toastmaster, since listening to the charming and able address of Governor Blanchard, and the speech of Mr. Justice Wilkin, of the Supreme Court of Illinois, and others, I am inclined to think the only good speech that can be made, at least by me, is no speech at all. Like the confident young lawyer, I am willing that the case should go to the jury without further argument, and without the instructions of the Court.

The asperities of the Civil War have been largely removed in all sections of the country. The humane expression of Mr. Lincoln, "With charity for all, and malice toward none," has done its great work. We from Illinois are satisfied with the loyalty of the people of Louisiana, and we hope they are satisfied with the loyalty of the people of Illinois.

I have been so much pleased with what has been said that I can only resolve that the War is over, and while I do not want it to happen again, we who had the good fortune to survive the conflict are not sure but what if it had to come—and many good people believe it had to come—it came at the right time. And now that it is over, let us all see to it hereafter that one flag shall be large enough for the best of us. The past cannot be disturbed; the differences between the sections have been settled by the arbitrament of war, from which no one has prayed an appeal. Let us place monuments at the graves of our fallen heroes, and look to the future interests of the great Republic, and of this great people.

Governor Blanchard has been so happy in his description of the wonderful resources of his State that many of our comrades have been carried off their feet, and doubtless wished for the moment that their lot had been cast in Louisiana, in place of the great Northwest. It seemed to me much of the time His Excellency was speaking that he was describing the wonderful resources of Illinois instead of Louisiana. Western and central Louisiana are countries of wonderful beauty and marvelous fertility; their equal can hardly be found on the face of the earth. It sometimes occurs to Illinois people that much of that fertility was washed down the great River from the rich fields of Illinois, and spread over your magnificent fields, greatly to their advantage. Many of our people think that Cuba, and the important islands of the seas, are deposits of the richness of the great valley of the Mississippi River. That great river, which can never be divided, washes the shores of Illinois for over 500 miles. The people living in this valley are, and ever should remain, one and undivided.

The commerce of the Mississippi Valley will find its way to the ocean on that great river sooner or later. When we stop with our cargoes of wheat, corn and pork, the products of our fertile prairies, at this magnificent City, may we always meet as friends, as we have on this occasion. Let Louisiana, located at the mouth of the great valley, look after the affairs of state in this part of the vineyard, and Illinois will attend to them in the upper end of the valley, and in the region of the Great Lakes. What we want, and what destiny points that we will in the end have, is a deep waterway down the great river from the Lakes of the great North to the Gulf of Mexico, of sufficient capacity to carry the product of this great valley to the markets of the world.

On the part of the Commission, through you, Governor Blanchard, I wish to extend to the people of Louisiana our hearty thanks for this cordial greeting.

Rapid transit in a commercial and personal way, that brings our people together, will do more to bind them together, as one people, than any other one cause.

In conclusion, friends and guests of the Commission, I wish to thank you for this splendid banquet. Our journey thus far has been so pleasant together that I know you could not feel in any manner indebted to us, and hence the greater surprise and the greater pleasure, in being invited to dine with you. It must have been the inspiration of that veteran Toastmaster, who sits on your left, Mr. President, Major Blodgett of Chicago, one of the "greatest cities on earth." In your number, Illinois is represented by the Executive, Legislative and Judicial Departments, and outside of the State, but really a part of the State, we number among our friends Mrs. John A. Logan.

of the capital of the Great Republic—she whose husband did so much to restore the Union and insure its perpetuity, not only on the field, but in the Halls of Congress—who, with her daughter, is with us to give life and spirit to the occasion. If General Logan had lived in the days of Napoleon he would have been a Marshal Ney, and would have commanded the Old Guard. The sound of his voice on any field was worth ten thousand men.

Governor Blanchard, with his gracious wife, and Governor Warmouth and his charming family are now numbered among our friends, and to one and all, on the part of the Commission, I thank you for your presence, and your words of cheer and kindness, on this interesting occasion.

The Toastmaster: This ends our entertainment and, wishing you all a very pleasant good night, I declare the banquet closed.

The entire party spent Monday, Oct. 29th, in the enjoyment of the hospitalities of the Crescent City. The First Infantry Illinois National Guard put up an evening parade and its band gave a concert in one of the beautiful parks.

Promptly at 8 o'clock p. m., the Illinois Central trains moved out for the homeward journey. Upon arrival at Memphis, reception committees welcomed the visitors there. The day was here spent in the enjoyment of the hospitalities of the city and particularly that of the Tennessee and Chickasaw clubs.

The First Infantry made a street parade and the band gave a concert in the city park. The regiment was entertained as the particular guests of the remaining members of the once famed Chickasaw Guard, who had received the courtesies of the First Infantry nearly thirty years before while visiting Chicago.

The Illinois-Vicksburg Military Park Commission

TO COLONEL JOSEPH B. SANBORN,
Commanding 1st Infantry I.N.G.

SIR,

In the report of our Commission, made in accordance with law to His Excellency, Governor Charles S. Deneen, on December 17th, 1906, reference is made to the service of your Command during the exercises of dedication of the Illinois Monuments and Markers in the National Military Park at Vicksburg Mississippi, on October 25, 26, and 27, 1906, in the following paragraph:

"The dedication exercises were greatly enhanced by the presence and services of the First Infantry Illinois National Guard. We desire to acknowledge our thanks to the citizens of Chicago whose generous contributions made it possible for this command to perform this tour of duty. To Colonel J. B. Sanborn and the officers and men of the regiment and its magnificent band, we desire especially to extend our deep sense of obligation. Pride swelled the heart of every Illinois veteran at Jackson, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Memphis as they looked upon this splendid body of young soldiers. Their discipline and training when under arms elicited plaudits of approval everywhere, and their gentlemanly conduct when off duty, and in the streets of these cities, was commented upon by citizens generally. Their conduct was worthy of all praise and has added another laurel to the garland of Illinois soldiers."

We, the Commissioners, take pleasure in sending this letter to you with our personal signatures attached, as an additional token of acknowledgment of our sincere appreciation of the services of your Command.

Very respectfully,

A. C. Matthews President

Francis A. Riddle

H. S. Buchanan

Carroll Moore

H. M. Trumble Vice President

C. H. Noble

Geo. S. Durfee

T. B. O'Neal Treasurer

Charles E. Koch Secretary

GEN. JOHN A. LOGAN AND STAFF.
